TV's big night

Stephen Colbert hosts the 69th Annual Primetime Emmy Awards

Television's biggest stars get together to celebrate some of the past year's most outstanding achievements at the 69th Primetime Emmy Awards, airing Sunday, Sept. 17, on CBS. Stephen Colbert ("The Late Show With Stephen Colbert") hosts this year's ceremony at L.A.'s Microsoft Theater, honoring the very best of television, which includes everything from traditional dramas and sitcoms to unscripted reality TV series and animated programs.

A bounty of stars: Emmy Awards kick off fall TV season

By Kyla Brewer
TV Media

As the weather begins to cool and TV fans prepare to tuck into a whole new season of prime time, the stars of the small screen take a look back at the year's achievements and celebrate the outstanding work of their peers.

Stephen Colbert ("The Late Show With Stephen Colbert") welcomes some of the television industry's biggest names to the Microsoft Theater in Los Angeles as he hosts the 69th Annual Primetime Emmy Awards, airing Sunday, Sept. 17, on CBS. Bestowed annually by the Television Academy of Arts and Sciences, the awards recognize excellence in American prime-time programming in a variety of categories, which include acting, directing, writing and a "best of" category.

Colbert is the latest in a string of late-night personalities to helm a major awards ceremony this year. Jimmy Fallon ("The Tonight Show Starring Jimmy Fallon") hosted The 74th Golden Globe Awards, Jimmy Kimmel ("Jimmy Kimmel Live!") emceed The 89th Academy Awards and James Corden ("The Late Late Show With James Corden") took the reins of the 59th Annual Grammy Awards.

Now it's Colbert's turn, and the folks at CBS couldn't be happier. The network's head honchos sang Colbert's praises in January when news broke that he'd be the latest Emmy host.

"Stephen is the ultimate master of ceremonies with award-winning creative talents, and as we've seen in the past few months, he has a fearless passion for live television," CBS executive Jack Sussman said.

When his Emmy gig was announced, Colbert responded in his trademark tongue-in-cheek fashion, saying: "This will be the largest audience to witness an Emmys, period." The quip was a not-so-subtle jab at the controversy surrounding attendance at President Trump's inauguration in January.

This year's ceremony could be very big for Colbert indeed. He's up for six of the coveted statuettes and is poised to make Emmy history should he win multiple awards while also hosting the show. "The Late Show With Stephen Colbert" has earned Emmy nominations for directing, writing and outstanding variety talk series. The comedian's Showtime election night special, "Stephen Colbert's Live Election Night Democracy's Series Finale:

Who's Going to Clean Up This Sh*t," has been nominated in the same three categories.

Such a win would be stellar for Colbert, but there will be plenty of other excitement during this year's ceremony. Shemar Moore ("Criminal Minds") and Anna Chlumsky ("Veep") announced the nominees in July, revealing that NBC's "Saturday Night Live" and HBO's "Westworld" had each earned a whopping 22 nominations. Other big nominees include FX's "Feud: Bette and Joan" and Netflix's "Stranger Things," which tied with 18 Emmy nods, while HBO's "Veep" came in next with 17 just ahead of HBO's "Little Big Lies" and FX's "Fargo," which each earned 16.

With nods for everything from supporting actor to makeup to writing, "SNL" led the way for NBC, which came through with 64 overall nominations. That's a mere drop in the bucket, however, compared to HBO's 111 nominations, and that's without ratings juggernaut "Game of Thrones," which was ineligible for this year's Emmys. Streaming service Netflix brought home a total of 91 nominations, pushing NBC to third place just ahead of FX, which earned 55 Emmy nominations for its programs. ABC followed with 33, CBS was close behind with 29 and Fox came through with 20.

It is worth noting that NBC's hit "This Is Us" became the first Outstanding Drama Series nominee from a broadcast network since 2011. It's up against HBO's "Westworld," AMC's "Better Call Saul," Hulu's "The Handmaid's Tale" and Netflix's "The Crown," "Stranger Things" and "House of Cards."

