QUESTION OF THE WEEK

Which retro band or singer deserves a comeback?

Jared McNett
Staff Writer

"Parliament-Funkadelic always deserves to be at the front of people's minds."

Earl Horlyk
Staff Writer

"I'm rediscovering Stephen Malkmus and Pavement for the first time since the '90s. For a lo-fi indie act, their stuff holds up."

Mason Dockter
Staff Writer

"Tommy James, of the Shondells, because I interviewed him and he was quote pleasant."

Guitar hero

Foghat's Bryan Bassett on the rock & roll lifestyle and his 'Funky Music' past

BY EARL HORLYK

Most musicians would be satisfied being part of one iconic rock group, yet guitarist Bryan Bassett has the unique claim in contributing to three.

The Pittsburgh native is, arguably, best known as a member of the funk band Wild Cherry, providing the distinctive opening riff to their 1976 hit "Play That Funky Music."

For nearly seven years, Bassett toured with Southern rockers Molly Hatchett.

More significantly, he struck up a friendship with "Lonesome" Dave Peverett, the original lead singer and rhythm guitarist with the British rock group Foghat in the 1980s.

Eventually, Bassett became a full-time member of the then-newly reformed Foghat in the late 1990s, performing with the group for more than 20 years.

Bassett, along with the other members of Foghat will be taking a "Slow Ride" for an 8 p.m. Saturday concert at WinnaVegas Casino Resort, 1500 330th St., Sloan, Iowa.

"Growing up in Pittsburgh, I was exposed to great sport teams from an early age but I was exposed to so much terrific music," Bassett recalled. "It was when the Northern Soul movement from England was reaching the radio airwaves here in the states."

One Christmas, his parents bought him a big red Harmony Rocket guitar, along with two Jeff Beck records.

"That must've been a sign,"

Bassett said with a laugh. "As soon as I learned how to play the guitar, I knew rock and roll would be a big part of my life."

Playing with various Pittsburgh-based bands throughout the late 1960s and early 1970s, Bassett worked the college, gaining both experience and showmanship.

"It may not sound like a lot of money nowadays but you could make $400 a gig for doing something that you loved doing," he said. "That's a pretty sweet deal."

Bassett remembered the time as being a learning experience.

"Young musicians are like sponges," he explained. "The more you play, the more you learn. If you're versatile enough in all types of music, you can incorporate it into your playing."

That came in handy when Bassett joined Wild Cherry in the mid 1970s.

"Wild Cherry started out as this hard rock cover band because hard rock was the music as that time," he remembered. "After a while, we started losing bookings due to the disco movement. Audiences wanted to dance and hard rock wasn't meant to be danced to."

"We were playing a club on the northside of Pittsburgh when an audience member came up to (frontman) Rob Parissi during a break, asking, 'Are you gonna be playing some funky music, white boy?'" Bassett continued with a laugh. "Rob was inspired to write Wild Cherry's only No. 1 hit based on that one not very nice comment."

PROVIDED

Not only has guitarist Bryan Bassett been a part of Foghat, the Pittsburgh native has also performed with Wild Cherry and Molly Hatchett over the years.

PROVIDED

Drummer Roger Earl has been with the British rock group Foghat since its inception in 1971. He will be back behind the kit when Foghat performs in concert at 8 p.m. Saturday at WinnaVegas Casino Resort.

With that hit, Wild Cherry went from playing small nightclubs to performing in arenas, opening for such R&B A-Listers as Earth, Wind & Fire, The Commodores and the Jackson Five.

Alas, their success ended with the days of disco.

After Wild Cherry disbanded, Bassett tried other occupations while taking a break from touring.

"I was living in Florida when I met Dave Peverett," he said. "I was a fan of Foghat back in the day and was pleased to discovered he was relaunching a version of the band."

Over time, Bassett started touring with alternate versions of Foghat that were headed by either Peverett or by founding drummer Roger Earl.

When Peverett, Earl and the other original members of Foghat reunited, Bassett began touring with Molly Hatchett, proving his point that versatility was the key to his success. He officially hooked up with Foghat again in 1999 and has been a band member ever since.

"You don't remain a working musician for more than 50 years without being versatile," he said.

In all that time, Bassett has never lost his love for live performance.

"There's nothing like live rock and roll to excite an audience," he said. "Now, we're playing it for audiences who grew up with Foghat on the radio as well as, maybe, their kids or grandkids."

Are there really three generations of Foghat fans?

"Well, there are plenty of young people who first played 'Slow Ride' on (the video game) 'Guitar Hero,'" Bassett said with a chuckle. "So now, we're suddenly a video game band as well as a new one."

