Report revisits administrators for county

By Daniel Simmons-Ritchie
The World

COQUILLE — From department mergers to sharing services with other counties, the new board of commissioners is set to take another hard look this year at how it can save money and streamline operations.

A report released this week is likely to be the launch pad for that discussion. The 108-page document was written for Coos County by volunteer researchers at Portland State University.

All three newly-elected commissioners say they are interested in the report's proposals, although their opinions differ over certain ideas.

The authors' biggest recommendation is to collapse 13 of Coos County's departments into five or six and establish two new management positions: finance manager and chief administrative officer.

Commissioner Bob Main says he could be open to mergers, but says he is wary of establishing any position that oversees too many departments. He says that would be too similar to a "county administrator," a proposed position that was rejected by voters in November.

"I don't know why it's being brought up again when it was just voted down," he said.

Commissioner-elect John Sweet says he likes the idea of a finance manager. The position also would oversee the county's accounting system and take over certain duties from the treasurer.

But Sweet shares Main's concern over the proposed "chief administrative officer," who would oversee three to six existing departments.

"I say that not because I'm dead set against it," Sweet said, "but I think that's too close to a county administrator, which the voters clearly voted down."

Commissioner-elect Melissa Cribbins says the position of chief administrative

Who authored this report?

The study was conducted by volunteer researchers at the National Policy Consensus Center of Portland State University. The center offers free consulting services to government organizations. The Coos County commissioners approached the center last year.

The study was conducted by Jim Johnson, John Anderson and Pat Cochran, who each have experience in city or county government. The county covered the cost of a single visit by Johnson and Anderson to Coos County, but paid no other costs.

Johnson and Anderson interviewed 12 officials and commissioners-elect John Sweet and Melissa Cribbins. The report is dated Dec. 21, but was released Wednesday by the Coos County commissioners.

A rocky start to crabbing season

The early returns have been mixed

By Tim Novotny

CHARLESTON — It is too early to call it a lost year, but it's clear the Oregon Dungeness crab season is not off to a stellar start.

The season started with delays, and now the crab, if they are out there, appear to be hiding.

"It's been a mixed batch so far," said Matt LeDoux, president of the Fishermen's Wharf in Charleston. "Some of the guys are striking out, but some guys are doing really well."

It's just a matter of finding the constantly moving crab, he says. "Crab are kind of like cattle, they just migrate in a big group around the area."

Fishermen, he says, typically go to familiar ground to start the season. But they also will drop experimental strings of crab pots in other areas. While the start of this season has been underwhelming, it may just be a matter of shifting focus.

Hallmark Fisheries plant manager Scott Adams agrees. "The catch is down. How much is hard to say."

However, the season could still bounce back. It just

Crews plan removal of crashed boat

CHARLESTON — The diesel fuel that leaked from a wrecked crab boat near Cape Arago on Thursday has safely dissipated, but it left behind a multi-jurisidictional mess for state and federal agencies.

As of 4:15 p.m. Thursday, only a thin film of fuel lingered north of the stricken Robert Henry beneath the Simpson Reef overlook.

"It seems to be moving straight out away from shore," and the outlook is as good as could be expected for this type of scenario, said Dawn Grafe, acting project leader for the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service's Newport office. "No sick mammals have been spotted."

According to Grafe, the sheen that resulted from the split vessel was approximately 20 feet wide by 160 yards long.

The National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration and Oregon Department of Fish and Wildlife are among the agencies assisting with environmental monitoring.

"Our role is to advise the incident commanders of the natural resources present at the site," said ODFW spokesperson David Lane.

Lane said his agency defers authority over marine mammals to the federal government.

Pollution wasn't the only potentially sticky situation created by the wreck.

Initially, responsibility for the

■ Astoria teen charged after 'Drivin drunk' post on Facebook after wreck

By Steven Dubois
The Associated Press

PORTLAND — Jacob Cox-Brown might want to adjust his Facebook privacy settings.

Police in the coastal city of Astoria arrested the teenager after he allegedly confessed via Facebook that he had been driving drunk on New Year's Eve and hit someone's car.