The Outstanding Comedy Series category includes a mix of traditional broadcast sitcoms, quirky streaming series and star-studded cable shows. ABC's "Black-ish" and "Modern Family" are both nominated for the Emmy, while HBO's "Silicon Valley" and "Veep," Netflix's "Unbreakable Kimmy Schmidt" and "Master of None" and FX's "Atlanta" round out the category.

Defending champion Jeffrey Tambor is once again nominated in the Outstanding Lead Actor in a Comedy Series for his role in Amazon's "Transparent." The other nominees include Anthony Anderson ("Black-ish"), William H. Macy ("Shameless"), Aziz Ansari ("Master of None"), Zach Galifianakis ("Baskets") and Donald Glover ("Atlanta").

Milo Ventimiglia and Sterling K. Brown from "This Is Us" are both up for Outstanding Lead Actor in a Drama Series, a category which also includes Matthew Rhys ("The Americans"), Bob Odenkirk ("Better Call Saul"), Kevin Spacey ("House of Cards"), Liev Schreiber ("Ray Donovan") and Anthony Hopkins ("Westworld").

Jane Fonda and Lily Tomlin both made the cut for Outstanding Lead Actress in a Comedy Series for their work in the Netflix series "Grace and Frankie." Other nominees include Julia Louis-Dreyfus ("Veep"), Ellie Kemper ("Unbreakable Kimmy Schmidt"), Allison Janney ("Mom"), Tracee Ellis Ross ("Black-ish") and Pamela Adlon ("Better Things").

Video releases

Gal Gadot stars in "Wonder Woman"

Wonder Woman

On the hidden island of Themyscira live the Amazons, a group of warrior women created by Zeus to protect humanity. When an aircraft crashes off the island's coast, young Amazonian princess Diana (Gadot) rescues its pilot, the dashing American Steve Trevor (Pine), who tells the Amazons of World War I raging just outside of their protected sphere. Convinced that it is her destiny to stop the fighting, and that Ares, the god of war, is behind the conflict, Diana leaves her people and her home behind to venture to the front lines, where she discovers truths not only about herself but also about the true nature of humanity.

High school mystery: 'Vice Principals' follows in classic TV's footsteps

By Andrew Warren
TV Media

High school mystery: "Who shot J.R.?" That's the question that consumed audiences way back in 1980, when "Dallas" — one of the biggest shows on television at the time — ended its third season with the mysterious shooting of the treacherous J.R. Ewing (Larry Hagman, "I Dream of Jeannie"). Did he survive? Was he dead? And who shot him? Audiences agonized over these questions for eight long months until the next season finally came along with some answers.

"The Simpsons" famously spoofed the story in 1995 with its "Who Shot Mr. Burns" episode, and last September, HBO's "Vice Principals" left audiences with a similar whodunnit, and fans are finally set to get some answers — hopefully — when season 2 premieres Sunday, Sept. 17, on the specialty cable channel.

North Jackson High's vice principal, Neal Gamby (Danny McBride, "Alien: Covenant," 2017), was shot in the first season's shocking finale, but as the trailer for the second and final season has shown, the foul-mouthed administrator is alive, and out for revenge. Along with co-vice principal Lee Russell (Walton Goggins, "Justified"), he's on the hunt for his would-be killer.

Kimberly Hebert Gregory ("Devious Maids") stars as Dr. Belinda Brown, the school's new principal, whose hiring set in motion the chain of events that led to Gamby getting shot. Both vice principals covet her position, and after some initial animosity, they've merged their conflicting ambitions to drive out their new boss and get one of them promoted in her place.

Georgia King ("The New Normal"), Sheau McKinney ("Great News"), Shea Whigham ("The Wolf of Wall Street," 2013) and Busy Philipps ("Cougar Town") also star as members of the school's staff and the family members of the vice principals who either aid or hinder their school-sized ambitions.

The question of "Who shot Gamby?" may not have gripped TV audiences quite like the attempted murder of J.R. did, but for fans of "Vice Principals," it's a question that's begging for an answer. The second and final season of the comedy premieres Sunday, Sept. 17, on HBO.

Deadly Canadians: More people are going to start turning up dead. It's Mary's doing. Poor Mary.

Canadian series "Mary Kills People" may not have a premiere date for its second season beyond a vague "early 2018," but early production is well underway for the black comedy-drama that airs on Global in its home country, and on Lifetime in the U.S.

