Tamale Time

Driving along the Pacific coast is breathtaking. There are many hidden gems and Tamale Time is one of them. We love independently owned and operated businesses here on the Oregon Coast. It takes a special kind of passion to create delicious dishes and tasty treats, day-in and day-out. While passing through Seal Rock, you must give this little tamale stand a try. They're featuring fresh, unique, scrumptious Mexican food. There is a wide variety of menu items daily, so you will surely find something that fits your tastebuds. Located at 10797 Pacific Coast Highway in Seal Rock, across from the ocean. Call ahead: (458) 562-9156.

New Samaritan hospitals now serving the central Oregon Coast

For decades, Lincoln County has been home to two top-rated and fully accredited Critical Access Hospitals.

Now, both hospitals – Samaritan Pacific Communities Hospital in Newport and Samaritan North Lincoln Hospital in Lincoln City – have undergone major construction and remodeling to ensure quality care in beautiful modern facilities for decades to come.

Samaritan's coastal hospitals offer a complete range of Medicare services – from emergency care to orthopedic surgery, nuclear medicine, sleep diagnostics and more.

Many other services such as cancer and cardiology care are offered here regularly by the clinicians based at Good Samaritan Regional Medical Center and Level II trauma center in nearby Corvallis.

Whether you are visiting or making your home in Lincoln County, you can be assured that exceptional health care is close by when you need it.

Take a Hike
By Nicole Clarke

Take a walk on the Wilder side of South Beach

Wilder is located just a few minutes due-East from highway 101 in South Beach. Located near the Yaquina Bay, iconic “Green Lady” Yaquina Bay Bridge, Oregon Coast Aquarium and so much more. The area features many of the conveniences without the bustle of mid-town. Wilder is a sustainable neighborhood surrounded by eco-minded hiking trails, playground, dog park, disc golf course and is the home of the main campus for The Oregon Coast Community College. The area has also landed an independently owned and operated venue to drink some great beer, eat good food, buy local art and they also feature live entertainment from time-to-time. Wilder is a lifestyle, more than just a place to lay your head.

Hiking or biking on the Wilder side means you get to travel at your own pace through miles of trails that join Wilder to the original Mike Miller Loop trail that also connects trails from the Port of Newport Marina, past the Aquarium, through Wilder, and over the Wilder Extension into Mike Miller Park. When you get off the trails, you’ll enjoy sandy beach trails and native grasses from a patio table.....Not many folks get to experience coastal Oregon like this. If you get the chance, you should enjoy Wilder for the day and into the evening. Wolf Tree Brewery is welcoming, not stuffy, open-air brewery and tap room located at 4590 SE Harborton Street, South Beach. Their locally crafted beer, covered patio and cornhole boards are the perfect way to end your day.

Nearby South Beach State park features camping, showers, South Beach Jetty, beach accesses and so much more. There are also hotels in the area

(but is that really...Oregon?) If you’re looking for the best fish & chips in Newport without any debate with the locals, South Beach Fish Market (and Grocery) is at the top of everyone’s list. Located at 3640 South Coast Hwy in South Beach, they’re a fresh seafood market and restaurant selling Dungeness crab, albacore tuna, wild king chinook salmon, Pacific oysters, prawns, canned and smoked seafood. Check out their food menu and call ahead if you’re in a rush...there is usually a line!

Wilder is a great place to spend the day. Enjoy safely.

An aerial photograph of a rugged coastline. A paved road with yellow and white lane markings curves along the top and left sides of the image. The landscape is dominated by a dense forest of tall, green evergreen trees. In the lower right, the ocean is a vibrant blue, with white waves crashing against dark, rocky shorelines. The overall scene is a mix of natural beauty and human infrastructure.

Echo Mountain Fire damage

By Matt Brandt Photography

Echo Mountain Fire

In mid-September, a spark ignited at the top of Echo Mountain and Otis was set ablaze. Residents fled, grabbing what personal items they could, as 50 mph coastal gales quickly spread flames. No one could have predicted the outcome of this event.

The Echo Mountain fire burned 29 of the 31 homes in the Salmon River Mobile Village on the north side of Oregon Highway 18 before it crossed the highway and ran across hundreds of acres of wooded areas including residential zones. Even the cursory checkpoints manned by Oregon National Guard members don't quite prepare you for what you'll see a mile down North Bank Road in Otis. Nearly 300 homes were lost over the week following the Labor Day catastrophic weather event.

No one died when the Echo Mountain Complex Fire swept through parts of Lincoln County. This fire even made a run at Lincoln City, reaching Devil's Lake and Neotsu. The inferno destroyed hundreds of homes and touched countless lives. The communities banded together, which is the best outcome as they rebuild. Now that the flames are out, locals were left trying to figure out what comes next. Over the last 6 months, some residents have been able to return home with new digs, while many others are still displaced. Many people living in hotels have been stretched thin between trying to make the next steps, learning with every move, and trying to keep a positive eye to the East. They will be back home soon.

For Rep. David Gomberg, D-Otis, the fires were personal. He wrote:

"You can see the charred property right across the street," he said, during a recent tour of his neighborhood. Gomberg lives on a rural road just north of Lincoln City. "A third of the houses are gone. Completely gone," he said.

Gomberg said he and his wife fled as the sun came up on the day after Labor Day.

