THE BEST THINGS TO DO IN SIOUXLAND

1 Fall fest, Farmer's Market-style!

Even though the Sioux City Farmers Market will be finishing its season at the end of the month, organizers will be throwing a Fall Fest, complete pumpkin painting, trick-or-treating and a pet costume contest from 8 a.m. to 1 p.m. Saturday on the corner of Pearl Street and Tri-View Avenue.

2 High-flying weekend

One wouldn't naturally assume that drinking and climbing walls would go hand-in-hand. But Oktoberfest beer will be served at Climb Long Lines, 401 Gordon Drive, from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. Saturday and Sunday. Will there also be a Climb Long Lines beer yoga class at 2 p.m. Saturday? Of course, stay limber.

3 Ew, bugs!

Welcome cooler weather while visiting some four, six or more-legged creatures from the bug world. Iowa State University's Insect Zoo is coming to the Dorothy Pecaut Nature Center, 4500 Sioux River Road, from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Saturday.

4 Watch out for skyward gourds!

Cone Park, 3800 Line Drive, is bringing back its popular Cone-Acopia Fall Fest from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. Sunday. In addition to hayrack rides and fall tubing, they promise there will be pumpkin catapulting. Is it a bird, is it a plane? No, it's a pumpkin!

5 Spooky stuff spotted in downtown Sioux City!

Nightmare on Fourth Street and the Fear Factory are back to ruin your Halloween at 6:30 p.m. to midnight at 1229 Fourth Street. Two haunted houses in one location? Why that it is both spooky and ooky!

6 Blow, man, blow!

Even though Peter Harper may look like he's being attacked by some exotic creature, the acclaimed musician will be safe when he plays a show at 8 p.m. Saturday at Vanguard Arts, 416 Pierce St. And that thing attacking Harper? It's actually a musical instrument called a didgeridoo and, yes, it is creepy looking.

Formed in 1967, signed in 1971 and fronted by iconic vocalist Kevin Cronin since 1972, REO Speedwagon's unrelenting drive helped to spur on a burgeoning rock movement in the Midwest. The band is best known for such fan favorites as "Keep on Loving You," "Take It on the Run" and "Can't Fight This Feeling."

Nature Calls raises over $78,000 for Nature Center

The Woodbury County Conservation Foundation's 18th annual Nature Calls, held Sept. 24 at the Sioux City Convention Center, had a record-breaking year.

More than $78,500 was raised to benefit the Dorothy Pecaut Nature Center's educational programs. Organizers say that this is the event's largest-grossing event to date, boasting $16,000 more than its previous record.

The event, which combined a nature art show, auction, raffle, beer and wine tasting in a casual setting, drew nearly 600 people.

"This year's crowd was offered 72 brews and six wines from (local breweries and wineries)," Nature Center programs director Dawn Snyder said. "The response from sponsors and the community was extremely generous."

Proceeds from Nature Calls will provide funds for nature education programs and educational exhibits. This year's proceeds will supplement funding for summer naturalist interns for the 4500 Sioux River Road facility's youth and family programs.

For information on the Nature Center's programs, events and exhibitions, call 712-258-0838 or visit woodburyparks.org.

TIM HYNDS, SIOUX CITY JOURNAL

Dawn Snyder, education program director at the Woodbury Conservation Board's Dorothy Pecaut Nature Center, said the Nature Calls fundraiser, held Sept. 24, raised more than $78,000.

Big laughs, bigger panties!

Comic Leanne Morgan to show the funny side of family life at Orpheum show

BY EARL HORLYK

“Sweetie,” “Darlin’” and “Angel.”

Those are the names standup comedian Leanne Morgan called me during a 30-minute phone interview.

While it was easy to lose track but descriptive phrases like “sweet angel” and “honey darlin’” may have also cropped up in our conversation.

“I’m a country girl,” Morgan explained. “We all talk like this where I come from.”

Although Morgan

currently resides in San Antonio, she was raised in a small town right on the Kentucky-Tennessee border in the beautiful Appalachian Mountains.

With more than 22 years in comedy under her belt, she will be bringing her “Big Panty Tour” to the Orpheum Theatre, 528 Pierce St., at 7 p.m. Saturday.

“I’ll have on big panties, and I suggest you do, too,” Morgan said, before adding, “Oh, people in little panties are welcome as well.”

Even as a child, she wanted to become a comedian.

“Everybody in my family was funny,” Morgan explained. “My grandparents were funny and my dad was a natural storyteller.”

