6.3 magnitude quake felt off Oregon Coast

THE NEWS GUARD

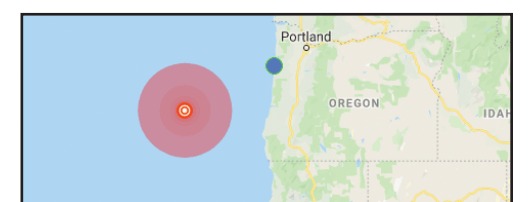

A 6.3 magnitude earthquake was recorded about 178 miles west of Coos Bay on the Oregon Coast the morning of Aug. 29.

The U.S. Geological Survey (USGS) reported the quake at about 8:07 a.m. in the Pacific Ocean with a depth of 3.3 miles. USGS stated they have received over 100 reports of people feeling the shake but there is not a threat of a tsunami from this earthquake.

No immediate damage or injuries have been reported at this time.

Oregon Emergency Management Geological Hazards Program Coordinator, Althea Rizzo, said the earthquake is on the Blanco Fracture Zone and is where the Juan

City Manager talks illegal fireworks

MAX KIRKENDALL

The City of Lincoln City's new 'Keep it Legal, Keep it Safe' campaign used to limit illegal fireworks from town has raised some interesting questions among the City Council members.

At the Aug. 26 City Council meeting, City Manager Ron Chandler gave a report on the results of their campaign that focused on Fourth of July firework activity in town.

"Following the Fourth of July, we had a meeting with various interested residents that gave us some suggestions on things that we could implement to help improve the problems that we have with illegal fireworks coming in from the from outside the area," Chandler said.

Chandler said they know the illegal fireworks are generally coming in from the state of Washington and are being shot off throughout the city, on the beach, in neighborhoods and on the streets. This year, the City attempted a few things around the Fourth of July to try to limit that activity.

We tried to strike a balance of saying we still love to have you here and don't go somewhere else, but please don't bring your fireworks," Chandler said.

"That proved to be quite a challenge."

The City tried various things from distributing 1,500 flyers throughout the community detailing prohibited fireworks, they placed 20 large signs at all beach access points in town and launched a Facebook campaign through both the Police Department and Explore Lincoln City. Through the social media campaign, the posts reached 546,000 accounts and generated 5,625 clicks that linked to their web page that gave more information.

"From a financial standpoint, that's a pretty successful campaign at just under $1 per click," Chandler said. "By comparison with some of the other campaigns where they've used Facebook, it's about half the price. So it turned out to in all total, this was about just under $5,000 for this campaign."

Despite the success of the campaign, Chandler said there were still issues throughout the City over the holiday weekend involving illegal fireworks. So, the city got together again and began to look at more ways in which they can improve, the biggest area of improvement seemed to be in enforcement.

"I have to say the number one request that we received from our residents was more ticketing, more actions, including arrests," Chandler said. "It is a crime to have illegal fireworks, which is a misdemeanor. But what we really want to do is to try to create an offense that isn't necessarily a misdemeanor, so that we can go beyond just confiscating."

Chandler stated that if someone voluntarily gives up their fireworks, they do

Rekindled friendship

Otis resident meets with old friend, accomplished writer after nearly 50 years

newsguardeditor@countrymedia.net

In 1960, Otis resident Cathy Walton met her good friend and world-traveling writer Lyn Hancock in Duban, South Africa. After living together off and on for nearly a decade, the two went their separate ways and hadn't seen each other since; until this summer.

In 1960, Walton was living in South Africa training to be a nurse where she met Australian Lyn Hancock, who was at the beginning of a hitchhiking trip from South Africa to London.

"I was hitchhiking and arranging rides, staying at the cheapest places I could and we met each other at the YWCA," Hancock said.

The pair formed an instant friendship and vowed to reconnect once Hancock reached London. When they met in London, Hancock and Walton decided to move into a large apartment together, along with four others, and they lived there for nearly a year.

"Before we left London, we took a three-week ski vacation with her family in Norway, and her family quickly became my second family," Walton said.

After they returned to London, they made plans to do more traveling. With an opportunity to immigrate to Canada, Walton and Hancock jumped at the chance and got on a boat to travel across the Atlantic.

"We decided to go because Canada paid our way over and found us both a job in the country," Hancock said. "I didn't intend to stay because I had a job back in Australia teaching at University, so I was trying to pull the wool over the Canadian government's eyes. But I'm still there today so I guess they're the ones who pulled the wool over my eyes."

