While Grace (Jennifer Finnigan, "Tyrant") and Harris (Ian Anthony Dale, "Hawaii Five-0") work to maintain civility in the hangar, Liam (Charlie Row, "Red Band Society") and Darius (Santiago Cabrera, "Big Little Lies") continue to fight both RE/SYST and the impending galactic threat. Loyalties will be challenged as humanity sits on the brink of Earth's potential extinction. Learn if order can continue to suppress chaos when a new episode of "Salvation" airs Monday, July 16, on CBS.

Impending doom: Multiple threats plague season 2 of 'Salvation'

By K.A. Taylor
TV Media

Science fiction is increasingly becoming science fact. The dreams of golden era writers and directors, while perhaps a bit exaggerated, are more prevalent now than ever before. Space exploration is advancing, with multiple groups and organizations vowing to establish a new home on Mars. This might explain why so many of us are captivated by intergalactic what-ifs, and why many summer TV viewers are tuning in to the sci-fi drama "Salvation," now in its second season, with a new episode airing Monday, July 16, on CBS.

"Salvation" takes place in present-day America, using modern technology and a dash of fictional liberty to set the stage. Liam Cole (Charlie Row, "Red Band Society") is a highly intellectual MIT graduate student whose research has been devoted to mapping the unknown parts of space. What Liam didn't anticipate, however, was that his program would uncover a serious, impending threat to the entire planet: an asteroid set to collide with Earth in 186 days. Anxious to get the data to the government, Liam reaches out to his professor, but after the professor goes missing, he turns to his one other option: scientific genius Darius Tanz (Santiago Cabrera, "Big Little Lies"), a recent speaker at MIT who's still — thankfully — in town.

Armed with this new, time-sensitive information, Darius and Liam head to the Pentagon and deliver the news to the Department of Defense's deputy secretary, Harris Edwards (Ian Anthony Dale, "Hawaii Five-0"). Harris and DOD public affairs press secretary Grace Barrows (Jennifer Finnigan, "Tyrant") have no choice but to let these two skilled scientists into a covert operation called Sampson, revealing that the government was already well aware of the threat but had chosen to keep it hidden in order to prevent mass pandemonium.

The thrilling conclusion of season 1 saw the president reinstated, TESS's source code given up to RE/SYST and the group divided, awaiting the impending likely demise of the East Coast. Harris and Grace, along with the rest of the selected crew, are all stowed away within a hangar, ready to board the Ark if necessary, while Darius and Liam work from a secure location to try to determine another way to prevent Earth's destruction.

With the second season now underway, it's clear to see that the danger is compounding. RE/SYST is threatening nuclear action, the asteroid's imminent collision continues to present a dire outlook for humanity, and neither situation can be resolved without global cooperation. Meanwhile, Harris and Grace are struggling to quell potential chaos within the hangar as the newly informed citizens learn to accept their fate.

In a recent interview with KCAL9 CBS Los Angeles, Finnigan touched on the growing tension of a disaster-bent narrative. The actress notes that, while "the show is mostly about this impending asteroid — the sort of scaring, impending doom of that," people are "still living [their lives]," as the truth makes it difficult for people to accept, which leads them to set out a course of action that reveals what's truly important to them. Now that "the public knows" and "the secret is out ... people go bananas." An event such as this will no doubt "bring out the best" or to "bring out the worst [in us]," but ultimately, Finnigan believes that the most realistic depiction — something that the series strives to exhibit — is where the best and worst in us collide.

A large part of the show's success is thanks to the popular disaster genre. Most prominent in film, the genre was born in 1901 with a silent film called "Fire!", though "Salvation" is likely drawing more so from the golden era of disaster cinema, circa the 1970s. Films such as "Airport" (1970),

"Earthquake" (1974) and "Meteor" (1979) gave audiences a thirst for the point at which science fiction and dramatic thrillers meet. In the late 1990s, a new wave of disaster films arrived that, like "Salvation," saw our biggest threat coming from the stars. "Independence Day" (1996), "Deep Impact" (1998) and "Armageddon" (1998) are just three of the space-based dramatic thrillers that signified this once niche subcategory of the genre growing increasingly prominent.

Not constricted by the two-to-three-hour runtime of its big-screen forerunners, "Salvation" provides deeper insight into the human reactions and cost of catastrophic events, rather than placing emphasis on fantastic explosions, tidal waves and meteor collisions. Despite the imminence of the threat, audiences find themselves more compelled by the characters' narratives than a desire to witness destruction, which is a refreshing take on a genre increasingly oversaturated with CGI and mass destruction.