Deputy Chief Brad Johnston said Thursday that officers were investigating a hit and run involving a sideswiped car that sustained significant damage — a second car also was hit — when two Facebook friends of Cox-Brown contacted authorities, reporting a Facebook post in which the 18-year-old wrote: "Drivin drunk ... classsic ;) but to whoever's vehicle i hit i am sorry. :P"

One of his friends sent a Facebook message to an Astoria police officer; the other called the station, Johnston said. Officers went to Cox-Brown's house and found a vehicle that matched the damage done to the two vehicles. Police also connected pieces from the crash scene to the vehicle registered to Cox-Brown.

"He denied it initially, and it wasn't until he was confronted with overwhelming evidence that he finally admitted to it," Johnston said.

Cox-Brown, who has more than 650 Facebook friends, did not immediately respond to a Facebook message seeking comment. He does not have a phone number listed in his name.

Cox-Brown was charged with failure to perform the duties of a driver. He was booked into the Clastsop County jail and released on his own recognizance. He avoided a charge of drunken driving because he was interviewed hours after the incident and the Facebook post is not sufficient evidence that he was intoxicated.

"We can't just convict somebody based on the fact that they said they were drunk," Johnston said.

Johnston said the department is fairly active in social media and it has been useful in several cases. He added that the takeaway from this case is not that people should be careful about what they post on Facebook: "No, the message is stop and contact people when you run into their cars."

Potholes will cause traffic delays

COOS BAY — Starting Jan. 8, blade patching and pothole patching will be performed on the following streets:

- The 100 block of South Wasson. There will be no parking after 5 p.m. Jan. 11 and the street will be shut down the morning of Jan. 12 to perform the work. The street will reopen once work is completed Jan. 12.
- Southwestern Boulevard between Idaho and Montana Avenue will undergo patch repair. Expect delays while traveling Southwestern Boulevard on Wednesday due to road maintenance work. Traffic flagging will be provided by city maintenance crews.

For more information about these projects, contact Public Works and Development Department Operations Administrator Randy Dixon at 541-269-1181 ext. 2201 or email at rdixon@coosbay.org.

Other delays

Coos County motorists can expect traffic delays at these road construction projects this week, according to the Oregon Department of Transportation and the Coos County Road Department:

- U.S. Highway 101, milepost 233.4 to 234.5, McCullough Bridge rehab: Expect intermittent weeknight lane closures across the bridge. Watch for flaggers. The speed limit on the bridge is reduced to 35 mph. Drive with caution. The sidewalk on the west (southbound) side of the bridge is closed.

- U.S. Highway 101, milepost 234-238, North Bend to Coos Bay paving, sidewalks and traffic signals: This project will replace sidewalks in several areas along U.S. Highway 101 in Coos Bay and North Bend between fall of 2012 and spring 2013. Traffic signals will be replaced at four intersections in North Bend next spring. Four miles of U.S. Highway 101, from McCullough Bridge in North Bend to Fir Street in Coos Bay, will be repaved during the summer of 2013.

In Coos Bay, watch for sidewalk construction along southbound U.S. Highway 101 at the south end of the project area, between Fir Ave. and Pine Street. Motorists can expect intermittent lane and shoulder closures. Pedestrians should watch for sidewalk closures.

A Furry Friends family affair

By Tim Novotny
The World

COOS BAY — Putting smiles on faces is what the Furry Friends therapy dog group is all about. It also brings families together.

Karen Neale and her dog, Lyla, have officially joined the ranks of Furry Friends, which already included her mother, Barbara Kirby, and daughter, Kirby Neale. The women celebrated the three-generation chain during a recent Furry Friends visit to Bay Area Hospital.

Tim Novotny

It was a fitting spot, because Karen has seen the benefits such visits up close.

"It's good for me because I work at the hospital, so I see these patients at night when they're not feeling well," said the respiratory therapist, with Lyla the bloodhound pup at her side. "It's nice to be able to put a smile on their face during the day when I come back with her."

According to Furry Friends' official guide, the nonprofit group was founded in 2004 "by a group of like-minded persons who were involved in visits to several, local care giving facilities."

It is there belief that even brief visits and contact with these gentle furry friends have "contributed to the mental well-being of many individuals."

Barbara said she was retired and looking to do something good with her newfound time. Someone suggested the Furry Friends and, along with her golden retriever named Cooper, she joined about two years ago.