As the name suggests, the show is about a woman named Mary (Caroline Dhavernas, "Hannibal"), an emergency-room doctor and end-of-life counselor who also provides doctor-assisted suicide services.

Two new stars have signed on for the second season so far. Fellow Canadians Rachel Lefevre ("Under the Dome") and Ian Lake ("Bitten") are on board as a husband-and-wife duo with ties to Mary's past. Richard Short ("666 Park Avenue") and Jay Ryan ("Beauty and the Beast") will also be back when "Mary Kills People" returns.

Mary dives even deeper into the seedy and dangerous criminal underworld in season 2, as she tries to secure a steady supply of the drug that she uses to end people's lives, with the undercover cop (Ryan) who nearly implicated her last season still hot on her trail and determined to bring her down.

"Mary Kills People" is a comedic take on a touchy subject, with a side dose of drama to boot. Its second season premiere is planned for early next year.

A hero rises: With the rise of so many villains, Gotham City has been in dire need of a hero, and, at long last, someone is finally taking baby steps towards becoming a legend.

"Gotham" returns for a fourth season Thursday, Sept. 21, on Fox, just as the city begins to really start begging for help. The hit series is based on the many Batman comics and characters, but up until now, it hasn't had a real Batman. Instead, it's been about the goings-on in the city in the years before a young Bruce Wayne — played by David Mazouz ("Touch") — ever donned the famous black cape and mask.

Finally, though, the orphaned youth takes his first steps towards his destiny, donning an early version of the batsuit, and starting a new life as a vigilante. The Caped Crusader's arrival on the scene couldn't have come at a better time, with Penguin (Robin Lord Taylor, "Another Earth," 2011) having secured a stranglehold on the city's underworld.

Fighting against the villain — but also concerned by the rise of the masked vigilante — are cops Jim Gordon (Ben McKenzie, "The O.C.") and Harvey Bullock (Donal Logue, "Vikings"). Cory Michael Smith ("Olive Kitteridge"), Sean Pertwee ("Equilibrium," 2012), Camren Bicondova ("Battlefield America," 2002) and Chris Chalk ("12 Years a Slave," 2013) also star.

Up until now, "Gotham" has been a superhero drama without the superhero. That begins to change with the fourth season, premiering Thursday, Sept. 21, on Fox.

Q&A Hollywood

By Adam Thomlison
TV Media

Q: Who plays Brianna in "Grace and Frankie"? I love that show, and I love her in it.

A: Grace's daughter Brianna in "Grace and Frankie" is played by longtime sketch comedy star June Diane Raphael. Being a female comic making a successful transition from sketch to sitcom puts her on a path blazed partly by her "Grace and Frankie" co-star, the great Lily Tomlin. Tomlin became famous as a cast member in the sketch comedy classic "Laugh-In" in the late '60s and early '70s.

Raphael's background is a little less landmark filled, but no less successful. She first came to prominence in the mid-2000s for her stage shows at the Upright Citizens Brigade Theatre in her native New York.

However, she soon found increasingly large roles in TV and film. She had her first regular TV gig in the short-lived 2010 sitcom "Players" on Spike TV, but real success came the next year with the Cartoon Network cop-show parody "NTSF:SD:SUV," appearing alongside her husband, Paul Scheer.

Q: I have heard that ABC may not continue with "Last Man Standing," which has to be one of its highest rated shows. Why would they cancel it? Is it a political thing?

A: ABC has explicitly denied that it canceled "Last Man Standing," a conservative-themed sitcom, because of politics. Of course, the fact that it had to deny it is news in itself — as you know, networks rarely give reasons for their cancellation decisions.

That said, this one was particularly surprising, because "Last Man Standing" still had fairly strong ratings. They weren't excellent or anything, but they were still better than many shows that don't get the ax.

Indeed, the show's star, Tim Allen, said on Twitter that he was "stunned and blindsided" by the decision. Things got political afterward, with many fans arguing the network canceled it for its conservative values (or for Allen's conservative values), and at one point they called for a boycott of the network.

