'Chicago Med' returns after last season's cliffhanger finale

By Jacqueline Spendlove

s the daughter of longtime Trekkies, I've been indoctrinated in the world of Star Trek for pretty much my entire life. My parents' basement is peppered with posters and action figures from the shows, they know every episode of "The Original Series" practically by heart, and they even carted me along to a Star Trek convention with them when I was around 7 or 8 years old. It was a big deal in my house long before it really became a big deal in general, which it undoubtedly has.

Between television series and movies, Star Trek has seen 19 different installments on the screen, and that number's about to become a nice round 20. The longawaited "Star Trek: Discovery" premieres Sunday, Sept. 24, on CBS, after which the remainder of the series will stream weekly on CBS All Access.

The franchise first made itself known to the world with creator Gene Roddenberry's original series in 1966, with William Shatner in the lead role as Capt. James T. Kirk. Admittedly, the original had its share of cheesiness, and the sets and special effects didn't hold a candle to what its later scions would have, but it was light years (no pun intended) ahead of its time even then.

"Discovery" marks Star Trek's return to the small screen — it's been more than 15 years since the 2001 premiere of "Star Trek: Enterprise," which wrapped in 2005. Chronologically, that series was the earliest, created as a prequel to "The Original Series," and so it remains. "Discovery" is set between the two - roughly a decade before Kirk and Co. set out on their five-year mission.

Harry Potter baddie Jason Isaacs heads up the USS Discovery as Capt. Gabriel Lorca, with Malaysian actress Michelle Yeoh ("Crouching Tiger, Hidden Dragon," 2000) playing Philippa Georgiou, captain of the USS Shenzhou, another Starfleet ship. As for which of these is the lead in "Discovery." the answer, surprisingly, is neither.

While Star Trek always makes use of a strong supporting cast, the captain has always been the main protagonist. Not so in "Discovery." Sonequa Martin-Green ("The Walking Dead") takes the lead in the new series, but, in a marked departure from the franchise norm, she's not the captain - she's the first officer.

Raised by the Vulcan Sarek (James Frain, "Gotham"), Lt. Cmdr. Michael Burnham (Martin-Green) is the first human to attend the Vulcan Learning Center and Vulcan Science Academy. We're seeing a younger Sarek in "Discovery," but we've met him before; he's Spock's (Leonard Nimoy) father, first introduced in "The Original Series." If you're wondering why the heck Spock never mentioned an adoptive sister before, be patient — executive producer Alex Kurtzman has affirmed that all will be explained, and it will fit into the canon of the show.

Canon is important with a franchise like Star Trek, with its massive and fervent following. Unsurprisingly, "Discovery" is one of the most highly anticipated shows of the year, and showrunners are acutely aware of the long legacy they have to live up to. There's a fierce fan base to impress, while also drawing in viewers with no prior Star Trek immersion.

"We're very, very attentive to the divergence between audience bases. I think we know that there are folks like us who know way too much, and folks who know very little or not at all," executive producer Akiva Goldsman told Trek Movie in a San Diego Comic-Con interview. "We're trying to be welcoming to people who have never seen an episode of Trek, but also really delightful to those of us who can't stop seeing them."

Burnham's personal story has an important connection to the meat of this first season, which centers on a cold war between the Klingons and the United Federation of Planets. If you're looking for the Klingons of yore, however, you'll need to adjust your expectations. They've gotten a full overhaul in "Discovery," and, as one of Star Trek's most iconic alien species, the change has tongues wagging.

Relax, though. You may recall that the Klingons look wildly less Klingon-y in "The Original Series" than they did in every other Star Trek incarnation down the line, and we all got right on board with those telltale forehead ridges and pointy teeth. The new Klingons are ridgier than ever, and hairless (RIP, Worf's ponytail). They come in a range of distinctly non-human hues (gray, mauve-ish, jet black, etc.) and look decidedly more alien all around.

