celebrity pipeline BY JAY BOBBIN

The new 'Rockford' won't be filed until January

Q: I'm intrigued to see the new version of "The Rockford Files," but I'm surprised that NBC is holding it until January. Why is that? — Olivia Crane, Woonsocket, R.I.

A: It's likely at least one of a number of probable reasons. In the fall, three of the network's nights will be occupied by sports — football on Sunday, basketball on Tuesday and college football on Saturday — so space for other programming is at a premium. By waiting until early in 2027, NBC has more options for where to place "Rockford."

Also, putting it on the means it can run pretty much uninterrupted until the end of its order, since there won't be the concern about taking it off for holiday programming that affects so many other series (or sends them into end-of-calendar-year reruns). With "Rockford," NBC undoubtedly will want to maintain the momentum of establishing David Boreanaz ("Bones") in a role that James Garner ("The Notebook," 2004) was so well-known for.

Lastly, delaying the start of "Rockford" to January gives the creative forces a bit more time to work on the episodes. The tone is sure to be important in reviving a franchise so famous for mixing mystery and humor — and while many who work in TV will say that no amount of prep time is ever enough, they'll also take as much of it as they can get. The new "Rockford" stories may be completed well before they air, but, at least, they'll have sufficient time to get ready.

Q: I enjoyed watching the "One Day at a Time" marathon that Antenna TV had for Mother's Day. Was Valerie Bertinelli supposed to continue the Barbara character in a sequel series? — Heather Sweet, New Castle, Ind.

A: In fact, television history has it that Valerie Bertinelli ("C.H.O.M.P.S.," 1979) wanted to separate from the role sooner than she did. By the mid-1980s, Bertinelli was making TV-movies that were very highly rated, but she was still committed to that CBS series — but the network persuaded her and fellow star Bonnie Franklin ("The Young and the Restless"), who also wanted to pursue other work to stay for a ninth and final season.

"One Day at a Time" finally wrapped up in 1984, and while Bertinelli didn't play Barbara again (though she returned for a 2005 reunion special), she did attempt other comedy series. She played the title private detective in the 1990 CBS show "Sydney" — with a pre-"Friends" Matthew Perry co-starring as her brother — and she portrayed a waitress in Paris in the 1993-94 NBC effort "Cafe Americain." After a stint in CBS's "Touched by an Angel" for its last two seasons, Bertinelli had another sizable run in the TV Land sitcom "Hot in Cleveland."
