Comedy meets sci-fi when 'The Orville' premieres on Fox

By Kyla Brewer TV Media

hen the USS Enterprise embarked on its "five-year" mission in "Star Trek" on NBC in 1966, a series set in space was a novelty. Nowadays, prime time is rife with thrilling intergalactic adventures, almost all of them bleak. Yet, there's a new series on the event horizon that aims to inject a little humor into the sci-fi genre.

Seth MacFarlane ("Family Guy") stars as newly minted starship captain Ed Mercer, who assumes command of the USS Orville in the premiere of "The Orville," airing Sunday, Sept. 10, on Fox. The award-winning actor, writer and comedian also created the new live-action comedy, which offers viewers a look at the lighter side of space exploration.

Much like the original "Star Trek," "The Orville" chronicles the adventures of the crew of a starship as it carries out various missions and encounters all sorts of alien beings, both friend and foe. While the show has also drawn comparisons to the 1999 bigscreen comedy "Galaxy Quest" and even MacFarlane's animated hit "Family Guy," it's being billed by many as a spoof of the Star Trek franchise.

In fact, at this summer's Television Critics Association press tour, there was a lot of banter about whether "The Orville" relies too heavily on the Star Trek franchise. Some critics even publicly questioned Fox executive Dana Walden whether she's worried they'll be sued by CBS Television Studios, which holds the Star Trek TV rights. However, while the new Fox series undeniably borrows from the Star Trek franchise, it sets a completely different tone with its sense of humor. During a TCA panel, MacFarlane expressed his appreciation for Star Trek, and explained why he took a lighthearted approach with "The Orville."

"I'm tired of being told everything is going to be grim and dystopian," MacFarlane said. "I miss the hopeful side of science fiction."

Even the new "Star Trek: Discovery," set to premiere on CBS Sept. 24, has a somber, big-screen feel. Set in 2417, "The Orville" offers viewers an alternative to the current dismal trend in science fiction space adventures, and MacFarlane has lined up a talented cast to keep things funny. Adri-anne Palicki ("Friday Night Lights") stars as Kelly Grayson, Mercer's ex-wife and new first officer. Their strained relationship often makes for awkward moments among the crew. Mercer's best friend is helmsman Gordon Malloy, played by Scott Grimes ("ER"). "24" alum Penny Johnson Jerald portrays Dr. Claire Finn, one of the Planetary Union's best doctors.

Peter Macon ("Shameless") appears as Lt. Commander Bortus, an alien from a unique single-sex species, while Chad Coleman ("The Walking Dead") can be seen as Klyden, Bortus's mate. Mark Jackson ("The Royal Today") takes on the role of Isaac, an artificial life form from a machine society. The crew also includes navigator John LaMarr (J. Lee, "Family Guy") and inexperienced security officer Alara Kitan (Halston Sage, "How to Rock"). Comedy icon Norm MacDonald ("Saturday Night Live") lends his voice to Yaphit, a gelatinous creature.

Larry Joe Campbell ("According to Jim"), Victor Garber ("Alias") and Brian George ("The Big Bang Theory") are set to appear in recurring roles.

MacFarlane and his team have lined up an impressive roster of guest stars for the first season, including Academy Award winner Charlize Theron ("Monster," 2003). In July, MacFarlane announced via Twitter that Holland Taylor ("The Practice") and Jeffrey Tambor ("Transparent") would guest star as well, calling the combination a "perfect storm of comedic genius."

There's just as much talent working behind the scenes of "The Orville." Big-budget Hollywood director Jon Favreau ("Iron Man," 2008) directed the series debut and also serves as an executive producer along with David A. Goodman ("Family Guy"), Jason Clark ("Cosmos: A Spacetime Odyssey") and Liz Heldons ("Deception"). Brannon Braga is an executive producer of "The Orville," too. Interestingly, he's best known for his work on the Star Trek franchise, having been a key player in three of its four modern series.

Hopefully, other Star Trek producers, stars and fans will see "The Orville" as an homage to the popular series, and welcome it much in the way they received "Galaxy Quest" with open arms. Incidentally, "The Orville" may not be the only comedy headed for the stars. It was recently announced that a television reboot of "Galaxy Quest" is back in the works. Initially announced by Paramount Television in 2015, the project was put on the back burner after the death of Alan Rickman ("Harry Potter and the Philosopher's Stone" 2001), one of the stars of the original film. In August, the Hollywood Reporter broke the news that writer-actor-comedian Paul Scheer had been tapped to write the new Amazon series. While few other details have been confirmed, it looks as if Tim Allen, who also starred in the original, may be available for a TV version of "Galaxy Quest" now that his ABC comedy "Last Man Standing" has been canceled.