While in Canada Hancock was given a job as a school teacher and Walton found a job as a secretary at Reader's Digest. They continued to travel while in Canada, seeing much of the country via a cross country bus trip from Eastern Canada to Western Canada.

THE NEWS GUARD

Will Beckett and his wife Michelle, are traveling federal interstates, state highways and scenic back roads from Santa Cruz to Seattle in an electric vehicle. The goal? To break a common myth about electric cars.

In just under three weeks, starting in mid-August the Will and Michelle took to their vacation to help promote the adoption electric vehicles, make people aware of Oregon's three area chapters of the Electric Auto Association (EAA), and potentially inspire the formation of at least two more area chapters in Oregon, one east of the Cascade Mountains, another to the west of the Coast Range. The electric vehicle (EV) they are driving is a 2017 Chevy Bolt, a car that has a 'range' of up to 238 miles when fully charged.

"Too many people out there don't know the value of driving an electric car," Will Beckett, co-driver and former Electric Auto Association board member said. "One of the things that turned my head was a neighbor who found out he could save so much money commuting to work, he figured he could afford a Tesla. After getting one, he couldn't sell off his BMW fast enough!"

"Sometimes when I tell people about other long-distance road trips I've done they say something like, 'oh, I thought they're only round-the-town cars.' This drives me crazy. So I'm publicizing this vacation trip to help educate the public about long-range electric vehicles."

Beckett and his wife Michelle Murray left their home in Aptos, Calif., just south of the Santa Cruz area, driving their 2017 Chevy Bolt to eventually arrive in Seattle. After a quick trip by seaplane to Victoria, B.C. they began the venture back head home to complete a carefully planned 2,300-mile (approx.), 18-day road-trip.

They've traveled north on Interstate 5 to the Eugene-Springfield area where they turned east over the Cascades and into the desert. Then north on Highway 97, east on Interstate 84, cross over the Columbia into Washington, and after getting to Richland, heading northwest over the Cascades to Tacoma and Seattle. Their return trip eventually took them south on I-5 back into Oregon and then to Corvallis, where they turned west to Newport and into Lincoln County for a stay in Otter Rock this past weekend.

After a few nights at the beach, they finally traveled down Hwy 101 South and back into California to return home.

"This road-trip is a vacation with a purpose," said Al LePage, Vice-president of the Emerald Valley Electric Vehicle Association, an EAA area chapter based in the Eugene-Springfield area. "This journey challenges myth with reality. It's not simply about showing that electric cars have what it takes, both in terms of range and reliability to do what Americans love to do - make long-distance road trips - it's also about getting more and more people to seriously think about buying one."

"The future is already here and not enough range, that is, miles one can go on a single charge, is just one of many myths about electric cars that need busting."

Will Beckett, first joined the Electric Auto Association (EAA) in the mid-1970's and purchased his first electric car in 1994. He's served as President of the Silicon Valley EAA, one of five chapters in the San Francisco Bay Area and as an EAA board member and membership chair. He's been recognized by the Bay Area Air Quality Management District for his involvement with efforts to educate the public about alternative fueled vehicles, and also received the EAA Electric Auto Lifetime Achievement Award in 2018. He currently serves as vice-president of the Central Coast EAA chapter, of which he was a founding member. Promotion of electric vehicle use is one of his passions. He also did another long-distance road-trip with his wife in 2017.

Michelle Murray, the other co-driver and Will's wife, is a life-long artist working with textiles and other materials to create art that you wear.

The Chevy Bolt is built just outside Detroit, Michigan, the battery, motor and drive unit is produced in South Korea. It has a range of 238 miles, the first car other than a Tesla to attain an over 200-mile range, and first produced in 2017. Beckett's Bolt has 14,500 miles plus and still going strong. Beckett has also named his Bolt 'Harry' because his wife is a Harry Potter fan and according to her, there's just so much magic to be found in an electric car.

With three area chapters of the Electric Auto Association already established in Oregon, Beckett hopes to someday bring a chapter to the Coast, ideally one each in the North, Mid and South Coast regions. He hopes his journey will help raise some awareness about electric cars and possible spark the formation of these chapters.

