THE BEST THINGS TO DO IN SIOUXLAND

1 Twinkling times two!

Dueling Pianos has become a "Black Friday" tradition at Hard Rock Hotel & Casino's Anthem, 111 Third St. If we were going to their 8 p.m. Friday show, we'd request either Mac Miller's "Turkey Love" or Adam Sandler's "The Thanksgiving Song."

3 Garie interesting!

Garie Lewis is a comic, a singer and, during Riverssance, a muck-covered mudman. See him all cleaned up (hopefully) as a stand-up at 8 p.m. Friday at Whiskey Dick's, 212 Cunningham Drive.

2 Main Dane!

In theory, country singer Dane Louis moved to Nashville for career reasons. Yet, the Siouxland's Choice Award winner is often in Sioux City. We're not complaining. See this rising star 9 p.m. Saturday at the Marquee, 1225 Fourth St.

4 Thanksgiving with a 'tude.

Hard Rock Hotel & Casino Chef de Cuisine Kelly Bunkers is a turkey day renegade. See him and chow down on his special Thanksgiving menu, all week, at Main + Abbey, 111 Third St.

5 Black Friday is for drinking!

Shopping, schmopping! On Black Friday, we wanna drink. Jackson Street Brewing's Dave Winslow promised some special releases and a fun El Comal food menu from 10 a.m. to 9:30 p.m. Friday at 607 Fifth St.

6 Mat D is back!

Mat D and the Roadside Revival will be kickin' it old school at 8 p.m. Saturday at Vangarde Arts, 416 Pierce St.

A holiday classic

"Nutcracker! Magical Christmas Ballet" is innovative due to its stunning production design and oversized puppets, says producer Dan Talmi.

"Nutcracker! Magical Christmas Ballet" conveys the message of peace and understanding through dance, said executive producer Dan Talmi.

"Nutcracker! Magical Christmas Ballet" is returning for its 31st North American tour with new characters and a classic story.

'Nutcracker! Magical Christmas Ballet' returns to Sioux City with a cutting-edge show

BY EARL HORLYK

For Dan Talmi, it's beginning to feel a lot like Christmas.

Since he is the executive producer of the "Nutcracker! Magical Christmas Ballet," the holiday season is pretty much a year-round endeavor for Talmi.

"To be honest, it feels like Christmas even in the middle of summer," he admitted with a chuckle.

That's because The "Nutcracker! Magical Christmas" is gearing up for a two-month tour of North America, with shows taking place from the East Coast to the West Coast and everywhere in between.

The acclaimed live production of Pyotr Illyich Tchaikovsky's legendary ballet will be returning to the Orpheum Theatre, 528 Pierce St., for a 6 p.m. Sunday performance with the Sioux City Symphony Orchestra.

This marks the 31st year that Talmi has presented this holiday classic, which brings together some of the ballet virtuosos from around the world.

DETAILS

What: "Nutcracker! Magical Christmas Ballet" returning to the Sioux City Symphony Orchestra

When: 6 p.m. Sunday

Where: Orpheum Theatre, 528 Pierce St.

Many members of the cast are from Ukraine, which has been hard-hit by a war with Russia. As a result, the company had to reach out to artists from other countries like Japan, Italy and Turkey,

"Kyiv is the birthplace of classical ballet," Talmi said. "This is why we've always gotten so many cast members from Ukraine."

Despite the ongoing conflict, this year's cast will include Ukrainian gold medalist Karyna Shatkovskaya and the country's "honored artist" Elena Pechenyuk in principal roles.

Also new to this year's production will be a character called The Herald. Representing the spirit of the forest, The Herald plays a vital role of announcing the arrival of the ballet's heroes and leading the joyous celebration of Clara, the beloved heroine.

Clara will also encounter 10-foot-tall puppets and elegantly dancing couples who symbolize the five great heritages of the world.

"The Nutcracker" is the one of the best-known ballets in the world," Talmi said. "It is also flexible. I've seen 'The Nutcracker' in Florida, where they've incorporated lobsters into the story. I've seen it done in Louisville, Kentucky, complete with Kentucky Derby jockeys.

When it is performed at Sioux City's Orpheum Theatre, "Nutcracker! Magical Christmas Ballet" will feature students from the Flux Dance Studio.

"Nutcracker! Magical Christmas Ballet" brings together dancers from Italy, Japan, Turkey and Ukraine for a cutting-edge retelling of the legendary holiday show.

"Nutcracker! Magical Christmas Ballet" is suitable for the entire family, according to its executive producer Dan Talmi.