As for the crew of the USS Or-ville, their adventure begins when they are tasked with delivering supplies to a science vessel. What's supposed to be a routine mission takes a dangerous turn when they're ambushed by an alien race known as the Krill, who want them to hand over an experimental device that can cause time to accelerate. Tune in to "The Orville," Sunday, Sept. 10, on Fox to see how it all begins in the first of the two-part premiere, which continues Sept. 17.

The Mummy

While on a mission in Irag's desert, U.S. Army Sat. Nick Morton (Cruise) stumbles upon an ancient Egyptian tomb. With the help of archeologist Jenny Halsey (Wallis), he begins to explore the ruins, and it isn't long before they uncover a sarcophagus inside a pool of mercury. While they're transporting the artifact to England, deadly supernatural phenomena begin to assail the plane, causing a crash that kills nearly everyone on board, and unleashing upon the world an evil that the ancient Egyptians had sealed away millennia

Back in action: Acclaimed comedy 'Broad City' cranks up the laughs

By Andrew Warren TV Media

Back in action: Hold on tight. One of the most acclaimed comedies on TV is back, and it boasts an incredible lineup of guest stars. Comedy Central's "Broad City" maintains an impressive 98 percent fresh rating on review aggregator site Rotten Tomatoes, and its success has drawn in all manner of high-profile guest stars for its fourth season, premiering Wednesday, Sept. 13.

Abbi Jacobson ("Neighbors 2: Sorority Rising," 2016) and Ilana Glazer ("Rough Night," 2017) created the show as a web series back in 2009, and both return to star in the comedy that has made them famous. "Broad City" follows the two women as they go about their day-to-day lives in the Big Apple, trying to "make it" in their careers and in their love lives as they navigate life's many currents and undertows.

But what about the guest stars? Season 4 has a fair few. Actor, singer, songwriter and TV host RuPaul ("RuPaul's Drag Race") joins the cast for a multi-episode recurring role this season. Other guests lined up include Steve Buscemi ("Boardwalk Empire"), comedians Susie Essman ("Curb Your Enthusiasm") and Mike Birbiglia ("Orange Is the New Black"), Amy Ryan ("The Wire"), Wanda Sykes ("Black-ish") and Jane Curtin ("3rd Rock from the Sun").

Even country music superstar Shania Twain is set to make a cameo appearance sometime this season; fans of the show know that her name pops up occasionally, and now her face is finally popping up, too.

It started out as the little web series that could, and became one of the most acclaimed comedies on television. A fifth season has already been greenlit, and the fourth gets underway this week. "Broad City" returns Wednesday, Sept. 13, on Comedy Central.

A 'Better' comedy: What could be better than the return of "Better Things?" Not much, I think. The comedy returns to FX for a second season Thursday, Sept. 14, with 10 new episodes a n d loads more laughs.

Series creator and star Pamela Adlon ("Californication"), who won an Emmy for her voice acting in the animated series "King of the Hill" back in 2002, was nominated for another Emmy for her performance in the first season of "Better Things," which she created with comedian Louis C.K. ("Louie"). She stars as Sam Fox, a divorced single mother struggling to raise her three daughters while also dealing with the pressures of Hollywood.

For the second season, Adlon steps up to the plate and directs all 10 episodes — she directed only two last season. Mikey Madison ("Imposters"), Hannah Alligood ("Allegiant," 2016) and Olivia Edward ("Crazy Ex-Girlfriend") all return as Sam's daughterly trio, with Celia Imrie ("Bridget Jones's Diary," 2001) also back as her frequently addled mother.

"Better Things" isn't Adlon's first time working with C.K. — far from it. The two serve as co-writers for the series, but their relationship goes back to C.K.'s own comedy, "Louie." Adlon served as a producer for "Louie," wrote several episodes, and even appeared on screen as a guest star on several occasions.

She's a writer, director, Emmy-winning voice actor, and now an Emmy-nominated actress. When it comes to comedy, Pamela Adlon is the real deal. "Better Things" returns Thursday, Sept. 14, on FX.