But ABC Entertainment president Channing Dungey denied it was a political decision, saying instead it was a matter of scheduling. "Once we made the decision not to continue with comedy on Friday, it was just kind of that's where we landed," she said.

True to her word, the Friday night schedule this fall is a pretty serious affair: the fairy-tale drama "Once Upon a Time" leads in to the network's highly anticipated new comic book series "Marvel's Inhumans." The night rounds out with news-show mainstay "20/20."

Q: What song does Garth whistle when he and Wayne are lying on the car by the airport in "Wayne's World"? It's familiar but I can't figure it out.

A: The familiar tune Garth is whistling is the original "Star Trek" theme. He offers a fairly broad hint right afterward when he says, "Sometimes I wish I could boldly go where no man's gone before. But I'll probably stay in Aurora." Aurora is, of course, the suburban-Illinois setting of the smash-hit 1992 film.

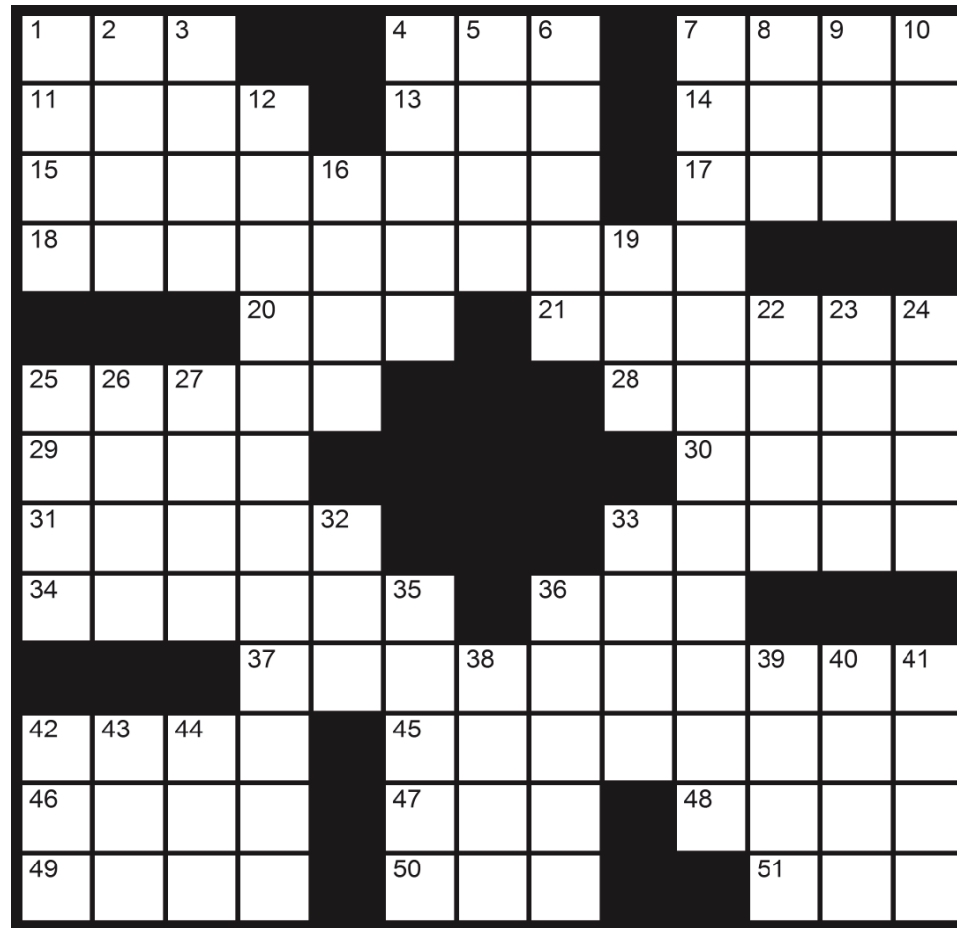

This seemingly random inclusion makes more sense in the context of the film. The scene begins with a shot of the starry night sky and the whistling, which is note-perfect and has studio-sounding effects on it, so that for a second we aren't sure if they're watching "Star Trek" on television or if the film has suddenly turned into sci-fi or something. Only after a full bar of the song has gone by does the shot switch to the boys on the hood of Garth's car, and we realize it's a very terrestrial scene after all.