MBR
Renowned for its Broadway-level production values, "Nutcracker! Magical Christmas Ballet" is embarking on an 80-city tour, which includes a Sunday performance at Sioux City's Orpheum Theatre.

"Yet when we've added characters to the show, it is keeping with the show's historic timeframe," he maintained.

One innovation that Talmi is especially proud of is incorporating young local dancers.

"In Sioux City, we are partnering with the nonprofit Flux Dance Company, giving aspiring ballet students a chance to perform with professional dancers on a wonderful stage like the Orpheum," he said.

Indeed, Talmi is ecstatic to be working at the Orpheum with the Sioux City Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Ryan Haskins.

"We've worked with the your symphony in the past and it is always a pleasure," he said.

No matter how many times Talmi see "The Nutcracker," he still gets chills.

"The first few minutes of the score are so magnificent," he explained. "You can tell why Tchaikovsky's music has withstood the test of time."

The same can be said of the legendary 131-year-old ballet.

"People know the story and they love it," Talmi said. "We try to keep it fresh."

Specifically, "Nutcracker! Magical Christmas Ballet" does that by blending classical ballet with cutting-edge circus techniques.

"It is not uncommon to see three or four generations of a family at one of our shows," Talmi said. "Indeed,

'The Nutcracker' is, often, the first ballet a child ever sees."

Talmi takes it as a challenge to make sure a person's first ballet leaves a good impression.

"Nutcracker! Magic Christmas Ballet' conveys a message of peace and understanding through the universal language of dance," he said. "We need more of that in the world."

ADVICE

ANSWERS FOR ALL YOUR WOES

DEAR ANNIE
ANNIE LANE

Is this normal in a marriage?

Dear Annie: My husband and I have been together six years this December, married four. We grew closer when I had a miscarriage after only a few months of dating. He stood by my side and asked my dad for my hand. He knew then he wanted to stand with me and by me.

A year into our marriage, I discovered he was cheating on me with one of his exes. He claims it was only emotional and never physical. I chose to believe him and forgive. This took a long while.

After our second child, I went through treatment for postpartum depression. I realized six months in that it was not helping. In fact, it was making my mental state worse. So I went off the meds. I've been off of them for about four months now.

Lately, though, I'm finding myself not wanting to be physical with my husband. I do find him attractive, and I love him. He's my best friend and rock, but when it comes to his touch, it's unwelcome and very uncomfortable. I feel it's not fair to him to not have a partner he deserves. I do my wifely duties, but I don't enjoy sex anymore. I used to enjoy sex, almost to an unhealthy level. Is this normal in a marriage? Is it normal to not have anything your husband does physically, do anything for you? — Lost Wife

Dear Lost Wife: It sounds like you are not done healing yet — and that is OK. Healing takes time, often a far longer time than we want it to. You went through multiple traumatic experiences with your husband, and it has only been 10 months since your diagnosis of postpartum depression.

Your first course of treatment was clearly not the right path for you, but that doesn't mean that you should leave your depression untreated. Consult your doctor on all of your other options. You should also attend couples counseling with your husband to make sure you are continuing on in a safe, trusting, communicative marriage.

Dear Annie: In response to "Not a Family Holiday," the reader who was stressed about the prospect of dividing her time among family members during the holidays, I solved this problem for myself years ago. When I married, my husband had two small children from his first marriage. Sharing holidays was a requirement of the custody agreement. This always meant that we missed the holidays with the children every other year.

So, we created alternative holidays. We simply choose a different day to celebrate. As my husband and I added two more children to our family and they all added spouses and grandchildren, this model continues to work, allowing us to celebrate together without negotiating with in-laws. — Always Happy on Alternative Holidays

Dear Always Happy: What a great suggestion. This arrangement allows you, and your whole family, to enjoy the holidays with very little stress. The real purpose of the holidays is simply to spend time together. The date on the calendar is just that — a date on the calendar.

TWEEN 12 AND 20
DR. ROBERT WALLACE

His gift totally shocked me

DR. WALLACE: My father has been out of my life for over 10 years. I'm a female high school student and I just turned 17 years old.

My biological father has not sent me a birthday card, a holiday card, a graduation card or even called me during all of this time.

When I've asked my mother why this is, over the years her answer has always been that he must have other priorities in his life.

To her credit she has never talked down about my father or told me any unsavory stories about him. This has caused me to just assume that I would never hear from him again, so I kind of mentally moved on years ago.

So, imagine my shock when I received a package from my father on the day before my birthday! When I opened it there was a nice card inside and a new winter jacket that fits me perfectly. The package had a return address that listed him living in the state to the west of us. He's about 200 miles from where my mother and I live now.