Actually it was Morgan’s mom who allowed her to skip kindergarten to stay home and watch “Hollywood Squares” and “Match Game” on TV.

“Guess my early comedic influences were family as well as Paul Lynde and Charles Nelson Reilly,” she offered with a laugh.

Although she grew up in the very small town of Does size matter? Comedian Leanne Morgan will be comfy in her big panties when she performs her standup show at 7 p.m. Saturday at the Orpheum Theatre.

of standups like Roseanne Barr, Ray Romano and Jim Gaffigan, she preferred raising her family away from the spotlight.

“I got to have a career on my own terms,” Morgan explained. “I was very lucky.”

Indeed, with all of her kids grown, Morgan and her husband now dote on their 2-year-old grandson.

That is whenever she isn’t on her “Big Panty Tour.”

“I’m home during the week and play great historic theaters on the weekends,” Morgan said. “That’s fun.”

Plus she has been growing her fan base in other ways.

Morgan has garnered more than 1.5 million followers across social media and her “So Yummy” stand-up special has reached more than 50 million views on YouTube.

“If a person has an accent, they think it’s only for Southern people,” she said. “Or if you talk about being a mom, it only appeals to other women.”

“I think my comedy can be relatable to all types of people,” Morgan added.

Regardless of a person’s panty size.

Adams, Tennessee, Morgan said it was within driving distance of Nashville.

“Dad would take me to the old Service Merchandise store in Henderson, Tennessee,” she recalled. “There, we saw Barbara Mandrell and Porter Wagoner waiting in line just like regular people.”

It was then and there that Morgan said she was smitten by the show biz bug.

Yet the prospect of moving to Los Angeles was too daunting. Instead, she went to college, got married and started raising a family.

“It was after my son was born that I needed a little extra spending money,” Morgan said. “My baby was fine but I wanted to tuck a bit away in case I wanted to splurge at TJ Maxx.”

In order to secure some “TJ Maxx” money, she began selling jewelry at home parties.

“I was supposed to talk up the jewelry,” Morgan said. “Instead, I talked about breastfeeding, hemorrhoids and being a mom. You know, all of the important topics in life.”

Apparently, Morgan’s

approach worked with her customers as well as for the jewelry company.

“I began speaking at big sales rallies,” she explained. “It was there that people began telling me to do standup.”

With a husband, a son and, now, two daughters, Morgan began working the comedy circuit.

Discussing everything from being a wife, a mom and a Weight Watchers dropout, her brand of homespun humor soon attracted the attention of Hollywood heavy hitters.

“I’ve had development deals for sitcoms with ABC, Warner Brothers and TVLand,” Morgan explained. “None of them panned out, which may have been a blessing in disguise.”

While she admired the small screen success

EARL HORLYK, THE WEEKENDER

Singer-songwriter Eric Atchison will be one of the local performers penning original material for a community-wide End Gun Violence program, taking place at The Block, 1309 Pierce St., beginning at 2 p.m. Oct. 15.

Changing minds through music

Writers to pen material against gun violence

BY EARL HORLYK

Music can inspire ideas, spur on emotions and, perhaps, change a few minds.

That was the hope of Sioux City-based singer-songwriter Eric Atchison, who is slated to be a part of a community-wide program calling attention to gun violence.

"I haven't been impacted by gun violence personally," Atchison, who has performed in showcases throughout the city, explained. "Although, I've known people who've had first-hand experience."

Sponsored by the Sioux City Conservatory of Music, the End Gun Violence Community Songwriting contest will be held Oct. 15 at The Block, 1309 Pierce St.

According to the music conservatory's Gia Emory, the program will begin with a panel discussion with Gary Niles, a chief juvenile court officer with Iowa's Third Judicial District; Erin Binneboese, the contracting director for the Siouxland Human Investment Partnership; and Lynn Watson, a longtime advocate.

"It was Lynn who inspired this event," Emory said. "With so many instances of gun violence, especially in schools, Lynn was wondering where did all of the protest music go."

Beginning at 4 p.m., people in youth and adult categories are invited to recite, sing, rap or play original material focused on ending gun violence.

At 7 p.m. finalists will be asked to compete for judges.

The best adult performer and best youth performer will receive a $1,000 prize. Second and third place finishers, in both age groups, will receive $500 and $250, respectively, in their categories.

In addition, voter's registration forms will be available as will other types of information.

"The performing arts have a long history in calling attention to important issues of the day," Emory said. "What can be more important than keeping our kids safe from violence?"