Oregon's Office of Emergency Management urges individuals to be '2 Weeks Ready'

September is National Preparedness Month and Oregon's Office of Emergency Management urges individuals, families, businesses and local organizations to take time during this timeframe - and throughout the year - to be "2 Weeks Ready."

For many years, a 72-hour preparedness kit was the standard for disaster planning. This is a good start, and helpful in the event of short-term power outages or temporary evacuation. But as OEM Director Andrew Phelps points out, a large earthquake and tsunami will leave much of the area's transportation routes destroyed and leave large areas of Oregon without resources for days or weeks.

"Having two weeks of food, water and other emergency supplies is critical for individuals and families who may need to take care of themselves until formal response resources can reach them," Phelps said.

There is no one correct way to put together two weeks' worth of supplies since everyone has individual dietary and medical needs. If your family includes children, seniors or pets, you will have additional needs. Everyone's kit will look different but for a basic starting point, visit the OEM website, Ready.gov, The American Red Cross and more.

These sites offer a wide range of preparedness perspectives on the specific essentials to include in a kit.

Other 2 Weeks Ready resources include a series of animated one-minute videos, along with easy-to-read graphics and brochures. Each brochure offers helpful tips on what to do two minutes, two hours, two days and two weeks after a disaster.

In the aftermath of the September 11 event in 2001, steps have been taken by emergency management organizations across the country to encourage citizens to prepare for disasters and emergencies - natural or human caused. National Preparedness Month was launched in 2004; program messages include make a plan, build a kit, be informed.

Oregon Governor Kate Brown issued a proclamation in support of National Preparedness Month and the 2 Weeks Ready concept.

years, Walton then decided it was time to do some traveling on her own.

"I got kind of burned out working long days and many overtime hours, so I decided to immigrate to Australia," Walton said. "I actually ended up living with Lyn's mom and dad and eventually met my husband and married him six months after moving there."

Walton's husband was an adventurous glider pilot and wanted to ski and fly in the United States. The newly weds, Lyn and her family then all ventured to the states and met in Salt Lake City, Utah and spent weeks flying and having a wonderful time according to Hancock.

After the trip, Walton decided she wanted to stay in the U.S. and she moved to Los Angeles.

"I moved to Los Angeles in the late 60s and Lyn stayed with us for a while before returning to Canada... that was the last time we saw each other," Walton said.

Walton settled into life in the U.S. while Hancock continued her adventures lifestyle of traveling and writing. Hancock has 20 published books and numerous articles about her travels and her life.

"For 25 years, I wandered with camera, notebook and backpack through northern BC, Yukon, Northwest Territories and Nunavut," Hancock said. "I rarely knew where my next meal was coming from, or where I would end up at night or what I would be doing or who I would be doing it with."

Through her travels, Hancock has compiled books of numerous genres based on her experiences such as one of her first books, 'There's a Seal in my Sleeping Bag,' which is a best-selling and much-loved personal account of Hancock's zany but productive life as the wife of a wildlife biologist on the west coast of North America.

Other works include 'The Ring: Memories of a Metis Grandmother,' a touching true story about a grandmother's family ring given to her grandson the day of her funeral, as well as light-hearted books such as 'Tabasco the Saucy Raccoon,' the true story of Tabasco, the orphan raccoon that goes wherever Lyn goes: smuggled in her shopping bag on seventeen airplane flights, gamboling behind as she attends classes at university, sitting on her shoulders as she shops.

"My writing style is conversational, rhythmic, dramatic, graphic and photographic," Hancock said. "I live life as a story (which sometimes gets me into trouble) and I love telling stories of that life to a live audience, accompanied by my pictures. I paint pictures with my words and I tell stories with my pictures."

Reconnecting

Throughout the years of Hancock's travels and Walton's life as a wife and mother, the pair kept in touch, writing letters to one another. In the early 2000s, Walton took a trip up the West Coast, looking for a permanent home.

Little did she know she would find that in Otis, Oregon.

"We drove around looking for a place to be in the early 2000s and I had

Cathy Walton and Lyn Hancock in their apartment during the 1960s sons who were surfers and so they liked to be near the ocean," Walton said. "We found this place and I decided that this was where I wanted to spend the rest of my life."

Now that she was somewhat closer to Hancock in Canada, the two expressed the desire to meet up with each other once again. However, it never came to fruition.

"I always had planned on visiting once she moved up to Oregon, or having her visit, but we never did until now," Hancock said.

