QUESTION OF THE WEEK

What is the best thing you've found at a thrift store/garage sale?

Chad Pauling
Publisher

@siouxcityjournal.com
"My mother-in-law loved to go to garage sales and, 12 years ago, she stumbled on a compound miter saw at one. Craftsman brand, like new, had the laser guide and everything. Great saw! I was able to snap it up cheap and still have it and use it to this day."

"I'm more of a browser than a buyer. But if I was ever in the market for a poseable California Raisin doll or a DVD of a Pauly Shore movie, every thrift shop has them."

Mason Dockter
Staff Writer
mdockter@siouxcityjournal.com

"Pretty much everything I own came from those places."

The acclaimed Villalobos Brothers to cap off Hispanic Heritage Month with SC Symphony concert

BY EARL HORLYK

Luis Villalobos was a long way from his native Xalapa, Mexico.

The youngest of the violin-playing Villalobos Brothers discovered that fact the hard way as he answered a reporter's question while taking a walk in Boston on a brisk morning in October.

"I've lived in Boston for a while now but I'll never get used to how cold the winds can be at times," Luis Villalobos said, shivering, as traveled neighborhood streets.

Hopefully, Luis, along with brothers Ernesto and Alberto and guitarist Humberto Flores, will receive a warmer reception as guest artists during a special Sioux City engagement.

As a grand finale for Hispanic Heritage Month, the Sioux City Symphony Orchestra will present an evening with the Villalobos Brothers at 7:30 p.m. Friday at the Orpheum Theatre, 528 Pierce St.

Known for their high energy performances, the brothers have worked with some of the finest symphonies in the world as well as collaborating with such eclectic performers as Dolly Parton and Bruce Springsteen.

Yet Villalobos' interest in music began by listening to their grandmother Cristina Vasquez play music at country fandangos and coastal restaurants about an hour away from the port city of Vera Cruz.

Eventually studying under acclaimed classical violinist Carlos Marrufo Gurrutia, the brothers earned solo appearances with symphony orchestras throughout North and South America while still children.

While eldest brother Ernesto carried out his graduate studies at the Manhattan School of Music, in New York, middle brother Alberto studied violin in Brussels and Switzerland.

Luis' studies took him to Germany and Austria.

"If me and my brothers were to play music at the highest level, we had to leave Mexico," he said.

MARIANA OSORIO

From left: Alberto Villalobos, Humberto Flores, Luis Villalobos and Ernesto Villalobos of the Villalobos Brothers. They will be all performing with the Sioux City Symphony Orchestra at 7:30 p.m. Saturday at the Orpheum Theatre.

"There was really no other choice."

Even though the Villalobos Brothers are classically trained violinists, their music draws upon the rich history of Mexican folk music as well as a few nods to the fundamentals of jazz, rock and blues.

"We could not play our style of music without classical training," Luis Villalobos said. "We needed the background in order to fit in with symphonies."

Bottom line: that remains the sweet spots for the Villalobos Brothers.

"Nothing can match the sound of a symphony orchestra in a theater setting," Luis said. "It is wonderful."

JOIN THE PARTY: As a part of Hispanic Heritage, the South Sioux City dance company, Ballet Folklórico Estrellas De Jalisco – under the direction of Lily Quinonez – will perform on stage with the Villalobos Brothers. A local mariachi band, Mariachi Los Rancheros, will perform from 9:30 - 11:30 p.m., after the concert, in the Orpheum lobby. Food trucks will be serving Mexican dishes on Pierce Street for a special Symphony block party.

Brothers bring in a different audiences because of their music.

"There are people who make a distinction between being an artist and an entertainer," Luis said. "I think me and my brothers bridge that gap. We are both artists and entertainers."

Of greater importance is the Villalobos Brothers' willingness to give back. They will be performing a special all-school assembly for students at Sioux City's new Hunt A+ Arts Elementary School on Friday afternoon.

"Everybody in my family started playing the violin before the age of 5," Luis said. "Even though we come from a different country, we've always felt comfortable knowing that music is such a universal language."

"No matter where we perform, we want to share our love of music with the younger generation," he continued. "We have to make sure that the music goes on and on."

All that glitters is not 18 karat

Caveat emptor: It turns out that buying jewelry off a stranger in a gas station parking lot can result in buyer's remorse.

The same could be said of buying Florida real estate from somebody in a public toilet.

The Sioux City Police Department is warning residents about scammers who are selling fake gold jewelry in local parking lots.

The department said in a social media post last week that a local jeweler reported that six individuals came into their store this week to have jewelry appraised. The individuals bought the jewelry from unknown people in parking lots. All of the items turned out to be fake, according to the department.

"The scammers claim they are a stranded, down on their luck family and need the money for gas," the department said. "They have been seen in the parking lots of the Pilot Travel Center, the Singing Hills gas station and the Southern Hills Casey's lot. Although the jewelry is stamped 18k, it is not real and has zero value."

Wild night in Sioux County

A Springfield, South Dakota, man was arrested shortly after midnight Oct. 9 on multiple charges after leading deputies on a pursuit that began north of Maurice, Iowa.

At 12:31 a.m. Oct. 9, the Sioux County Sheriff's Office arrested Jeremy Langley, 37, on a felony charge of second-degree criminal mischief and misdemeanor charges of eluding, possession of a controlled substance - cannabidiol, and interference with official acts.

The pursuit began after a deputy attempted to stop the vehicle Langley was driving.