"I really like it. I do Baycrest Village and North Bend Medical Center; I'm a regular there twice a month. I just think it's something I can give back and since Cooper loves to be petted ... that's his favorite thing."

It also didn't hurt that she got to spend some quality time with her granddaughter, Kirby, who went through the initial training at the same time with her yellow lab, Oddis.

"I really enjoyed that," Barbara said.

Now she is happy to add her daughter to the mix as well. And the group, which has 58 volunteers and 45 certified therapy dogs, is always happy to have more members.

Furry Friends President Ramona Pessa says anyone can join, but not everyone has a pet that will get to wear the blue vest.

"We don't get dogs and train them to be therapy dogs. These are just pets who we help train to be good, well-mannered dogs who can go into the facilities and schools that we visit," Pessa said.

To that end, there are rules to be adhered to before they can join in on the 20 or so facility visits each month.

The dogs must pass a careful evaluation, be at least 6 months old, pass the American Kennel Club's Canine Good Citizen Test, and the owner and dog must make three successful evaluation visits to at least two different facilities.

But Kirby says the training is well worth it, both for the owner and the dog. "It's something the dogs really like, Cooper anyway. When he sees his vest come out, he's just raring to go."

Barbara said it's a very rewarding way for dog and owner to spend an hour of time.

"It gives the opportunity to spend time with my mom and Kirby," added Karen, the rookie of the group, who also likes the warm-hearted moments that come along with membership. "Lyla is such a good dog and such a happy hound that she makes everybody happy, so it's nice."

Meetings

The Furry Friends hold monthly meetings on the fourth Thursday of each month at the Coos Bay Fire Station, at 450 Elrod Ave., and meetings are always open to the public.

Moose

Pacific Cove Humane Society

Pacific Cove Humane Society is featuring a cat and dog of the week, available for adoption through its "People-to-People" pet-matching service.

■ Angel is a very sweet and loving, 2-year-old black and white spayed cat. She was rescued and has been in foster care, but really needs her own human to give her lots of attention. She's great with other cats, dogs and people of all ages. She's an inside/outside cat.

■ Moose is a very sweet 6-year-old black and white pit mix that will be neutered soon and is recovering from a skin condition. He's very laid back and loving, not an aggressive bone in his body. He gets along with other dogs and people of all ages. He hasn't been around cats, but is probably OK with them.

Evaluation required. For information about adoptions, call 541-756-6522.

Cheers & Jeers

Cross purposes

Taxes always affect economic behavior. Always. If Oregon's Legislature wants to encourage adoption of hybrid and battery-powered vehicles, slapping drivers with a per-mile tax is counterproductive. Jeers to persistent efforts to make sure no one escapes taxation.

O, Tannen-bomb!

Riddle: Why are local fire departments so eager to collect discarded Christmas trees? Answer: It's easier that fighting house fires caused by geniuses who burn Christmas trees in their fireplaces. Cheers. (Call 541-756-7757 in North Bend, 541-269-1191 in Coos Bay.)

Warm children

Few things are more heartbreaking than a child going without decent shoes or a winter coat. Cheers to the United Way of Southwestern Oregon, aiming to raise $4,000 to serve 270 needy children. (Send donations to P.O. Box 1288, Coos Bay, OR 97420.)

Whose jetty is it?

Let's see — 43 years ago, Uncle Sam built a jetty at Port Orford. The jetty unexpectedly trapped sand, filling in the harbor. So Uncle Sam has been dredging the harbor ever since — until Congress slammed the brakes on dedicated spending. Jeers to short political memories.

Frigid fun

Chilly, teeth-chattering cheers to the hardy "polar bears" who go swimming on New Year's Day. Seriously — without these frostbitten fun seekers, the only news on the first day of the year would be about drunken drivers.