As season 2 of "Salvation" progresses, the price of loyalty will increase in value. As the asteroid continues its journey toward Earth, Harris, Grace, Liam and Darius will do all they can to try and maintain a sense of calm while uncovering a means by which disaster might ultimately be prevented. If all else fails, there is, of course, the Ark, but that will mean bidding a tearful adieu to two beloved characters. Find out the fates of our daring heroes and the planet itself, as "Salvation" continues with a new episode airing Monday, July 16, on CBS.

Dwayne Johnson in "Rampage"

Rampage

George, an albino gorilla living in a wildlife preserve near San Diego, is exposed to a mutagenic pathogen that causes him to both grow larger at an alarming rate and become more aggressive. His handler, Davis (Johnson), learns that the pathogen was developed as a biological weapon, but after government agents take the massive gorilla into captivity, George escapes and heads to Chicago, where the company that developed the pathogen is emitting a signal to attract the animal. When two other beasts that have also been exposed, a wolf and a crocodile, also arrive in the city, a massive battle breaks out between the three titanic animals and the military forces trying to save the city.

Director: Brad Peyton. Stars: Dwayne Johnson, Naomie Harris, Malin Akerman, Jeffrey Dean Morgan, Joe Manganiello. 2018. 107 min. Action.

'Real' life

New housewives join the Orange County gang

By Andrew Warren
TV Media

'Real' life: From the West Coast to the East Coast with stops in between, the "Real Housewives" franchise is definitely one of reality TV's most shining success stories, and the series that started it all is still going strong. "The Real Housewives of Orange County" premiered in 2006 and almost immediately became a huge hit as audiences tuned in for a little peek at the lifestyles of a group of wealthy ladies.

Orange County's leading ladies return for a 13th season on Monday, July 16, on Bravo, with three of the housewives no longer around. Lydia McLaughlin, Meghan King Edmonds and Peggy Sulahian all stepped away from the series after the last season and won't be appearing this time around, but Shannon Beador, Vicki Gunvalson, Tamra Judge and Kelly Dodd are all back for more.

Those four are joined this season by a pair of newcomers. Gina Kirschenheiter hails from Long Island and, after three years in the OC, is still adjusting to the California way of life. With her husband living and working in Los Angeles through the week and only coming home on weekends, she finds herself living what feels like the life of a single mom — and also re-evaluating what she wants from her marriage.

Also new this season is Ohio native Emily Simpson, a woman who came from nothing and became a successful attorney, party planner and mother. Hers is a real rags-to-riches story — even more so when she reveals the difficulties she went through to have her three children.

Like its many spinoffs, "The Real Housewives of Orange County" is a glamorous — and often not-so-glamorous — peek into the lives of a group of well-off women. The new season, with two new faces, premieres Monday, July 16, on Bravo.

Robin remembered: It takes a special kind of person to make the whole world laugh, and Robin Williams was one of the few who could do that. The comedian and actor took his own life in 2014, but his legacy lives on in his countless fans, and HBO is taking an in-depth look at his life and what made him tick.

"Robin Williams: Come Inside My Mind" premieres Monday, July 16, on the premium channel, and peels back the layers to find out how Williams became one of world's most beloved personalities. From his youth in the

own words. Through interviews, home movies and onstage footage from throughout his life, a door is opened into Williams' mind to reveal his creative process and the things that drove him to the height of success.

Other actors and comedians who worked with Williams over the years also provide tributes and insider anecdotes about their departed friend. David Letterman ("My Next Guest Needs No Introduction with David Letterman"), Billy Crystal ("City Slickers," 1991), Whoopi Goldberg, ("The View"), Steve Martin ("Roxanne," 1987), Eric Idle ("Monty Python and the Holy Grail," 1975) and Pam Dawber ("Mork & Mindy") all provide insight into the late comedian, as does his son, Zak.

Whether it was his hilarious standup, his charming voice work as the Genie in "Aladdin" (1992), his dramatic turn in films such as "One Hour Photo" (2002) or his TV work in "Mork & Mindy," Robin Williams was a multifaceted comedian and actor who was loved around the world. Take an in-depth journey to discover what made him tick in "Robin Williams: Come Inside My Mind," on HBO on Monday, July 16.

Down but not out: Roseanne may be out, but "Roseanne" is still a go at ABC. By now, most people who fell in love all over again with the revived sitcom will have heard about its cancellation following controversy surrounding star Roseanne Barr, but there's good news for fans of the Conner family: a spinoff has been ordered straight to series by ABC.

"The Conners" doesn't have a premiere date yet, but early production has begun on the 10-episode series, with all of the main cast slated to return. Sara Gilbert ("The Talk"), who was integral to getting "Roseanne" brought back two decades after its original finale, will once again be joined by John Goodman ("Argo," 2012), Laurie Metcalf ("Lady Bird," 2017), Alicia Goranson ("Boys Don't Cry," 1999) and Michael Fishman ("A.I. Artificial Intelligence," 2001) as the iconic Conner family.