The sheriff's office said in a statement that Langley began driving erratically, striking a vehicle parked near the Sioux County Regional Airport and a building owned by the airport. Then, he turned and struck the deputy's vehicle. After striking the patrol vehicle, Langley and his passenger, Mark Stewart, 40, of Aurelia, Iowa, fled from the vehicle, running into a cornfield. A female passenger, who was not charged, remained in the vehicle.

Langley and Stewart were found in the cornfield and taken into custody without incident. Stewart was charged with interference with official acts.

The sheriff's office was assisted by its drone unit, the Orange City Police Department, Sioux Center Police Department, Rock Valley Police Department, Plymouth County Sheriff's Office K-9 unit, Sioux Center Ambulance and Maurice first responders.

Fashion that rocks!

Creative couture with an artistic edge on the runway at the Sound & Style Fashion Show

BY EARL HORLYK

Dressed entirely in pink, Melissa Gillette was able to wave a feathered fan with considerable aplomb.

That's because the 23-year-old Sioux City woman has worked as a fashion model since she was a teenager.

"Confidence is key to being a model," Gillette explained. "Even if you make a mistake, you can pretend it was deliberate."

Chances are good that she will be making all the right moves on the catwalk at the Sound & Style Fashion Festival, taking place at 6 p.m. Oct. 22 at the historic Abu Bekr Shrine Temple, 820 Nebraska St.

A fundraiser for the Sioux City Conservatory of Music, the fashion fest will feature several pop-up shops, a fashion show and music provided by the legendary punk rock band T.S.O.L. headed up by Ron Emory, who founded the music conservatory with his wife Gia Emory.

"From Elvis Presley to David Bowie to Prince, there has always been a connection between the music world and the world of fashion," Gia Emory said. "The way they looked was as memorable as the way they sounded."

"Fashion, as well as music, reflects how we want the world to view us," she continued.

Indeed, Gia Emory knows a thing or two about red carpet couture. For many years, she was a West Coast stylist for such fashionable females as Britney Spears and Priscilla Presley.

While the fashion show will showcase runway-worthy works by designers from California, Minneapolis and Omaha, Sound & Style's real stars may be the local fashionistas whose duds have been curated especially for this hip catwalk.

Chloie Roupe, an East High School junior, will be among the young designers in the spotlight.

Describing her style as being both retro and futuristic at the same time, Roupe cites singer Lady Gaga, designer Betsy Johnson and her own grandmother as fashion inspiration.

"My grandma taught me how to sew," she explained. "I've been experimenting with fashion ever since."

Apparently, Roupe has been finding a lot of fabric from thrift store bins.

So has Alexis Valdovinos, who designs creative crop tops with his sister Karla Valdovinos as well as Gia Emory's daughter Grace Emory.

"Vintage clothing is popular nowadays," Alexis Valdovinos said. "And the best and cheapest place for retro patterns and material is at the charity stores."

Not only will such old-is-new-again looks make you look trendy, it is also a great way to "upcycle."

"Upcycling' is just a term that means you're giving new like or new meaning to clothing that would ordinarily be thrown away," Alexis Valdovinos said. "Clothing from the 1990s and the early 2000s are especially popular."

But if you ask designer Aziel Watts, vintage clothing from as early as World War II is even cooler.

"The military look really looks good in fashion," he said.

Gia Emory is just happy that her designers are going green when it comes to recycling fashion.

"I've always said the best way to save the world is to buy vintage," she said. "I'm glad my Sound & Style designers are taking that to heart."

To be fair, so are many of Emory's models.

"I love vintage looks because THINGS TO SEE: Fashion show featuring work from both new and established designers; pop-up shops; plus a "Circus Soiree" concert with legendary punk band T.S.O.L.

they look classy," Gillette, who is an artist when she isn't modeling clothes, explained.

One piece of clothing that she won't purchase second-hand is footwear.

"The first time I wore high heels was when I went shoe shopping with my mom at JCPenney when I was in middle school," Gillette remembered. "I could barely walk in them and mom made me take off."

Like Gillette, model Grace Granquist's first high heel experience was during middle school.

"I learned to love high heels," Granquist said, somewhat surprisingly since she was modeling an Arabia Nights-inspired outfit in bare feet.

Another difference between Granquist and fellow model Gillette is in the latter's choice of occupation.

"When I'm not modeling clothes, I'm making deliveries for UPS," she said. "You can't beat them for their benefits."

However, Granquist will be runway-ready as part of the Sound & Style fashion show.

"I'll be dressed in a outfit that looks like it right out of the movies," she said. "Plus the show will be at (the Abu Bekr Shrine Temple) which also looks like it is out of the movies."

Martha,
Assistant
Machine Operators

Wells has valued Siouxland for more than 100 years.

We are proud to be hiring and are fully committed to the Ice Cream Capital of the World.

Siouxland has been our home since 1913, and we are proud to have made Le Mars the Ice Cream Capital of the World.®

As a family company with strong values and deep roots here, Wells Enterprises cares deeply about our employees, their families and the entire Siouxland community.

Because we care about Siouxland, we continually invest in quality-of-life projects, local non-profits and community initiatives that help make our beautiful region a great place to work, live and play.

Between our corporate headquarters and two state-of-the-art manufacturing plants in Le Mars, we power more than 2,700 local jobs. And we're continuing to hire in the areas of Finance, IT, HR, Engineering, Operations, R&D, Sales, Marketing, Procurement and more.

Like you, we're proud to have made Siouxland home for more than 100 years. We invite you to join us for the next 100 years.