I'm so stunned that I don't know what to do. I like the jacket but I'm not sure if I'm comfortable wearing it. I also don't know if I want to write him back or not about this. Since I'm uncomfortable, do you think I should just pack the jacket up and ship it back to him? — Beyond Surprised, via email

BEYOND SURPRISED: I suggest that you hold onto the jacket and give yourself some time to think things over. When you last saw your father, you were just a little girl, not the woman you are now.

Therefore, it's best to not rush to make any decision at all. You do not know where your father has been and what his life has been like. At some point you might wish to at least hear what he has to say for himself.

In the meantime, I feel it's not a good idea to return the jacket as that would be making a statement to him and I don't see you as being ready to make any such decision yet after being caught so off guard.

Discuss this issue at length with your mother as you may find her guidance quite helpful, especially since she has exhibited a mature and civilized tone when discussing him in the past.

Finally, since it is fall now and wintertime is looming, I suggest that you do wear the jacket. You can decide later if you wish to keep it or not and there is no harm in using it now when it is in season. Your father wanted you to have it so you certainly should try it out no matter where things go between you and him.

It takes cash to be a teen in 2023!

DR. WALLACE: It takes money to be a teenager these days! My parents give me an allowance, but it's so low and laughable that I won't even tell you how much it is. Just trust me, it's embarrassingly low and I can't do a lot of the things my friends get to do because I can't afford to go on some of their outings.

It's really hurting my social life, and my parents seem oblivious about my plight! What can I do? My father is really, really tight with his money, so I don't think he's going to raise my allowance even five cents. And for the record, I do chores in our home to "earn" this paltry amount and I do them well. I take pride in my work. — My Allowance Is a Joke, via email

MY ALLOWANCE IS A JOKE: I suggest that you start by offering to do extra jobs/chores at home in exchange for a little extra pay. Use the word "pay" rather than the word "allowance."

If your father declines your offer, as you expect him to, this would then set you up to ask him to help you get a part-time job such as babysitting in your neighborhood or helping neighbors do some chores at their homes.

And since your father is quite frugal, ask him in advance to help you set up a savings account so that you can both bank (and spend) some of your new "income." This is likely your best path toward raising the funds you wish to acquire. If you are successful with this strategy, remember to "walk the walk" by following through with your savings plan. This habit will be a very good one for you to develop at your age.

Sioux City plans small business events

Downtown Sioux City is returning to the days when businesses would have larger-than-life holiday displays in their store window.

Only this time, Downtown Partners executive director Ragen Cote said there will be a special seasonal twist.

"Our holiday storefront decorating competition will also benefit local nonprofit organizations," she explained. "People can vote for their favorite decorated storefront at downtownsiouxcity.com and the top vote-getter will get $500 donated toward the charity of their choice."

Voting will continue now through Dec. 26. A map with participating storefronts will be included. The storefront with the most votes will be announced Dec. 29.

"When I think of decorated storefronts, I always think of movies like "The Christmas Story," Cote said. "Wouldn't it be nice to have displays like that."

Plus Downtown Partners will also be celebrating Small Business

Saturday.

"For the sixth year, Downtown Partners will be hosting Small Business Bingo," Cote said. "Get a square from each downtown business you visit. The more places you visited, the better the chance you'll win some great prizes."

Northwestern presents Vespers concert

Northwestern College's music department will present its annual Christmas Vespers concert at 7 p.m. Dec. 2, and 3 p.m. Dec. 3 in the campus' Christ Chapel, 101 Seventh St. S.W., Orange City, Iowa.

This year's concerts will center on the theme of "His Star-Our Redemption," reflecting upon the star that led the wise men to find the Messiah and Redeemer. Through music, the A cappella Choir and student soloists will tell a story about a transformative encounter between a young, crippled boy and the three kings on their way to Jerusalem.

The Women's Choir, Orchestra, Brass Ensemble and organist Mary Lou Wielenga will also perform a variety of reflective and festive musical works.

Among the ensembles' selections are Richard Burchard's "Creator Alme Siderum," a rich blend of both monophonic chant and harmonized chorales; Dan Forrest's arrangement of "See, Amid the Winter's Snow," a much-loved Christmas carol; and Moses Hogan's dynamic spiritual "Glory, Glory, Glory to Our Newborn King," based on "Go, Tell It on the Mountain."

The audience will also be invited to sing many traditional carols. Dr. John Vonder Bruegge, dean of arts and humanities, will serve as narrator for the concert that is free and open to the public.