How the new series will deal with Barr's absence remains to be seen, but the news release announcing the spinoff does drop a few clues, explaining that "the Conner family who, after a sudden turn of events, are forced to face the daily struggles of life in Lanford in a way they never have before."

"Roseanne" remains a much-loved series, but it remains to be seen if the Conner family can find the same kind of success without its matriarch.

Q&A Hollywood

By Adam Thomlison
TV Media

Q: I'm a great fan of "If Loving You Is Wrong." Can you please tell me when it will be returning this year? I can't wait to see it.

A: I'm afraid I can't — OWN is taking its time dishing out renewals for its shows. I can, however, double-speculate.

First I have to speculate about whether it will be renewed for another round, which seems fairly likely at this point. OWN (otherwise known as the Oprah Winfrey Network) clearly enjoys being in the Tyler Perry business: "If Loving You Is Wrong" is one of the multiple hit shows and films that have come out of writer/director/producer/actor Perry's brain in recent years.

Though "If Loving You Is Wrong" took a bit of a dip in the ratings this season — it shed about 300,000 viewers over the course of season 3, and season 3 was already drawing fewer than season 2 — its numbers are still strong for a cable show. Indeed, the only OWN show that's doing better is "The Haves and the Have Nots," which also happens to be a Tyler Perry show.

In other encouraging news, none of the stars have suddenly fled to other shows since the third season ended in March. All this makes it fairly likely that the show will be picked up for a fourth season.

Q: I hear "Code Black" has been canceled. Please tell me it's not true, or at least tell me that the powers that saw fit to cancel this great show were considerate enough to have given it an ending, and not just leave us hanging.

A: The way you've phrased your question means I can phrase my answer like it's good news: yes, you will get a satisfying ending to your show, which is in fact canceled.

CBS made the decision to cancel "Code Black" in late May, shortly after the show's third season began.

However, much like you, the show's writers met the cancellation with a sort of grim fatalism. Series creator Michael Seitzman said on Twitter that they sensed the end was coming and they acted accordingly.

"We always suspected this would be the last season. We wrote it to end that way."

That is to say, the current season will end in a satisfying, loose end-tying sort of way.

TVSeriesFinale.com, which makes a business of tracking the fate of TV shows, got pretty cute about its explanation for the cancellation: "The patient eventually succumbed to acute ratings anemia."

That's cute because it was a medical show, and because the show's ratings have been dropping since it started.

Q: Apparently, Betty White was the first woman to win an Emmy for hosting a game show. What game show was it?

A: If it weren't for the groundbreaking nature of Betty White's hosting role, "Just Men" would be completely forgotten today.

But it did, as you say, give her the opportunity to become the first woman to win an Emmy for hosting a game show, and so the short-lived show entered the history books.

By most accounts it didn't deserve to.

It lasted only three months before being canceled in early 1983, and it was pretty poorly reviewed while it was on. The Washington Post was particularly vicious, calling it "the litmus test for people who think the TV show that can make them physically ill hasn't been invented."

Yes, the show deserves some praise for breaking one particular gender barrier, but it didn't do feminism any other favors.

It was (as you can guess by the title) a battle-of-the-sexes sort of show — two female contestants competed to guess at questions about the lives of a panel of seven male celebrities. (One very dated question, posed to "WKRP in Cincinnati" star Tim Reid: "Tim, is your mother a swinger?")

Indeed, though she went on to win an Emmy for it, the Post argued that White was "terribly demeaned by this role."

Fortunately, she would go on to fill her awards shelf with more statues for other roles, so she clearly deserves her place in the history books.

with "Savannah" launching last year.

Like the original "Southern Charm," the Georgia-based spinoff chronicles the personal and professional lives of a close-knit group of elites. Viewers will spend time with a globetrotting fashionista who's come to learn that there's no place like home, and a modern southern belle, among others.

The second season sees the addition of two newcomers in Hagood Cox, a Renaissance woman and entrepreneur, and Brandon Branch, an interior designer with a penchant for elaborate dinner and cocktail parties. The new additions are looking to stir the pot, but whether they will be embraced by the five returning socialites remains to be seen.

Real talk

By Francis Babin
TV Media

Southern hospitality: Southern culture is fascinating. The history, architecture and cuisine are all unique and worthy of a thorough examination, and, of course, a reality TV show. On Monday, July 16, the rich and powerful of Savannah, Georgia, are back and more ambitious than ever in a new season of "Southern Charm Savannah" on Bravo.

When "Southern Charm" debuted in 2014, the series gave us a closer look at the modern aristocracy of Charleston, South Carolina. Colorful characters, southern belles and charismatic gentlemen — we saw it all. This southern journey proved to be a great success: "Charm" went on to produce five seasons and counting, and ultimately gave way to two spinoffs,