Rural champion

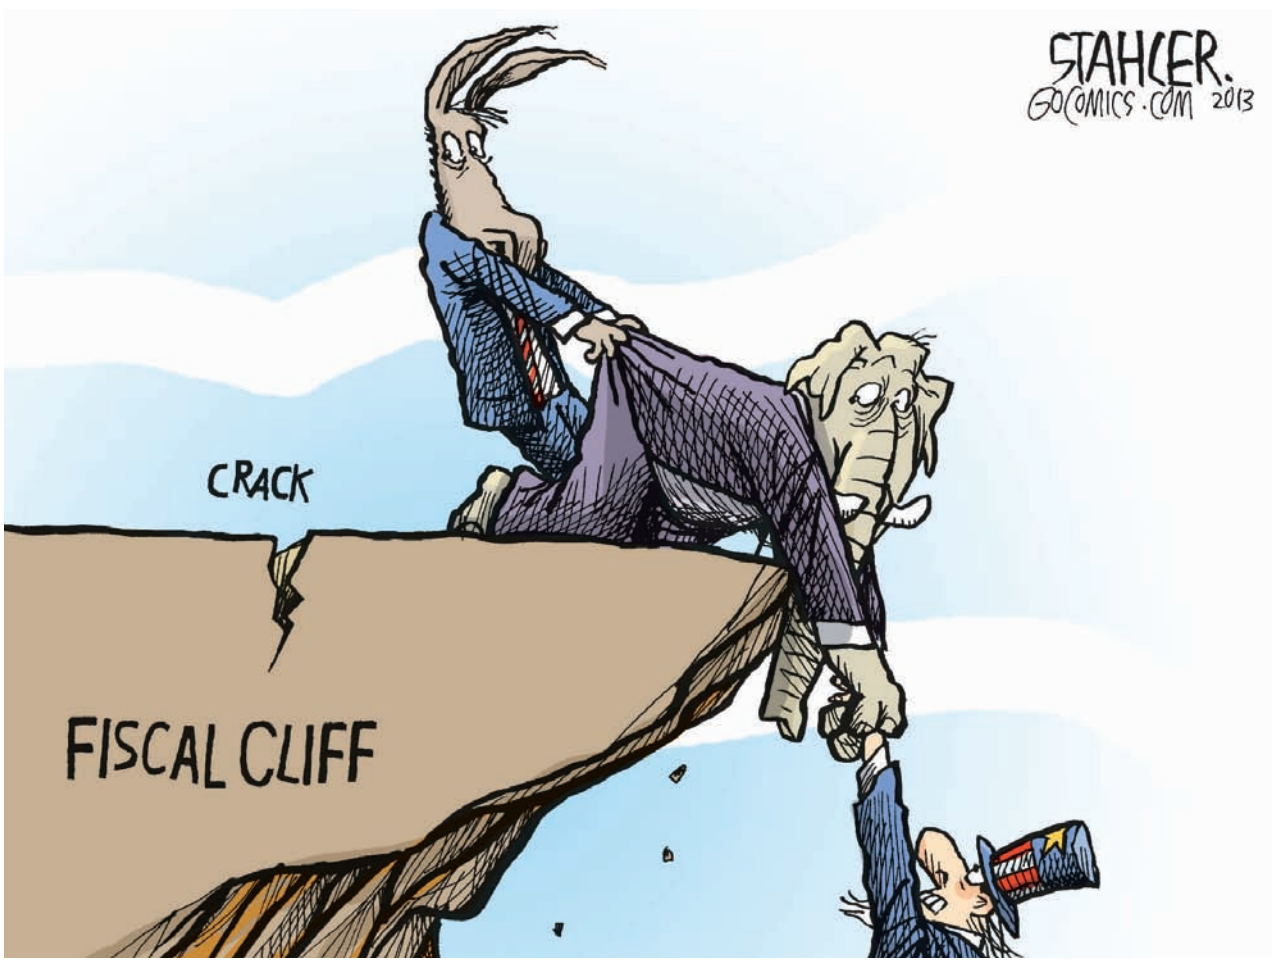

He's a freshman senator, but Arnie Roblan's legislative stature earned him the chairmanship of the new Rural Communities and Economic Development Committee. The Coos Bay Democrat will be ideally positioned to work for the well-being of small Oregon communities. Cheers.

Kudos

Thanks to everyone who offered assistance

I wrecked my black sports car Saturday on Highway 42 about 5 miles east of Remote about 8:30 a.m. I want to thank all the people who stopped to offer assistance and to inquire if I needed help. There must have been 15 persons who stopped or slowed to ask about me.

Thanks to the guy I was trying to pass, the guy working on the retaining wall a little to the east, who also supplied traffic cones, and especially the lady who stopped her eastbound car, got out and walked back to ask if I was OK. Thank you all.