Britton's back:
Here's some news
that shouldn't be too shocking:
Connie Britton
has already found a new role.
The veteran actress left the cast of "Nashville" in its fifth season
earlier this year,
but she didn't

take much time off. The four-time Emmy nominee heads back to comedy with a recurring role in Showtime's upcoming "SMILF," scheduled to premiere Nov. 5.

It's a return to scripted laughs for Britton, who starred in the ABC sitcom "Spin City" for four seasons alongside Michael J. Fox ("Back to the Future," 1985) and Alan Ruck ("Ferris Bueller's Day Off," 1986). The versatile actress's other credits include "Friday Night Lights," "American Horror Story," "24" and "Beatriz at Dinner" (2017).

Still early on in production, "SMILF" is based on the 2015 short film of the same title starring, written by and directed by Frankie Shaw ("Mr. Robot"), who also headlines the cast of the new semi-autobiographical series. In it, Shaw plays Bridgette, a 20-something single mother juggling her career and relationships, with hilarious results.

Britton's recurring role is Ally, Bridgette's boss who has issues with boundaries. Other actors signed on for the project include Rosie O'Donnell ("The View") and Miguel Gomez ("The Strain").

Connie Britton's been a screen presence for so many years that it's no surprise that she won't be missing

Q: Has TNT canceled "Major Crimes"?

A: Actually, "Major Crimes" has been safe for a while now. It returns for a sixth season Tuesday, Oct. 31.

The renewal announcement was made with little fanfare—the tone of TNT's statement made it seem like a bit of a no-brain decision for the channel.

It cited the show's "stellar ensemble cast" and the fact that it's "one of cable's most-watched drama series" as reasons why it picked up the show for another season back in January, well before the fifth season had ended.

However, it waited until just a couple of weeks ago to elaborate by announcing the actual return date and releasing a 30-second trailer video.

While the trailer gave glimpses of what's to come, it was so brief it didn't give away any real plot points. However, a news release that came with it gave a few hints:

"TNT's 'Major Crimes' faces its three most challenging cases, struggling to solve mysteries mired in complex political conflicts having little to do with identifying and arresting murderers."

Another interesting piece of info it revealed is that, alongside headliners Mary McDonnell ("Battlestar Galactica") and Phillip P. Keene ("The Closer"), recurring guest star Billy Burke ("Zoo") will reprise his role as serial rapist/killer Phillip Stroh at some point in the season.

All this good news came with a tiny bit of bad news, though. The sixth season will only be 13 episodes long — the shortest season the show's had since its debut in 2012 (which was only 10 episodes long). Last season had 21 episodes, and season 4 had 23.

Q: I am absolutely appalled by the language used in "Teen Mom," and using it in front of those precious little children. Are the moms so stupid that they don't know what kind of example they are setting?

A: You're absolutely right that the parents use shocking language in front of, and occasionally addressing, their children in MTV's "Teen Mom OG" and "Teen Mom 2."

However, it's worth noting that language is often the least of these children's worries.

Tracie Egan Morrissey makes this point in her column on the feminist pop-culture site Jezebel. com, pointing to incidents of physical abuse between the adult characters on the show, some of which are witnessed by the children, as well as other traumatizing events.

Morrissey also makes the point that the children in the show are often not old enough to understand the language itself. However, they can understand tone, so we should be more worried about how the characters are talking in front of their children rather than what they're saying.

And that gets to the crux of the problem: The "Teen Mom" shows (and their predecessor, "16 and Pregnant") are about conflict. If the characters were all getting along and generally enjoying their lives, they wouldn't be on television. These shows are popular because of the drama they display.

Q: Who are those guys that make the Sonic commercials? They are hilarious.

A: Sonic Drive-In's two commercial spokesmen, whom it refers to simply as "the two guys," have appeared in several silly and somewhat unpredictable ads for the company.

It's not surprising, then, that the two stars are masters of the silly and unpredictable: They're improv comedians T.J. Jagodowski and Peter Grosz.

Jagodowski actually taught improv at the iO Theater in Chicago and was a member of the legendary Second City troupe. Grosz was a member of the almost-as-legendary Upright Citizens Brigade troupe. In fact, Sonic claims the ads are themselves largely improvised by the duo.

Jagodowski and Grosz are by far best known for their Sonic ads, which they've been doing since 2004. There was a bit of a break in there, from 2010 to 2012, when they were "phased out" by the franchise. Even that turned into fodder for another joke when the company rehired them to do a series of videos pretending to campaign to get their old jobs back.
