Holiday nostalgia with a twist

A Christmas classic is reimagined in Fox's musical 'A Christmas Story Live!'

By KYLA BREWER
TV MEDIA

As the hustle and bustle of the holiday season kicks into high gear, many families take a well-deserved break to enjoy heart-warming festive films. The best holiday movies evoke a sense of nostalgia as parents, kids, grandparents and others reminisce about days of Christmas past, and few tales accomplish this as well as the 1983 classic "A Christmas Story."

This season, Fox offers viewers a new take on the beloved comedy with the premiere of "A Christmas Story Live," airing Sunday, Dec. 17. Andy Walken ("Escaping Dad," 2017) stars as Ralphie Parker, a 9-year-old boy who desperately wants a Red Ryder Carbine Action 200-shot Range Model Air Rifle for Christmas. The youngster shares his Christmas wish with anyone who'll listen, but everyone — from his mother to his teacher to the local department store Santa — warns him he'll shoot his eye out with it.

Based on the writings of Jean Shepherd, the film has become a perennial holiday favorite, and the story gets a musical update in the new Fox version. The network pulled in some major talent to produce the live event, including award-winning film, television and theater producer Marc Platt, who also executive produced Fox's 2016 broadcast of "Grease: Live!"

Benj Pasek and Justin Paul have signed on to work on the production as well, which is fitting since they were responsible for the score of "A Christmas Story: The

Jeff Gillen and Peter Billingsley in a scene from 1983's "A Christmas Story"

Musical," a musical stage adaptation that debuted on Broadway in 2012. In May, Fox announced the duo would compose several new songs for the Yuletide television event. Pasek and Paul recently earned a Tony nomination for "Dear Evan Hansen," and they also penned the lyrics for the Academy Award-winning song

"City of Stars" from the film "La La Land" (2016). Then-Fox executive David Madden had high praise for the musical team when their involvement was announced in May.

"The extraordinarily gifted Pasek and Paul were instrumental in transposing the movie to the stage, and we believe the transition to live event television will be just as entertaining for viewers," Madden said.

Of course, Platt, Pasek and Paul won't be the only ones responsible for making holiday magic on live television, and, luckily, the production boasts some of the most talented performers in the business. Young Walken may be only 11 years old, but his credits include "NCIS," "Escaping Dad" (2017) and "The Most Hated Woman in America" (2017). The actor beat out 350 other applicants for the role of Ralphie after a nationwide digital casting call.

Two-time Tony winner Matthew Broderick ("Ferris Bueller's Day Off," 1986) portrays the adult Ralphie, who serves as the show's narrator as he reminisces about his favorite childhood Christmas memories. He tells not only of Ralphie's quest for the BB gun, but he also recalls tales of schoolyard pranks and bullies, disorderly neighborhood dogs and a contentious family feud between his mother and father surrounding a bawdy lamp shaped like a leg.

Emmy nominee Maya Rudolph ("Saturday Night Live") plays Ralphie's mother, while fellow "SNL" alum Ana Gasteyer joins the cast as Mrs. Schwartz, the mother of one of Ralphie's friends. In October, it was announced that Greek-Canadian actor Chris Diamantopoulos ("Silicon Valley") would take on the role of Ralphie's dad. The supporting cast also includes Broadway darling Jane Krakowski ("30 Rock") as Ralphie's teacher, Miss Shields.

The new Fox musical reunites Krakowski with Scott Ellis ("30 Rock"), who also directed her in "She Loves Me," a Broadway revival that earned her a Tony nomination. Ellis serves as the stage director of "A Christmas Story Live," while Alex Rudzinski ("Dancing With the Stars") serves as the live television director. Both Ellis and Rudzinski are executive producers, along with Adam Siegel (“Grease: Live”). Co-executive producers Jonathan Tolins (“Martian Child,” 2007) and Robert Cary (“Grease: Live”) wrote the script.

The cast and crew of “A Christmas Story: Live” are clearly immensely talented, but it will be tough to live up to the charm of the original. Director Bob Clark teamed up with Shepherd and his real-life wife, Leigh Brown, to adapt Shepherd’s book “In God We Trust, All Others Pay Cash” and other semi-autobiographical writings into a cohesive script for “A Christmas Story.” Child actor Peter Billingsley (“Sullivan and Son”) was cast as young Ralphie, while Shepherd himself took on the role of the narrator. The original movie also starred Ian Petrella (“Crimes of Passion,” 1984) as Ralphie’s brother, Randy; Melinda Dillon (“Close Encounters of the Third Kind,” 1977) as his mom; and Darren McGavin (“Kolchak: The Night Stalker”) as his father, a.k.a. “The Old Man.”