Drum beat of gun control

Bill J. Grimes, I could not agree more with your letter. With even the first inklings of tragedy occurring, the gun control drums start beating. We are hearing it with Connecticut's horrible massacre and, if you remember, we heard it with poor Trayvon Martin's case as well.

It is imperative that we learn from history, folks. To that point, it is even more important that we interpret it correctly and spot when it is repeating itself right under our noses.

I'll bet that if you care to revisit the events and details surrounding WWII and the Nazi regime, you'll find eerie similarities with our very own country and government post-9/11. Stripping our right to bear arms and the continual desecration of the Constitution that we are bearing witness to will thrust us into a closed society if we allow it to continue.

No regulation, no problem

JOHN STOSSEL
Columnist

In the short time since President Obama was re-elected, government has issued hundreds of new regulations. The bureaucrats never stop. There are now more than 170,000 pages of federal regulations.

President Obama wants still more rules. Cheering on increased financial regulation, he said, "We've got to keep moving forward." To the president, and probably most Americans, "forward" means passing more laws.

It is scary to think about a world without regulation. Intuition leads us to think that without government we'd be victims of fraud, as I explain in my latest book, "No, They Can't!" But our intuition is wrong.

Consider this: An entire sector of the economy operates almost entirely without government controls. Complete strangers exchange big money there every day.

It's the Internet. It does have regulation, just not government regulation.

On my next TV show, titled "Freedom 2.0," economics professor Ed Stringham explains that Paypal.com, which transfers billions of dollars for people, at first assumed they needed government help to prevent fraud.

"They faced fraudsters from all over the world. They turned to the FBI," says Stringham. "But the FBI had no idea who these people were."

So PayPal invented a new form of regulation. "They developed a private fraud detection system, where they used computers to say, 'This might be fraudulent,' and then it would send it to a human to investigate that." That dramatically reduced fraud, and PayPal thrived.

EBay's business model also is threatened by fraud. How can a buyer trust that, say, a seller will actually deliver a $25 pack of baseball cards and that the cards will be what he claims they are? In theory, you could sue; but in practice, our legal system is too slow and costly for that.

So eBay came up with self-regulation: The buyers rate sellers.

"EBay and other groups developed private reputation mechanisms," says Stringham. "When you go onto eBay, you know there's a 99 percent chance that you're going to get the goods delivered."

Private companies found they could "crowd-source" enforcement against fraud and low-quality products, in much the same way that Wikipedia discovered an encyclopedia could be created without a central organizer. Wikipedia founder Jimmy Wales tells me that method "works far better than the top-down system that it replaced."

We almost always assume that top-down government regulation is necessary, even though history says otherwise. Did you know that stock markets began without government regulation?

Stringham researched how the first stock exchanges developed in London in the 1700s: "Government refused to enforce all but the most simple contracts. Nevertheless, brokers figured out how to do short sales, futures contracts, options contracts — even though none was enforceable by law."

They came up with private enforcement.

"They traded in coffeehouses. And after a while, they decided: 'Let's enforce rules within this coffeehouse. If you default, you're going to get kicked out of the coffeehouse, and we're going to call you a lame duck.'" (Because you had to waddle out of the coffeehouse. That's actually where the phrase "lame duck" originated.)

Years of consumer reporting have taught me that such private regulation is better for consumers than the piles of rules produced by our bloated government.

Worse, government's micromanagement stifles innovation. Companies now invest in lawyers and "compliance officers," rather than engineers and creators.

Those that don't may get shut down.

Intrade is an innovative "prediction market" website where people bet about future events — who will win the Oscars, elections, etc. The betting odds are great indicators of what will happen in the future because people think carefully before putting their money on the line.

But a government agency called the Commodity Futures Trading Commission determined that Intrade's bets are "commodity options" and Intrade does not have the right license to trade those options. The agency sued, and Intrade decided it had to close its site to Americans. The result: We lose knowledge — and opportunity.

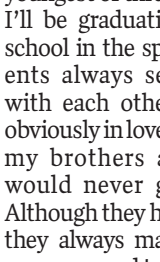

President Obama is wrong. We don't need new rules. Government should stop adding regulations — or try following the Stossel Law: For every new rule, repeal two old ones.