Another element that sets "Discovery" apart from its forebears is its long-form storytelling. It's much more serialized, with stories, conflicts and character arcs developing from one week to the next, rather than wrapping up in neat, self-contained episodes. The freshman season is split into two chapters, with the first ending in November and the second beginning in January.

With almost two years gone since CBS first announced that a new Star Trek series was coming our way, "Star Trek: Discovery" has been a long time coming, and, judging by the trailers, it won't disappoint. Catch the premiere when it airs Sunday, Sept. 24 on CBS, after which the remainder of the series will stream weekly on CBS All Access.

The Hitman's Bodyguard

Once one of the most sought-after professional bodyguards in the European Union, Michael Bryce (Reynolds) has lived the past few years in disgrace after one of his clients was assassinated on his watch. He's called back to duty when all of the witnesses being called to the trial of a brutal dictator at the International Criminal Court keep turning up dead. His new job is to safely transport a former assassin (Jackson) to the court, but the two men have a long history of being on the opposite ends of gun barrels from each other and need to figure out how to put their complicated past behind them. Director: Patrick Hughes.

Stars: Ryan Reynolds, Samuel L. Jackson, Elodie Yung, Gary Oldman, Salma Hayek.

From coast to coast: Showtime's 'Ray Donovan' moving from Hollywood to New York

By Andrew Warren TV Media

From coast to coast: Wow, what a season that was. Showtime's "Ray Donovan" just wrapped up its fifth season at the end of October, but before the finale had even hit screens, the drama had already been renewed for a sixth, and there are some pretty huge changes incoming for

Don't worry — if you're still catching up on the most recent season, there won't be any major spoilers here. The planning for next year is still in its early stages, but the biggest news is that the series is making a big crosscountry move. "Ray Donovan" has been set in Hollywood since the very beginning, but when the opening credits roll next year, the show's titular "fixer" will have moved to New York.

Liev Schreiber ("Lee Daniels' The Butler," 2013) stars as Ray, a Boston native who works for a powerful law firm. As a fixer, he's the guy who handles activities that aren't entirely on the level — payoffs, bribes, threats whatever it takes to make sure a client gets the desired result.

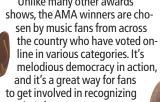

Of course, his clients aren't the only ones with problems. Ray's father (Jon Voight, "Transformers," 2007) is an ex-con whose scheming threatens the successful life that Ray has built, while his brothers, Terry (Eddie Marsan, "Sherlock Holmes," 2009) and Brendan (Dash Mihok, "The Day After Tomorrow," 2004), have their own issues that also keep intruding into his precariously balanced life.

The shift to the East coast should result in more than just a change of scenery. The Hollywood setting has been important to the show's story, and a new city means plenty of new stories to tell. "Fashion, media, finance, theater, culture. It's going to present new challenges for Ray Donovan, which mean new opportunities for us as dramatists," showrunner David Hollander said in a statement announcing the new season.

"Ray Donovan" has been a big hit for Showtime, and the change in setting should help with keeping it fresh. Expect the sixth season in the summer of 2018.

Celebrating music: Dust off those dancing shoes — a big night in music is here. The threehour American Music Awards hit ABC Sunday, Nov. 19, broadcast live from the Microsoft Theater in Los Angeles and bringing the biggest voices in music together for a

Of course, no music awards show would be complete without might be headed to daytime. The performances, and this year's AMAs don't disappoint on that front, with a lineup of performers that includes Diana Ross, Selena Gomez and Christina Aguilera, who is paying a special tribute to the late Whitney Houston and her hit 1992 film "The Bodyguard," which was nominated for two Academy Awards.

This year's nominees for the coveted Artist of the Year award are five powerful acts with fans all over the world. Kendrick Lamar, Ed Sheeran, Bruno Mars, Drake and duo The Chainsmokers are all competing for the title.

As for the New Artist of the Year category, the nominees are James Arthur, Niall Horan, Julia Michaels, Post Malone and duo Rae Sremmurd. Other categories include Favorite Country Album, Favorite Adult Contemporary Artist, Video of the Year, Collaboration of the Year and even Tour of the Year.