Much of the film’s sentimental, nostalgic mood stems from its “Anytown, USA” setting — or Hohman, Indiana, in the film, which was a fictional take on Shepherd’s hometown of Hammond. Funnily enough, the holiday offering was actually filmed in Cleveland, as well as St. Catharines and Toronto, Ontario. There is no reference to a specific year in the film, but Clark and Shepherd claimed the story was meant to look as if it could have been set in the late 1930s or early 1940s.

Clark’s “A Christmas Story” did moderately well when it opened in theaters and earned two Genie Awards, but it has steadily increased in popularity over the years, thanks in part to repeated television broadcasts. One of those rare holiday films that appeals equally well to both children and adults, it’s made several top Christmas movie lists and was even praised by famed film critic Leonard Maltin. “A Christmas Story” has become so popular that both TNT and TBS present the film exclusively for 24 hours on Christmas Eve and Christmas Day, treating viewers to 12 back-to-back airings.

Given the story’s ability to resonate with so many, it’s no surprise that it was adapted as a stage musical that premiered on

Broadway in 2012. Starring Dan Lauria (“The Wonder Years”) in Shepherd’s role, the play received Tony nominations for Best Musical, Best Book of a Musical, and Best Original Score Written for the Theatre. The production also earned six Drama Desk nominations and was acclaimed by critics. Musical numbers included such cheeky tunes as “When You’re a Wimp” and “You’ll Shoot Your Eye Out.”

Now, television viewers can tune in to the new musical for a fresh take on the holiday classic. Follow Ralphie’s quest to ensure he finds a Red Ryder Carbine Action 200-shot Range Model Air Rifle under the tree in “A Christmas Story Live,” premiering Sunday, Dec. 17, on Fox.

Memorable TV Christmas Gifts

“The Big Bang Theory” – Leonard Nimoy’s autograph (“The Bath Item Gift Hypothesis”)

As any “Big Bang” fan knows, Sheldon isn’t one for showing affection. But when Penny gives him an extra special Christmas gift, his joy is next level: it’s a napkin signed by “Star Trek’s” Leonard Nimoy. As an added (and unintentional) bonus, the actor had wiped his mouth on the napkin before signing it, sending Sheldon into fresh spasms of euphoria. (“I possess the DNA of Leonard Nimoy?!”) Half a dozen gift baskets still aren’t enough to repay her, in his opinion, so he shocks everyone present by bestowing upon Penny a stiff and tentative — but very sincere — hug.

“The Simpsons” – Lee Carvallo’s Putting Challenge (“Marge Be Not Proud”)

In one of the show’s earliest Christmas-themed episodes, Bart breaks his mother’s heart a little after he’s caught shoplifting Bonestorm, a violent video game she’d forbidden him to play. Desperate to make her happy again, he gifts her a nice portrait of himself, with a receipt noting “paid in full.” Overjoyed, Marge gives him an early Christmas present in return, telling him it’s the video game “every boy wants.” But it’s not Bonestorm — it’s Lee Carvallo’s Putting Challenge, an incredibly dull golf game that Bart had rejected earlier. He gamely masks his chagrin and gives his mother a warm hug.

“The Office” – An oven mitt (“Christmas Party”)

What starts out as an admittedly dreary Secret Santa exchange gets decidedly worse when Michael, to his outrage, receives a handmade oven mitt knitted by Phyllis. He feels the sting even worse for having given Ryan a $400 iPod (with the price tag deliberately left on), despite the $20 spending limit. He’s not exactly gracious in his disappointment and unilaterally changes the game to “Yankee Swap,” which involves everyone stealing gifts from each other as Michael loudly tries to pawn off the luckless mitt. This leads to pretty much everyone feeling bad, from an understandably hurt Phyllis to the people whose carefully selected, personalized gifts end up with the wrong recipient. Merry Christmas!

“Full House” – Party tie (“Arrest Ye Merry Gentlemen”)

Poor, naive Michelle. The kid saves up her milk money to buy her dad a present, and she’s so sweetly excited about it: it’s a horribly tacky (and oddly stiff) Christmas tie with a cup holder attached for hands-free party-going. It’s practical, if not remotely stylish, but she’s crushed when she learns that Becky has bought the same thing as the gag gift it’s intended to be, and the tie is roundly (and fairly) mocked by one and all. Cue an immediate return to the store, featuring none other than the legendary Mickey Rooney.

“Mr. Bean” – Not a ring (“Merry Christmas, Mr. Bean”)

Ah, a classic. In an episode brimming with memorable gags, who could forget the gift Mr. Bean gets his girlfriend (who I just found out goes by the lovely moniker of Irma Gobb)? It’s not the fancy ring she pointed out to him, but the photograph of a happy couple that was BEHIND the ring in the store window. It gets better: as poor Irma weeps in disappointment, her fella surprises her with a ring box. She’s overjoyed — until she opens the box, which contains not a ring, but a hook from which the tacky picture can be hung.