After nearly 50 years, Hancock and Walton finally reconnected in person this summer after Hancock decided to take the bus ride down to Otis. The two enjoyed sharing stories, catching up and seeing some of the sites in Otis and Lincoln City.

As book enthusiasts, Walton and Hancock visited the Book Warehouse and Robert's Beach books, where Hancock dropped off several copies of 'Tabasco the Saucy Raccoon,' which are available for purchase.

"I had a great reception from Marci at Book Warehouse in the Lincoln City Outlets Mall and she is very enthusiastic for me to return to do readings and presentations in the store and at the local school," Hancock said. "I spent an hour or two in her store entertaining the customers and her creative kids. What a lovely store and what a lovely mall! I was overwhelmed."

not have to follow the rules of evidence. If they are given tickets or are arrested, then they follow the rules of evidence, which creates a much longer process.

This sparked a discussion amongst the City Council, in particular Councilmen Mitch Parsons who is in favor of more enforcement for illegal fireworks.

"What other crimes do we just let go and don't write tickets for?" Parsons said. "The council made it a priority to enforce code and we enforced less this year than we did last year. Why aren't we writing tickets?"

Mayor Dick Anderson reiterated that the purpose of the campaign was more on education and less on enforcement.

"I think the issue was to try to soften the negative impact of fireworks," Anderson said. "And I would say actions were taken with a number of staff and personnel and education."

Chandler mentioned a few other possibilities for improvement including enhancing their Rhino Beach Vehicles to make them look more like law enforcement to discourage illegal firework use, as well as changing the nature of the City's firework show.

"There's a couple of options that I seen other communities do," Chandler said. "One that is becoming a little more popular is the use of drones."

Chandler said the current firework show costs about $25,000 for about a 20 to 25 minute show. For a drone display at that price point, the City could get 250 drones for an eight minute show, that will change three times.

"So think of it like a marching band, except you're looking up at it, they move around, stay there for a couple of minutes, they move around, stay there for a couple minutes, and so forth," Chandler said.

Chandler said they would continue to have discussions about how they can improve for next year. However, Council members such as Diana Hinton believe the issue spreads beyond just the normal holiday seasons.

"This doesn't just happen on New Years and Fourth of July, just last Thursday, there were two huge fireworks that went off not too far from my home," Hinton said. "It happens all year round. I think if we do the things that you laid out here, I think that it's really going to make a big dent in some of these other things that we hear during the rest of the year."

IN MEMORY

Raymond Leigh Wilder

Raymond Leigh Wilder passed away on August 21.

Ray died quietly at home, surrounded by friends and family.

He was born August 19, 1927 in Tacoma, Wash. to Raymond Dabney and Edna Mabel Wilder. The family spent one year in Tacoma, two years in Longview, Wash., 13 years in Kellogg, Idaho and moved to Portland when he was 16. A stint in the Navy followed by college and employment took him to California, the East Coast, back to California and to retirement on the central Oregon Coast in Seal Rock and Coronado Shores.

He married Alois DenBeste in 1957 and they had two children, Leslie Ann and Michael Jon Wilder. He married Marion Coes in 1972. Both Alois and Marion preceded him in death. He then married Janice Epps James in 2000.

Graduation from Grant High School in Portland and three years in the Pacific as a Navy destroyer fire controlman was followed by a Bachelors of Science in mathematics at Oregon State University in 1952. A combination of post-graduate work at the University of Washington, UCLA, the University of Oregon, the University of Delaware and USC culminated in a Masters of Science in quantitative business analysis.

Major employment involved consulting in management and applied statistics with the University of Washington Public Opinion Laboratory, Northwest Natural Gas, E.I DuPont de Nemours and McDonnell Douglas Corporation (now Boeing). He formed Wilder Assoc. in 1974 as a statistical and engineering consulting firm with clients including McDonnell Douglas, USC and Lundberg Assoc. until retirement in 1982.

He lettered in track and basketball at Kellogg High School and managed track at Oregon State. He was a member of DeMolay, Hi-Y in high school and Interfraternity Council, Phi Kappa Phi, Pi Mu Epsilon and president of Chi Phi and the Student Athletic Managers Assoc. at Oregon State. He belonged to the American Statistical Assoc. and served on Waldport Schools advisory committee, Seal Rock RFPD board, Beaver Creek Advisory Committee for the Oregon Land Conservation Development Commission, Newport YMCA Endowment committee, Endowment committee for the Oregon Coast Commission for the Arts. He was listed in 'Who's Who in the West' and his publication 'Rating for Reliability Allocation' is in the Library of Congress. This qualitative technique was used for management decisions, paints, textile and packaging development, vendor and personnel development, athletic ratings and quality level selection.

