CARD OF THANKS:

I would like to thank everyone for the prayers while I was in the hospital. First of, I would like to thank the Audubon Fire and Rescue and the Audubon Hospital Staff. To Pastor Carla Evers and Pastor Kevin Evers for coming to see me and bringing Communion.

I also want to thank the Audubon Lions Club and Sisters in Service at First United Methodist Church. Huge thank you for all the cards, flowers and the food we received. It was overwhelming!! Big thanks for my family who was beside me all the way. I couldn't have done it without them. Much Love, Patti Deist, LaVerne (Bub), Jeff and Cindy Deist, Julie, Kaylin and Logan McVay. POET

"The Vampire Lestat" is fulfilling a long-held career dream for Eric Bogosian. Known for the play and the 1988 movie "Talk Radio" and TV's "Law & Order: Criminal Intent" and "Succession," the actor-playwright had long wanted to be involved in a project about vampires before the AMC and AMC+ series version of Anne Rice's novel "Interview With the Vampire" came his way. He has continued his role as un-dead-interviewing journalist Daniel Molloy – now transformed into a bloodsucker himself – in the third season of the show, renamed "The Vampire Lestat" (after another Rice book in the franchise) and starting new episodes Sundays on the same channels. "I guess I've loved vampires all the way back to Bela Lugosi ['Son of Frankenstein,' 1939] doing 'Dracula,'" Bogosian reflects, "but for me, it was Frank Langella ['Frost/Nixon,' 2008] on Broad-way in 1977 playing Dracula that I understood the power in a vampire role. Let's just skip for-ward to Anne Rice. She asks big questions in her books about immortality, about what relationships – what a person is, just what makes up a personality. That's a big part of this season [of 'The Vampire Lestat'], for sure, so here we are. "I wanted to play a classic vampire guy with fangs, who bites people and sucks blood, and that was all I really needed," Bogosian adds. "Instead, I ended up being thrown into the seven circles of hell with this show and all the craziness that comes with it, and it's wonderfully challenging. I'm playing this guy who vibrates very close to me, and now, he's a vampire. Even if he wasn't good at life, he's a very rational guy and he's led a rational life, and now, he's in this very chaotic vampiric universe where normal logic does not apply." Indeed, Bogosian has had to make some very big shifts as his alter ego in "The Vampire Lestat" has changed. "Consequences work very differently in your life when you're immortal," he notes. "Daniel is in just a completely other universe, but everybody else has been turned into a vampire, so I guess everyone has the same traumas." Birthdate: April 24, 1953 Birthplace: Boston, Mass. Current residences: New York and New Jersey Marital status: Married; he has two sons Other television credits include: "Talamasca: The Secret Order," "Instinct," "Succession," "Bil lions," "The Get Down," "Elementary," "The Good Wife," "Law & Order: Criminal Intent," "Love Monkey," "Scrubs," "Blonde," "Third Watch," "Welcome to New York," "Beggars and Choosers," "A White Shining Lie," "High Incident," "Witch Hunt," "The Larry Sanders Show," "Law & Order," "The Caine Mutiny Court Martial," "Crime Story," "Reading Rainbow," "The Twilight Zone," "Tales From the Darkside," "Miami Vice" Movie credits include: "Make Me Famous," "Uncut Gems," "Rebel in the Rye," "Don't Go in the Woods," "Cadillac Records," "Heights," "Blade: Trinity," "King of the Corner," "Charlie's Angels: Full Throttle," "Ararat," "Igby Goes Down," "Wake Up and Smell the Coffee" (also writer), "In the Weeds," "Gossip," "Safe Men," "Deconstructing Harry," "Suburbia" (writer), "Beavis and Butt-Head Do America," "The Substance of Fire," "Under Siege 2: Dark Territory," "Dolores Claiborne," "Sex, Drugs, Rock & Roll," "Talk Radio" (also writer), "Special Effects," "Born in Flames"

Clint Eastwood

OF (GENERAL QUESTION) ON (GENERAL QUESTION)

Q: I've been seeing frequent TV showings of the Westerns that Clint Eastwood made overseas and that made him a superstar. Was he still doing the series "Rawhide" at the time he did those?

A: For the first two of the three movies, yes. What's ironic is that "A Fistful of Dollars" (1964) originally was offered to his fellow CBS "Rawhide" star Eric Fleming, who turned it down. Another actor who rejected it was Richard Harrison, who reportedly was the one who recommended Eastwood to director Sergio Leone, and the rest is history. After several years of playing "Rawhide's" Rowdy Yates as an earnest good guy, Eastwood embraced the chance to play the darker shadings of The Man With No Name in the Leone pictures. "A Fistful of Dollars" was enormously successful in Italy before it branched out internationally, prompting the sequel "For a Few Dollars More" (1965), though Eastwood initially hesitated to make it because he hadn't seen "Fistful" yet. The audience responded well to the latter film at a screening of a copy that was sent for Eastwood to view, convincing him to agree to the first "Fistful" follow-up. "Rawhide" had been canceled by the time "The Good, the Bad and the Ugly" (1966) went into production, but Eastwood did some crafty bargaining before signing up to work with Leone yet again. In addition to a significantly higher salary from when he began the trilogy, his deal also encompassed two Ferrari cars and 10 percent of the profits that the movie made in its American run. Leone wanted to reunite with Eastwood once more, on "Once Upon a Time in the West" (1968), but Eastwood turned him down – despite Leone traveling to Los Angeles to hand the script to him. The part eventually went to Charles Bronson, who had been sought by Leone earlier for "The Good, the Bad and the Ugly." However, Eastwood maintained his Western image with the 1968 releases "Hang 'Em High" and "Coogan's Bluff," and the genre continued to play a big part in his screen career.
