ANSWERS FOR ALL YOUR WOES

TWEEN
12 AND 20
DR. ROBERT WALLACE

What should I do to help her?

DR. WALLACE: My friend is vaping, and this makes me want to help her quit right away! This week when I was hanging out with some of my close friends, one of them pulled out a Juul smoking device and continually used it in my car. We are both 17 so I'm not sure what the rules are on this type of smoking or vaping.

After talking with her a little bit more about it, it turns out she has been smoking it for over a year now consistently because she loves the various flavors! I've come to know a lot of information about how dangerous this can be, especially to someone of our ages. I am worried about her health and how addictive this device is.

How can I voice my opinion to her so that she does not smoke anymore without me coming off as judgmental or rude? — Want to Provide Subtle Help, via email

WANT TO PROVIDE SUBTLE HELP: Well, you can use the power of the federal government to bring this topic up to her. The Food and Drug Administration just announced last week that Juul must stop selling its vaping device and its tobacco- and menthol-flavored cartridges. This action was part of a sweeping effort by the agency to bring scientific scrutiny to the multibillion-dollar vaping industry after years of looking into the potential harm these devices and the inhaled vapors can cause to young people especially.

To stay on the market, companies must show that their e-cigarettes benefit public health. This theoretically means proving that adult smokers who use them are likely to quit or reduce their smoking, while teens are unlikely to get hooked on them. But there have been indications that many teens do become regular users, just as your friend has. Juul filed an appeal with the courts, and until the courts hear the case, Juul can continue to sell its electronic cigarettes, at least for now, as this created a temporary block of the government's ban. This matter is far from settled and will no doubt stay in the news over the next few months at least.

Use this matter to show your friend just how dangerous vaping can be to a 17-year-old girl. Read up on this matter and be sure to show her all you've learned as that may convince her to stop. And if she persists, it would be wise to discreetly notify her parents so that they can have an open discussion with her about this. Your letter did not mention whether her parents know about her vaping, but my guess is that they do not yet know. You have the power to change this, and accordingly, likely help your friend in the long run.

MY OLDER BROTHER MIGHT BE BINGEING

DR. WALLACE: My older brother lives at home even though he recently turned 20 and attends a college about 25 minutes away from our family's home. He's usually home during the week but he stays with his college friends over the weekend most of the time.

I'm his younger sister and I care a lot about him since we've always been pretty close. We are the two oldest siblings out of four in total. The younger ones are 10 and 12, so the age gap leaves us with two sets of two siblings for the most part. Anyhow, I was hanging out this past weekend with my friends and I overheard at a backyard barbecue that someone was saying that my older brother is a binge drinker who blacks out! I couldn't believe my ears! Nobody knew who I was or that I was related to him, since when I overheard this my best friend was inside the house and the people talking had no idea who I was. But I know it's him they were referring to because they discussed some details like his vehicle type and his personal features.

What should I do about this if anything? I love him and don't want anything bad to happen to him. — Worried Sister, via email

WORRIED SISTER: Speak to your brother immediately and tell him directly what you heard. Let him know you love him and that you'll help him in every way you can. He may confirm this, but he might also deny it. Do your best to study him and ask around to find out if the story you heard is true.

If you're convinced it is true and if he continues to deny any binge drinking, then you must inform your parents right away. Yes, your brother is an adult as he's over 18, but he's not yet 21 so he should not be drinking alcohol at all, much less binge drinking. Since he's living in your parents' home, they have a right to know what is going on with their son while he's living under their roof.

Inform your parents for your brother's own good. If you sit silently by now that you know this, you risk living a life of regret if something tragic were to happen to him while you did nothing to try to help him get the support and assistance he urgently needs. You love your brother and if he's bingeing, he urgently needs help. Binge drinking is extremely dangerous for the drinker and for others in the immediate vicinity of such a person once deep intoxication kicks in.

ASTRO ADVICE EUGENIA LAST

CANCER (June 21-July 22):

Don't settle for less or take on too much. Evaluate your position and what others expect, and you'll come up with a rational alternative. Set boundaries, limit your spending and keep a cool head.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22):

Distance yourself from unreliable people. Consider what you want, then look at the best way to reach your target. Doing things for yourself will promote discipline and help you get the best results.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22):

You'll be open to suggestions and will get the support and help you require to fulfill your needs. Be creative with investments, contracts and how you handle health concerns.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23):

Make a point to study the broader view of whatever situation you face before narrowing things down. Say less and do more to avoid any potential issues. Be true to yourself.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22):

Take charge before someone tries to beat you to it. If change is required, start doing what's necessary to get to where you want to go. Speak up, and take a firm hand with meddlers.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21):

Set your sights on what you want, and don't stop until you are satisfied with what transpires. Set partnership rules and keep communication flowing. Cool heads will be required.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19):

Be a good listener, and you'll know exactly how to have an impact on others. A change at home will help bring you closer to your desired lifestyle. Pay attention to your work/life balance.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19):

Observation will reveal what's going on around you. Bide your time, watch for signs and symbols, and make plans geared toward better health and happiness. Express your feelings and intentions.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20):

Offer help, and you'll receive the same in return. Associate with people who share your concerns. Take the initiative to come up with and present a unique way to make improvements. Trust your gut.