Mr. Wilder did not wish to have a memorial service and suggested contributions to your favorite charity or research program. He thought a memorial party "after the dust has settled would be a fine idea."

All public hearings will be held in the Council Chambers at the Lincoln Square Civic Center Complex, 801 SW Highway 101, Lincoln City, Oregon. (The Planning Commission and City Council may continue hearings to subsequent dates and times, as necessary to complete review of the proposed amendments.) The Planning Commission and City Council will evaluate the proposed amendments using criteria in Chapter 17.88 of the Lincoln City Municipal Code. Only persons who have presented written and/or oral testimony at the hearings before the City may appeal to the Land Use Board of Appeals (LUBA). Failure to raise an issue at the public hearings, in person or by letter, or the failure to provide sufficient specificity to allow the City Council an

(Public hearings will be conducted according to adopted rules of procedure - these rules are available at the Planning Department, and copies will be available at the hearings.) # Health Matters

by Samaritan Health Services

Don't let motion sickness keep you from enjoying fun activities

You used to be the first one on the swings as a kid, but now the thought of anything with too much movement, such as traveling by car or plane, or going boating, makes you feel a little queasy. If you've cut back on activities due to motion sickness, it might be time to examine your options.

Drugstore options

"Over-the-counter antihistamines are commonly used to prevent motion sickness but everyone responds differently to them," said Christine Chun, FNP, from Samaritan Depoe Bay Clinic. "Don't be afraid to try a couple brands to find the one that works best for you."

The active ingredients to look for are dimenhydrinate (Dramamine), meclizine (Antivert, Bonine) and diphenhydramine (Benadryl). The side effects of an antihistamine often include drowsiness. There are versions or ingredients that may make you less drowsy, like meclizine, but Chun notes that non-sedating antihistamines don't seem to be as effective at treating motion sickness.

If you need to prevent motion sickness for only a short time, like a car ride, Chun recommends trying a half dose. For example, with Benadryl, take 12.5 milligrams instead of 25 milligrams. This can reduce your risk of drowsiness but still offer relief from nausea.

Try a prescription

If you haven't had good success with an over-the-counter antihistamine or you need to use the medication all day, talk to your clinician about a prescription for an antihistamine that lasts up to 12 hours. For even longer relief, a medicated patch is available that can be placed behind the ear and lasts as long as three days.

Nonpharmaceutical remedies

Chun reports that there are limited studies on the effectiveness of alternative treatments, but the following remedies may help.

- Suck on ginger candy or take 1-2 grams of dried ginger root
- Use acupressure wrist bands on one or both wrists

- Try aromatherapy — a few drops of lavender or peppermint oil in a diffuser
- Stay hydrated
- Practice mindful breathing and muscle relaxation
- If possible, look at the horizon or close your eyes to reduce sensory input
- Sit where there is less movement, such as the front of a car or bus, or close to the waterline in a boat
- Breathe cool, fresh air
- Get plenty of rest the night before
- Avoid an empty stomach, but choose bland foods like crackers, applesauce, rice or herbal tea

No matter what option you choose to help stop motion sickness, you'll get the best results if you are proactive and take steps to prevent it before you begin to feel sick. If you are using medication, allow 30-60 minutes for it to start working before you need it. Be sure to try the medication at home in a comfortable environment first to see how your body reacts.

"Some part of both pharmaceutical and alternative therapies is the placebo effect," Chun said.

Chun notes that motion sickness can decrease if you don't expect to become ill. "Whatever you choose to try, believing that it will work will help."

Six tips to reduce your risk of falling

Falls are worrisome for older adults, but there are ways to stay safe.

"One in four Americans aged 65 and older fall each year," said Jennifer Miller, DPT, manager of Samaritan Rehabilitation Services – Newport. "According to the American Trauma Society, falls are the leading cause of fatal and non-fatal injuries for older Americans, but there are a few overarching ways for seniors to stay safe."

Miller recommends these six tips from the National Council on Aging to stay safe.