"Wayne's World" was, of course, a very music-heavy film. The main characters are forever going to concerts or listening to music (as in the famous head-banging scene to Queen's "Bohemian Rhapsody," which occurs in the same car), or else performing it themselves, either by whistling or by playing guitar. Indeed, film scholars Arthur Knight and Pamela Robertson Wojcik, in their book "Soundtrack Available: Essays on Film and Popular Music," go so far as to say that "Wayne's World" "could be seen as a reinvention of the musical."

Late Laughs

Conan

Before announcing his decision on Afghanistan, President Trump was said to have made a "rigorous" review of the issue. Yes, Trump said, "I must have read at least four tweets about it!"

There were a lot of protestors at a rally today in Phoenix attended by President Trump and Vice-President Pence. Things got awkward when it turned out that the "Impeach Trump" chants were being led by Mike Pence.

Mark Wahlberg has been named 2017's highest paid male actor. Today, Mark said, "I don't know why either."

The Tonight Show With Jimmy Fallon

I read about a 98-year-old woman and a 94-year-old man here in New York who just got married. And if you want to get them a gift, hurry!

A man in the U.K. saved his pet tortoise by giving it mouth-to-mouth resuscitation — at least, that's what he told his wife when she walked in on them.

The Late Show With Stephen Colbert

Trump's buddy Vladimir Putin is taking a break. He's in Siberia putting on a snorkel and shooting fish with a spear gun. Though he later claimed the fish were killed by Ukrainian separatists.

The Late Late Show With James Corden

Trump thinks these 100-year-old

Confederate monuments are beautiful. Which is weird. Usually, Trump doesn't call anything beautiful if it's over 30 years old.

Late Night With Seth Meyers

Axios published a list of groups that President Trump has alienated during his first seven months of office. And now the world is out of paper.

A song which consists of nearly 10 minutes of silence has made it to the top 50 purchases on the iTunes charts. Said Mike Pence, "This rocks!"

The Little Couple

TLC (38) 9:00 p.m.

When Jen is invited to be a keynote speaker at an event in Scotland, the whole family travels to the U.K. in the season premiere of "The Little Couple," airing Tuesday, Sept. 19, on TLC. Cameras follow the family as they go to a scotch distillery and visit a castle where Will and Zoey feel quite at home.

Arlen (Waterhouse) is placed inside a vast fenced-off area just outside of Texas that is outside of the realm of laws and government. Shortly after her arrival, she is attacked and taken prisoner by a group of cannibals, from whom she manages to escape while keeping most of her body intact. Elsewhere in the desert wilderness, she is taken in by a secure town called Comfort, which is ruled by a cult-like leader named The Dream (Reeves), who maintains control over his people using drugs.

Dancing challenge: Grab the sequin, chiffon and cha-cha heels, season 25 of "Dancing With the Stars" swings onto ABC Monday, Sept. 18. Co-hosts Tom Bergeron, Carrie Ann Inaba, Bruno Tonioli, Len Goodman and Julianne Hough as 13 couples prepare to twist, dip and spin their way closer and closer to winning the coveted Mirrorball Trophy.

"Dancing With the Stars" showcases celebrity contestants as they're paired up with talented dance professionals who guide their partners through challenging routines. The couples must perform predetermined dances with unique flair as they vie for points from judges and the audience votes that can carry them forward in the competition. These combo scores ultimately determine which pairs move on, whittling down the numbers until only the champions remain.

While ABC has been tight-lipped about the celebrity contestants for this upcoming season, the list of professional dancers has been revealed. Fan favorites Maksim Chmerkovskiy and Mark Ballas are both back for another spin around the dance floor. The former, better known as Maks, has been with the series since season 2 and has won the Mirrorball Trophy once, with Meryl Davis in 2014. Ballas, on the other hand, boasts a 14-season run with the series, and has been a finalist seven times and champion twice, with wins in seasons 6 (with Kristi Yamaguchi) and 8 (with Shawn Johnson). Other dancers returning include Peta Murgatroyd, Valentin Chmerkovskiy and Witney Carson, along with Alan Bersten, who has made the jump from troupe member to pro.