Q: My husband and I were just wondering why "The Sting" is not being shown on any of the networks. We would love to be able to see this movie again without having to pay a fee!

A: It can be incredibly frustrating that network programmers don't have to explain their decisions to us. It's certainly fair they're just trying to run businesses, after all — but because of this fact, I have no definitive answer for why we don't see the genre-defining 1973 heist classic "The Sting" more often.

I can offer a couple of completely contradictory theories, though.

It's possible programmers think we're tired of it. Based on your question, they'd be wrong, but the fact is that once upon a time, this movie was unavoidable on TV. Having killed at the box office and cleaned up at the Oscars in the mid-'70s, "The Sting" was a cultural phenomenon by the time the '80s rolled around, and it's certainly had more than its share of airtime since then. Perhaps programmers think it needs a break.

A related theory: it might be a victim of its own success in a different way. "The Sting" has basically become the template for the heist movie, and it has led to a huge number of popular successors, such as "Reservoir Dogs" (1992) and "Ocean's Eleven" (2001). (Note that I say "The Sting" popularized the heist-movie template -"Ocean's Eleven" is, of course, a remake of an even older movie, but one that wasn't nearly as popular or influential.) The airwaves these days are full of subsequent heist movies that owe a debt to "The Sting," but ones that may also be squeezing it out

There's also an opposite theory: no one remembers "The Sting." That's a bit of an exaggerated take on a recent story in the New York Times, which said that the Newman's Own brand is having a brand-awareness crisis because the new generation of consumers is "too young to be aware of the entertainer." If hotshot marketing people figure that the younger generation doesn't know Paul Newman, it follows that they wouldn't care about his movies, either, however classic they are.

Yet another contradictory theory: it's currently too popular. Again, this doesn't make sense in relation to the rest of this answer, but the Cineplex theater chain in Canada believes there's enough demand for the film that it brought it back for a limited theatrical run late last year. If the studio that owns the film rights believes it can get more interest from other theaters, it won't be too keen to, as you say in your question, give it away for free on

Q: Is it true Roy Scheider ad-libbed the "bigger boat" line in Jaws?

A: It's true that the line wasn't in the script, but "Jaws" (1975) star Roy Scheider didn't come up with it on his own. "You're gonna need a bigger boat" was actually a complaint that many of the crew members had been making to the producers about the little barge they were given to film the horror classic's openwater scenes.

Script writer Carl Gottleib told the story to The Hollywood Reporter: "[Richard] Zanuck and [David] Brown were very stingy producers, so everyone kept telling them, 'You're gonna need a bigger boat.' It became a catchphrase for anytime anything went wrong — if lunch was late or the swells were rocking the camera, someone would say, 'You're gonna need a bigger Scheider apparently dropped the line several times during filming, but the instance that made the final cut — when Scheider's character first sets eyes on the monstrous shark they're trying to catch from the deck of their little fishing boat — was deemed to be perfect.

However, Gottleib is still unwilling to give Scheider all the credit for it. "It was so appropriate and so real and it came at the right moment, thanks to Verna Fields's editing."

Convicted murderer Christopher McCowen fights for his freedom as he asserts his innocence in a new interview in "20/20," airing Friday, Nov. 24, on ABC. This marks McCowen's first broadcast interview since being convicted of murdering Christa Worthington in Cape Cod 15 years ago.

David Muir, anchor of "20/20"

Valerian and the City of a Thousand Planets

In the 28th century, countless different species from planets spread across the galaxy all come together on Alpha, a space station that serves as a home for millions of creatures. Valerian (DeHaan) and Laureline (Delevingne) are members of a special police division mandated to preserve the peace throughout the universe, but when the usually happy-go-lucky Valerian has a dream that seems to be a harbinger of events that are actually happening, the long-held peace that's held Alpha together is threatened like never before. Director: Luc Besson. Stars: Dane DeHaan, Cara Delevingne, Clive Owen, Ethan Hawke, 2017, 137 min, Action.