- 1. Talk with your primary care provider
Your doctor can perform a fall risk assessment and discuss your history of recent falls.
- 2. Review your medications regularly
Discuss your medications with your doctor regularly to make sure side effects aren't increasing your risk of falling.
- 3. Get regular vision and hearing checks
Vision and hearing can affect your balance.

Have your doctor check your hearing and vision annually.

- 4. Join a fitness class
Look for a class that focuses on balance, strength and flexibility.
- 5. Remove fall factors from your home
Remove tripping hazards, increase lighting and install grab bars or railings where needed, such as the bathroom and stairs.
- 6. Get support from family and friends
Talk with your family and friends and ask for their support in taking simple steps to stay safe.

Work is progressing swiftly on the new Samaritan North Lincoln Hospital, with a scheduled opening in early February. All campus improvements, including an environmentally friendly main parking area, will be completed by next summer. Work recently completed includes paint on interior walls and exterior canopies, concrete poured for sidewalks and entrance curbing, and equipment hookups inside the rooftop mechanical room.

Lincoln City remembrance event to celebrate Coast-to-Coast connection

newsguardeditor@countrymedia.net

September 11, 2001 is a day that holds a tremendous impact on the United States of America. The City of New York and those at Ground Zero suffered many great losses. But in the following months many came to the aid of a mourning city, including members of the Lincoln City community.

On Sept. 11 this year, the community will host a special event to remember that fateful event that occurred 18 years ago and to remember the bond that was formed from Coast to Coast. The event in partnership with The News Guard is scheduled for 6 p.m. at the Lincoln City Cultural Center and will include food from Mo's Restaurant, who served food to FDNY stations after 9/11, displays of memorabilia, photos and a special video presentation about the Coast to Coast connection.

"We don't want it to be a memorial, because the event happened 18 years ago," North Lincoln Fire and Rescue District Captain Jim Kusz said. "We want it to be a remembrance because so many people were impacted by that event and it's something we can't just forget."

The community will learn about 9/11's impact on the Lincoln City community and honor all the men, women and children who died and acted courageously (UA93, the Pentagon and Towers). This includes all Police, Fire, EMS and First Responders who died that day, and are still dying from cancer (and respiratory illnesses), all the men, women and children who died, were seriously wounded, or suffer PTSD from an event that sparked the longest war in American history, which we are still fighting nearly 18 years later.

A sign given to the FDNY Engine Co. 55 fire station to show the connection between Lincoln City and New York.

After 9/11 a few Lincoln City residents made the trip across the U.S. and visited Engine Co. 55 in New York, treated them to a meal, courtesy of Mo's, and donated a hand carved wooden sign, created by local artist Carolyn Cowgill, which is still hanging proudly in the station. For the event next Wednesday, Kusz hopes many of those community members will come to the event to share their memories, as well as potential surprise guests.

"We're trying to get the band back together, so to speak," Kusz said. "We already have several of those people who made the trip tell us they are planning to attend and we are also hoping to have those from New York possibly call in and talk about that experience."

Lincoln City residents traveled 3,000 miles to New York after 9/11 to visit FDNY Engine Co. 55.

Young Tiger volleyball squad hungry for more wins

With youth and versatility, the Taft 7-12 volleyball team seemingly has an abundance of potential.

Head coach Kelsey Hart of the Lady Tigers has a full roster of volleyball players once again this year and plenty of younger girls who are eager to learn.

“We have a lot of potential this year, and we’re still not clear on exactly who will be playing what positions, but we’ve got a flexibility with our lineup possibilities that we haven’t had before” Hart said. “It will be fun to see what combinations work best for us.”

The young Tigers were thrown into competitive action right out of the gates, competing in Lincoln County Schools Jamboree at Taft on Aug. 29. Playing three sets against three different teams, Taft opened with a tough loss to 2A Toledo in set one but rebounded with a come from behind win over 1A Waldport in the second set. In the third set the Tigers played 4A Newport who flexed their muscle by beating the younger inexperienced Taft team.

“We had some hiccups in the beginning, but the girls kept a positive attitude and did a great job rolling with all of the lineup changes we had,” Hart said.

Hart said inexperience will be the biggest hurdle they must overcome this season. However, she does have a few returning players that she expects to step up and lead the team.

“While our talent and position flexibility is higher as a whole than it has been, we don’t have as much court experience as other teams, so we’ll be leaning heavily on our returning players to step up as leaders,” Hart said.