Looking back at half-century as a real-life guitar hero, Bassett remains modest in spite of being a part of three classic rock bands.

"What really matter is loving what you do," he said. "I love performing and want to keep doing it for as long as I can."

THE BEST THINGS TO DO IN SIOUXLAND

1 Simply Ludacris!

Chris "Ludacris" Bridges is the ultimate triple threat. He's a rapper, a singer and, thanks to the billion "Fast & Furious" movies, a bona-fide movie star. Ludacris will be performing at Hard Rock Hotel & Casino's Battery Park at 7 p.m. Saturday.

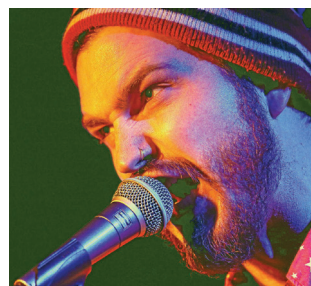

2 Spit take!

The Memphis-born Joseph Scott Sappington (aka Josey Scott) will be his hard rockin' band Saliva to the Marquee, 1225 Fourth St. at 6:30 p.m. Friday. They will be joined by Crystal Lizard and Sons of Somnus.

3 North of the Border soul!

The Toronto-based soul Bywater Call will be making their Sioux City debut at 8 p.m. Thursday at Vangarde Arts, 416 Pierce St. How will you know they're from Canada? We're guessing they'll say "Eh" a lot and, possibly, "about" instead of "about!"

4 Feline Premonitions!

If you see some pallid felines hanging around the Sioux City Public Museum, 607 Fourth St., be aware that GhostCat will be this week's Downtown Live band. This Sioux City-based indie band will be performing in front of the museum at 7 p.m. Friday.

Cover-ups!

The Gary and Dani Show, a musical duo made up of a dude named Gary and a chick named Dani, is one of Siouxland's prolific performers of cover songs. They'll be at it again for a 6 p.m. Friday show at 4 Brothers Grill & Bar, 3322 Singing Hills Blvd.

6 Abracadabra!

Magician Corey "The Magic Man" Fravel will dazzle you with some primo prestidigitation at 2 p.m. Sunday at the Betty Strong Encounter Center, 900 Larsen Park Road. Will he reveal the way that David Copperfield stays young, year after year? Nope, sorry, that's a trade secret.

Sioux City Hard Rock adds items from Taylor Swift, Prince, Willie Nelson and more

BY JARED MCNETT

Take a stroll through the Sioux City Hard Rock Hotel & Casino sometime soon and you'll see more than two dozen "new" pieces of memorabilia on display from music legends past and present.

Recently, a team from Hard Rock International moved in items from the likes of Taylor Swift, Prince and Willie Nelson, prepped them for showing and placed them in glass cases throughout the grounds of the entertainment complex. Some of the artifacts previously in those spots were carefully stowed away and will journey on to other Hard Rock properties or go back to the repository in Hollywood, Florida, where over 80,000 (yes, 80,000) pieces have passed through.

"A lot of our memorabilia collection is a revolving, living, breathing collection," said Carrie Schiraldi, a memorabilia designer for Hard Rock International. There's no set schedule for when things will move but Schiraldi said properties tend to see a refresh every seven-to-10 years.

Certain items on display, such as those from Sioux City native Tommy Bolin, will stay put (though his case is being reframed). "We always want to pay tribute to local artists," Schiraldi said.

So what all exactly is new? Well, Taylor Swift fans (Swifties) can check out a yellow beaded Mandalay dress the popstar wore during a photo shoot to promote her November 2009 "Saturday Night Live" episode.

Dig Prince? Well then you can marvel at a guitar, lyric sheet, suit and T-shirt from the Purple One. The lyric sheet has words for a track called "Strange" which doesn't show up in Prince's official catalog.

JESSE BROTHERS PHOTOS, THE WEEKENDER

"You see his penmanship and the songwriting process on that piece of paper," Schiraldi said. Those keen on Willie Nelson can take a look at a suede vest and blue bandana the country music outlaw wore while playing at the Farm Aid III concert in Lincoln, Nebraska in 1987.

Any and all articles of clothing are transported in garment bags. So when digs previously worn by Donna Summer, David Lee Roth, Johnny Cash, Britney Spears and Elvis Presley arrived at the Sioux City Hard Rock, they arrived in garment bags.

Mike Adams, the assistant general manager of the Sioux City Hard Rock, said the change out represents a wide array of artists. "This is such a diverse set of genres and age groups. It's this multitude of ages," he said.