"Suzy and I stopped right before we walked out of the door, and I reached into the cabinet. I pulled out a bottle and I poured two glasses," he said. "And we toasted a million memories of the home that we had lived in for 30 years. And then we closed the door and left."

Outside, people were streaming down the road -- the only way out of the wooded, hilly neighborhood.

"The smoke was thick. The sky was red. And people were leaving in a hurry," he said.

Gomberg said when you live on the coast, you're always thinking about potential disasters. Just not this kind. "We think about earthquakes and tsunamis," he said. "That's what we prepare for. And this event caught us by surprise."

The cause of the Echo Mountain Fire is still unknown, but it was driven by the same hot, east wind that caused so much devastation in other parts of Oregon. While Lincoln County avoided any loss of life or serious injuries, officials say nearly 300 homes were destroyed, including dozens of mobile homes. And it's in a region that had a housing crunch to begin with.

"There's no more significant challenge, I think, than the housing situation," said County Counsel Wayne Belmont during a recent meeting of the Lincoln County Board of Commissioners. "It was already a challenge in Lincoln County, especially affordable housing, and it will continue to be."

A sign warns away trespassers at the entrance to the Salmon River Mobile Village near Otis. Dozens of homes burned down at the site.

It's a challenge that's on the radar of FEMA. The federal agency has been working with the Red Cross to find housing for people who lost their homes.

"We try to keep people in their community," said FEMA spokesperson Jann Tracey, during an interview at the FEMA intake center in Lincoln City.

Tracey said many evacuees are staying in hotels or with relatives. The agency is considering other options until homes can be rebuilt. But with rental property already in high demand, all options are on the table, including temporary manufactured housing. Tracey said that's not as easy of a solution as it might seem.

"It's not a fast remedy to an immediate problem, because you have to have sewage lines, gas lines, electric lines," she said. "You can't just move a trailer in, so to speak, and dump it on the property."

Back in the fire zone, David Gomberg marveled at how much his neighborhood has been transformed.

"This was a fickle fire," he said. "It came up the hill and took homes out, and then, without reason, left others completely standing and untouched."

Nearly 300 homes were destroyed by the Echo Mountain Complex Fire near Lincoln City. Some of the worst damage occurred in the unincorporated community of Otis.

After ten days of uncertainty, Gomberg and his wife were allowed to return. Their house was still standing. Gomberg credits firefighters for saving his home and many others in the neighborhood. He said a wave of relief swept over them as they walked in the door.

"But there's also a wave of guilt that comes in that says, 'My house is still standing, and so many of my neighbors aren't'" he said.

"I mean, we came into the house. The two glasses were still sitting on the table. We had another toast to our good fortune, and then immediately went up the hill to see what we could do to help our neighbors that weren't nearly as fortunate," said Gomberg.

The flames came within 100 feet of the Gomberts' house, and burned up trees and vegetation on about half their property. But he said his family's experience pales compared to the people in his community who lost everything.

Buying and Selling on the Central Oregon Coast

At Shorepine Properties Real Estate they care about their clients and work diligently to help them meet their goals. They are passionate about what they do.

“Real Estate with a Reason” is a slogan that has been at the company’s core from the beginning. Valuing communities, clients and the obligations those relationships require, Shorepine Properties donates a portion of their profits to charitable organizations both national and local.

Becky Kirkendall purchased Shorepine Properties from Mary Jones and Jeff Schons in 2017 after working with them for 11 years. Shorepine Properties was started by Jones and Schons and both have been working in real estate, development and construction for years and bring a lot of experience as mentors to Shorepine Properties.

Kirkendall has been in Real Estate for 13 years and previously worked in the hospitality industry for 20 years. People and relationships are very important to her.

“I have the best real estate brokers on the Central Oregon Coast,” Kirkendall said. “They care about their clients and work hard to assist them in reaching their goals. Our team has many talents and resources.

“We all live on the coast which is an advantage when looking for properties in the area. Buying a beach home or vacation property should be an enjoyable experience. The Shorepine Team is committed to providing outstanding, friendly and professional customer service from ‘hello’ to signing the closing documents.”

Stop into the office and say hello to Kirkendall and her team of brokers. They are open every day from 9 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Check in with them for Open Houses, the inside scoop of the housing market and for hot new listings.

Kirkendall along with her team of dedicated brokers represent both buyers and sellers on the Central Oregon Coast. The team is committed to providing outstanding, friendly and professional customer service.

“We us help you find the perfect Oregon home, lots or land or fractionally owned homes on the Central Oregon Coast today!” Kirkendall said. “We can help you sell your home quickly with our many resources at a great price in our current market.”

Give Shorepine Properties a call at 888-965-7801 or send them an email to info@shorepinerealestate.com for more information.

Real Estate with a Reason is at our core.

We believe in meaningful transactions. We value our communities, clients, and the obligations those relationships require. We regularly donate a portion of our profits to charitable organizations both national & local.

Living on the Edge

North Lincoln and South Tillamook Counties converge atop Cascade Head and on either side is nothing short of breathtaking. To the South, the Salmon River stretches out to the sea. Just around the Head, Neskowin's Ghost Forest, an ancient forest in the sandy seabed is uncovered by the changing tides, hides in the cove near Proposal Rock. Neskowin OR is close enough that you should consider keeping it on your bucket list. This charming little beach town has some unique offerings. Although the community is compact, you are not too far away from the conveniences and amenities that nearby Lincoln City has to offer.