With volleyball tryouts taking over the majority of the first week of practice, Hart said it’s still too soon to say who she expects to see shine on the court. But as a team, she expects each varsity player to have a role on her squad.

“I expect everyone to be a key contributor in some way or another,” Hart said. “Everyone has a role to play that will be crucial to our team, whether it is on the court full time, subbing into key positions or encouraging the team from the bench.”

With a strong field of teams in the Coastal Range League, the Tigers are expecting the competition to be fierce. And for Hart, she is expecting her girls to compete and thrive in each competitive environment.

“I think competition wise, this is a good league for us,” Hart said. “All of the other teams in our league are going to push us to be better this year, but I think we have a good shot at taking home a few more W’s this year if we can rise to our potential.”

The Tigers first official game will be tonight (Sept. 4) at home against Amity, starting at 6:30 p.m. Hart and the Lady Tigers are looking forward to competing each night and win some games, but overall, the goal is to have fun doing it.

“We got our first league win in several years last season, and it’s left the girls hungry for more,” Hart said. “Then the goal I have for my teams every year is just to have a great season and enjoy it, no matter how we do.”

De Fuca Plate commonly slides against the Pacific Plate.

“This area gets lots of earthquakes, like this large one, but they are so far away from the coast they don’t have any impact, other than just reminding us that earthquakes can happen at anytime,” Rizzo said. “There is no relation between this area and the Subduction Zone. They are on opposite sides of the Juan De Fuca Plate.”

Rizzo said this type of quake provides a great opportunity to spend some time talking about emergency preparedness with family and friends.

Rebuilding XC team growing each day for Tigers

MAX KIRKENDALL

In the midst of what head coach Eva Ahumada calls a rebuilding year, the Taft 7-12 cross country team is down in numbers, but not talent.

After three straight appearances at the 3A State Meet, the Tiger boys team was surprised to see several runners opt for other sports this fall. However, Ahumada said State is still the expectations for the Tigers.

"It's going to be harder because when I first started we had this group of freshmen boys, that would be seniors this year, and they all ran together but this year we lost all of those boys except Lucas Hindman, who's going to be our lead runner," Ahumada said. "It's a rebuilding year, but I think we've got enough talent on the team to where if we get it together, then we can do it. There's a lot of natural talent on the team."

On the first day of practice, the team had just six runners out. But now the team has doubled to 12 and still growing.

"Lots of new runners, but also lots of returning runners, which is really great and it's just continuing to grow every week," Ahumada said. "We just got another girl in last night and we're supposed to get another runner in soon, so I'm excited for the team. It's coming together really nicely."

Not only do the Tigers expect to have runners with plenty of potential, but also they'll have runners that are high character leaders. Among them is senior Ethan Price, who has been running cross country since 5th grade. He was also surprised to see many of his classmates decide to try other sports this year. Nevertheless, he said he has liked what he has seen so far at practice.

We have a decent amount of new runners this year and a lot of them show real promise," Price said. "Most of them are already pretty fast and are only getting faster. So I'm excited to see how they get better."

Last year, Price said his personal record (PR) was 20:01 and along with his team goal of making it to state for the fourth year in a row, as an individual he wants to break that 20-minute mark.

"In this kind of context, running is more of mental thing than anything else. You just have to keep that mindset of, 'I'm not going as fast as I can' and keep on pushing yourself to the next person in front of you," Price said. "It's more mental than physical."

On the girls side, Ahumada is hoping they will be able to bring in or develop another runner to push them into State contention.

I think we already have a really strong boys team and if we get a few more girls, we'll have a really decent girls team as well," Ahumada said. "It's a really unique year in the district, where if we have strong runners, like Autumn Ellis, and if we get another really strong runner in there, they'll make it to state in 3A."

The Tigers had their first taste of competitive action this past Saturday, Aug. 31, when they traveled to Cottage Grove for the Two-Mile Run. With only six qualified runners due to practice requirements, the shortened race was really just to get the runner's legs warmed up.

"It's a two mile run, so it's really just to get them racing experience," Ahumada said.

This week Taft will be in Tillamook for the annual Ultimook race, which features a muddy track that's more fun than competitive.

"It's like a race but not really... it's more of a mud run," Ahumada said. "They really like it, it's a lot of runner's favorite race."