ARIES (March 21-April 19):

Tread carefully. Not everyone will be on your side. Be aware of insincere gestures. Don't react to something without sufficient evidence; take a moment to discover the truth firsthand.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20):

A passionate path will take you where you want to go. It's OK to veer off in a direction that adds to your journey's flavor. Explore and discover, but also know when to say no. Follow your heart.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20):

First, take care of money, contracts and medical issues. Set priorities that help support your efforts. A sustainable lifestyle will highlight your best traits. Be open, honest and reliable.

Poor piggies

A rural Early, Iowa, woman was arrested June 30 after more than 1,000 deceased hogs were discovered at two hog confinements in Sac County.

Elana May Laber, 33, was charged with two counts of livestock neglect and two counts of first-degree criminal mischief.

After receiving a report about the dead hogs, law enforcement officers responded to two separate hog confinement sites, which are located approximately half a mile apart from each other on Otter Avenue.

A statement from the Sac County Sheriff's Office said that deputies interviewed Laber, whose job is to maintain both sites. Laber first told deputies that someone had shut off the breakers that control the electricity the night before, causing the hogs' deaths. It was determined after a veterinarian inspection that the hogs had been dead for at least a week, according to the statement. Laber later told deputies that she knew the hogs had been dead for a week but did not know what to do. The hogs were in different stages of decomposition. They had no access to feed or water.

The hogs were owned by Corey AGR Inc., of Lytton, Iowa. The estimated loss is more than $150,000, according to the statement.

Laber was held at Sac County Jail in lieu of $22,000 cash bond.

JESSE BROTHERS PHOOTS, THE WEEKENDER

ABOVE: Hollie Fahrendholz sits in her 1950 Chevrolet Styleline DeLuxe at the Sioux City Journal parking lot. Fahrendholz said women can be as fanatical about cars as any guy.

BELOW: Zach Ankrum opens the hood to his 1964 Chevrolet C10 truck at the Journal parking lot. Ankrum's rebuilt truck will be one of the vintage vehicles seen at the 8th annual Scene of the Crash Car Show, Friday and Saturday, at Dakota/Thurston County Fairgrounds in South Sioux City.

Scene of the Crash Rockabilly Car Show revs up for its eighth year

BY EARL HORLYK

How can you turn a 60-year-old Buick Skylark into a drag racer? Jack it up, paint it red and give the dashboard a fake furry makeover, for starters.

In other words, leave it in the experienced hands of Rodney Reisdorph, who has a knack for switching up vintage automobiles by giving them some rockabilly love.

"At first, I thought a 1962 Skylark was too new a model for me," the Sioux Cityan and proud owner of a 1953 rust-colored Chevy 210 sedan, explained. "But I figured, what the hell. I needed a wintertime project and restoring cars is relaxing for me."

Currently in its eighth year, it will take place Friday and Saturday at South Sioux City's Dakota/Thurston County Fairgrounds, 1527 Stable Drive.

In addition to showing off a host of mainly post-WWII era cars, Scene of the Crash will also offer mini bike ride, hot rod dirt drags, food trucks kid activities as well as a Bettie Page-style beauty contest, hosted by Rodney Reisdorph's wife Kara, who is also a dead ringer for Page, AKA the 1950s "Queen of the Pinups."

"I knew Rodney was way into cars when we were dating," Kara Reisdorph said.

Indeed, both of the Reisdorphs call their nearly 70-year-old Chevy sedan the couple's "honeymoon car."

"We drove from Sioux City to Las Vegas in Rodney's rusty little sedan," Kara Reisdorph remembered with a laugh. "I figured it must be love since I stay married to a guy who drives cross-country in a car with absolutely no air conditioning."

While Kara prefers to stay in the passenger seat in her husband's cars, Hollie Fahrendholz can't wait to get behind the steering wheel of the 1950 Chevrolet Styleline Deluxe that she and Varian Green completely refurbished.

"When you think of cars, you think it will be a guy thing," Fahrendholz said, standing in front of the cherry-red car. "But when there's a woman behind the wheel you know she means business."

Green can identify that it takes a certain personality to drive a car that has seen more than a few birthdays.

"I'll drive a vintage car to work every day," he explained. "People will see me driving on the Interstate, figuring I'd be slow or something. Then, I'll gun it and pass them with no problem."

Like Green and Reisdorph, Zach Ankrum is a Scene of the Crash veteran.

The Sioux City man is proud of his 1964 Chevy C-10 pickup truck. So is his favorite passenger.

