Huish Children’s Boutique in Windsor hosted a toy drive with a great turn out. Marie Winter, owner, and Rose, photographer from Samuel Studios, greeted patrons with hot cocoa and a visit from Santa. Children and parents filled the Town Green that evening to participate in the annual tree lighting event.

At Thrive Hydroponics in Healdsburg, Donna and her team strive to deliver the best customer service and highest quality products to help farmers, from hobbyists to commercial growers, with everything they need. They’ve got over a decade of experience working with key industry distributors in order to deliver the best products and prices to their customers. The experts at Thrive Hydroponics are always happy to assist you your questions and will do everything they can to help you succeed in your ventures.

At Lynmar Estate Winery, Proprietors Lynn and Anisya Fritz have recently planted new Monarch butterfly and pollinator sanctuaries to provide hundreds of feet of climate-smart native plants at their vineyard in west Sonoma County. In addition to their existing certified bee friendly gardens, regenerative farming practices, and so much more, these new sanctuaries represent Lynmar’s continued commitment to fostering biodiversity, ecological awareness, and a whole Earth approach to their actions and land use. Stewardship and sustainability, core values at Lynmar, are evident everywhere you look when you visit this hidden gem.