He and Schiraldi explained the process was more than a year in the making and took a lot of conversations to figure out what might work where. Schiraldi said the Sioux City property "went above and beyond" in polling patrons about artists they'd like to see represented. A novelty Schiraldi was particularly excited to see installed in Sioux City is a turntable purchased by Jimi Hendrix and Jimi Hendrix Experience drummer Mitch Mitchell in September 1967 while on tour in Sweden. The pair bought the record player to listen to their then-new single "Burning of the Midnight Lamp."

"(We) love to display memorabilia that has a unique backstory," Schiraldi said.

Accompanying the record player are a used Jimi Hendrix guitar amplifier and a purple ruffled shirt he once rocked. Just down the hall from the Hendrix display is a feature for the band The Who which includes a Fender Stratocaster that guitarist Pete Townshend played for the group's 25th anniversary reunion tour and a shirt from drummer Keith Moon's personal collection. Moon died in 1978 at age 32.

Schiraldi said items from artists who are deceased aren't necessarily more difficult to acquire but do tend to cost more. As for living musicians, she said a good deal of them will sell various relics of theirs to auction houses and give the money to charities.

"There's a lot of good that comes from that," she said.

At least two of the wares from artists who've passed away didn't come intact. Now, the Sioux City Hard Rock can say its has smashed electric guitars from Nirvana's Kurt Cobain and Soundgarden's Chris Cornell.

And they'll be around for a while, Schiraldi said.

"You can be sure that it will have its home in Sioux City for several years.

I'll need to select a major in college

TWEEN
AND 20
WALLACE

DR. WALLACE: I know since my mother is an avid reader of yours that you were once a teacher before you worked in other jobs at schools, all before you eventually became a columnist.

How did you select the courses you attended in college back then? Were there more or less electives as compared to today? I'm curious to know since I have not figured out my path in college yet. I have not selected a major, so I'm taking lots of foundational classes in various subjects to get exposure to many subjects.

What criteria would you suggest I use to select what field of study I'd like to pursue, or to at least help me to narrow down the possibilities? I've finished one year of college, but this fall I feel I should start to think seriously about my ultimate major selection. — Still Undecided, via email

STILL UNDECIDED: I'd say that your thought process and actions thus far have been good. I always recommend to students unsure about a major course of study selection to sample various course subjects for the very purpose you've outlined.

In my day as a college student, there seemed to be more core courses required and that the selection of elective courses was a bit limited. However, that factor did not have the biggest impact on my selection. What did have the biggest impact? An excellent teacher!

I took a sociology course and found it much more interesting than I could ever have imagined going into the class. This excellent teacher brought the subject matter to life in a way that was not only compelling but interesting, enjoyable and provocative. The next semester I scanned the roster of courses offered and I saw that this same professor taught a more advanced level of this subject, so I enrolled for that class. Well, it turned out even better for me than the first one did!

From there I felt a keen interest in the subject, and I felt quite comfortable with my understanding and comprehension of the subject matter. Therefore, I suggest that you take a variety of courses, and those that you really find interesting and taught well, seek to follow up by enrolling in a slightly higher level of the same subject. The most important factor in my opinion is for you to find the material interesting and easy to comprehend. And then if you happen to have a few possible majors that rate equally with you, let the tiebreaker be the teacher or teachers you enjoyed the most.

I WANT THE WHOLE SUMMER OFF!

DR. WALLACE: I am a good high school athlete, but I have one complaint. Right now, it's summertime, and I'd like to have as much free time as possible to relax and spend good times with my friends.

However, my sport requires me to attend practices starting later this month, and I'm really not looking forward to them! Why can't all high school athletes have the full summer off? — I Need a Break, via email

I NEED A BREAK: Part of being an athlete is sacrificing your free time in order to improve your strength and conditioning, and your mastery of the fundamentals of your sport. This is true of many athletes at the high school, college and professional level here in America, and around the world as well.

You should consider yourself lucky that you have the physical talents to play your sport at your current level, and realize that this is part of the overall package of being a student athlete. Fortunately, for you, your teammates must meet the same criteria, therefore, you'll all have a shared experience, and you are not being singled out by any means.

I coached high school basketball for several years, and I can tell you that the players I had back in my day would occasionally complain about practices as well, but when the game days rolled around, all the complaints were long forgotten, and they were happy they had the endurance and skill development that allowed them to compete at an appropriate level.

We can stop HIV, Iowa.

A person living with HIV can take as little as one pill a day to help them achieve what's called an undetectable viral load.

When a person's viral load is undetectable, it protects their overall health. It also prevents HIV from passing to sexual partners!

Undetectable = Untransmittable
