

Yemen's cholera crisis reaches hundreds of thousands

More than two years into a devastating civil war, Yemen is facing a cholera outbreak that is quickly spiraling out of control. The diarrheal disease can lead to death in a matter of hours if left untreated.

SUSPECTED CASES

158,960 cases

The number of cases may reach 300,000 by year's end, according to international charity group Oxfam.

1,100 deaths

The disease is also killing one person per hour, according to the same group.