"Kids love cars, trucks and anything that moves," Ankrum said. "When my 3-year-old daughter Rory sees me pulling in the driveway with my shiny green green pickup, she's grinning from ear-to-ear."

Rory is even happier when she and her dad make a fast getaway.

"What's your favorite thing to do when you're in daddy's truck?" Ankrum asked.

"I like it when we burnout of a parking lot," Rory said without much hesitation.

"Now, that's a girl who will be interesting to watch growing up as a teenager," Kara Reisdorph noted with a smile.

However, her husband was quick to point out that Scene of the Crash has a strong family

Kara Reisdorph stands beside her husband Rodney Reisdorph's 1953 Chevrolet 210 sedan. The Reisdorphs the rusty vehicle "their honeymoon car." The couple traveled from Sioux City to Las Vegas without air conditioning.

LEFT: Rory Ankrum, 3, and her father Zach Ankrum sit on the tailgate of Zach's 1964 Chevrolet C10 at the Sioux City Journal parking lot. A budding car aficionado, Rory said she likes it when her dad "burns out" of parking lot with his truck. element.

A portion of the event's proceeds will go to Midwest Welding Academy, which offers a free, weeklong welding class for teenagers.

Which is important to Reisdorph, who was a son of a gearhead and a dad of a gearhead.

"That's how a lot of us got started," he explained. "We became interested in cars because we had family members who were always fixing something interesting the garage."

Standing in front of a display of vintage cars at the Sioux City Journal parking lot, Reisdorph said Scene of the Crash differs from other car shows.

"Sometimes, you'll see guys with old-timey cars that are so valuable that they're driven on special occasions," he said, shaking his head. "Where's the fun in that?"

"At Scene of the Crash, our guys love driving their cars everywhere and don't mind the stares that come our way," Reisdorph added.

Um, please remember this is the same dude who owns a jacked-up 1962 Buick Skylark dragster with a fake fur dashboard saying it.

"I love my dragster," Reisdorph said. "It's the perfect ride for me."

Should you be second fiddle at a wedding?

DEAR ANNIE
ANNIE LANE

Dear Annie: My good friend “Sara” has a son who is getting married at the beginning of August. I have been in constant communication with Sara, offering help and telling her that I would love to be at the wedding. I have known Sara since high school, and we are close.

I was told in May that it will be a small wedding with only family. It will also be a destination wedding, and apparently there was not room for extra people, including me. I had no problem with this at all.

I received a call today from Sara, stating that they have a lot of “no” RSVPs and that they are now on their “B” list and that I am now invited. Our other high school girlfriends have already pooled together and are sharing an Airbnb. (I was the last one called.) I was not included and will need to get a hotel room by myself.

I am hurt. I was the first to be told about the wedding and was not pushy to get myself invited, understanding the constraints of a wedding, since I went through that with my son.

I have never met Sara’s son and have very little contact with her husband. Should I go? The flight would cost $1,000, and the hotel would be $250 a night — not to mention the cost of a gift, rental car, etc. I only received a phone invitation. What do other B-list invitees do? — Left Behind

Dear Left Behind: I can certainly understand feeling left out, but remember this is not Sara’s wedding. It is her son’s wedding, who you have never met. It is entirely possible that he has some type of relationship with Sara’s other girlfriends who were invited before you.

You should go only if you want to go. Would you have fun celebrating the couple, or would you feel left out and resentful the whole time? Can you afford it, or would you be stressing out about the cost? Once you answer these questions, you will know which decision is best.

Dear Annie: I’ve been married to a wonderful man for the past 32-plus years. Our life together has been filled with love and laughter, yet, due to my infertility issues, we have no children. I was unable to carry a baby to term the one time I did get pregnant (after more than 15 years of trying), and after that terrible miscarriage, we were both concerned if I tried it again, it could kill me, so we chose to stop. I’ve come to terms with that over the years, although it’s been really tough.

Over the past almost decade, my in-laws have virtually ignored my husband and me to go “play with the grandchildren” and other family members who all have children. My husband gets calls from his mother usually every month, yet she hasn’t called me in over six years. This was once a woman I was extremely close with, like my second mother, yet I’ve felt the distance getting wider and wider all the time as this favoritism worsens.

How do I either cut her out of my life permanently or repair this break? I can’t take this stalemate much longer. — Heartbroken in Oregon

Dear Heartbroken: I’m so sorry for your and your husband’s loss and the difficulty you’ve faced with infertility.

Someone who was once close enough to be like your “second mother” and who’s still close with your husband is surely worth at least attempting to make peace with. Have you tried reaching out to her over the years? Is it possible she hasn’t known all that you and your husband have been through? Start by making contact and proposing lunch or coffee for just the two of you.

At the end of the day, you can only control how you choose to move forward. Family is obviously very important to you and your in-laws. I’d say it’s definitely a relationship worth at least trying to mend.