John Stossel is host of "Stossel" on the Fox Business Network. He's the author of "No They Can't: Why Government Fails, but Individuals Succeed." To find out more about John Stossel, visit his site at johnstossel.com.

Dad has 'secret' friend

DEAR ABBY

JEANNE PHILLIPS

DEAR ABBY: I'm the youngest of three children and I'll be graduating from high school in the spring. My parents always seemed happy with each other. They were obviously in love, and they told my brothers and me they would never get divorced. Although they had arguments, they always made up, and it never seemed to be serious.

For the last few months, my dad has been acting weird. He spends a lot of time talking to and texting "a friend" on the phone. The problem is, although the friend has a male name ("George") in his contacts, the person has a female voice. I didn't think anything about it until recently, when I turned on Dad's phone to play a game and it was open to a series of text messages between him and this "friend." What I saw made it clear that something is up. Mom knows nothing about it.

I love my father, but I don't think I can handle this. I can't believe he'd do this to our family, especially since all of us are going through a really hard time lately.

I don't know what to do. I don't want to tell anyone because I don't want our family to fall apart. But I can't stay quiet. What should I do? — BLINDSIDED IN JERSEY

DEAR BLINDSIDED: I agree that you can't keep quiet about this. What you saw was, of course, shocking — and the person you should talk to about it is your father. Sometimes when people are going through a really tough time, they do things they wouldn't ordinarily do. Your mother may — or may not — have an inkling that something is going on.

Ask your father if the text means he plans to leave the family. Then give him a deadline to come clean with your mother, and let him know that if he doesn't, you will. You have my sympathy.

DEAR ABBY: My husband was sober for 14 years. He started drinking again two years ago. He's on probation and drinking is a clear violation of his probation. His liver enzymes are elevated, and I can't seem to find the right words to get his attention. I have thought about contacting his probation officer, but then he will be incarcerated.

Abby, I am watching the man I love drink himself to death and I'm afraid for him. Should I tell his probation officer or just watch him self-destruct? — SCARED AND CONFUSED IN MICHIGAN

DEAR SCARED: The reason you can't get your husband's attention is because of the alcohol. He isn't thinking straight. As I am sure you realize, one of the hallmarks of addiction is denial. No one helps an alcoholic by enabling the person to continue drinking, and your husband definitely needs help.

While it may not be easy, talk to the probation officer so your husband can be incarcerated, dry out and become rational again. I know it is a painful choice, but watching him die of liver disease would be worse.

DEAR ABBY: Can you answer something for me? If the abbreviation for "mister" is "Mr.," then why is there an R in "Mrs." when there's no R in the word it's short for? — INQUISITIVE IN CALIFORNIA

DEAR INQUISITIVE: According to my American Heritage Dictionary (4th Edition), "'Mrs.' is the abbreviation of the word 'mistress'" — an antiquated term for a married or widowed woman.

Dear Abby is written by Abigail Van Buren, also known as Jeanne Phillips, and was founded by her mother, Pauline Phillips. Write Dear Abby at www.DearAbby.com or P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA 90069.

Judith A. Grossman

1944 - 2012

Memorial services will be held for Judith A. Grossman, 68, of North Bend at 11 a.m. Saturday, Jan. 12, at Bay Area Church of the Nazarene, 1850 Clark St., in North Bend and then at 11 a.m. Saturday, Feb. 2, at Calvary Chapel in Visalia, Calif.

Judith left this world to be with her Lord and savior Jesus Christ on the evening of Dec. 3, 2012. With her children and church family at her side during her last few days of life, Judy passed away quietly after living with decades of chronic illness. It was four months and a day from the date of when her loving husband, Richard E. Grossman, passed away.

Judy was born in Joplin, Mo., in 1944, but her family moved to the Central Valley of California when she was 2 years old. Judy's father worked in multiple industries and jobs, but the family finally settled in Fresno, Calif. After graduating high school, Judy married and had two lovely children, Kevin and Kristen, and worked tirelessly to take care of them and raise them well.

In 1979 Judy married the love of her life, Dick. They met while working together at the Visalia Police Department, where Judy was a dispatcher and Dick was a police detective. Judy became the dispatch supervisor at the VPD and was responsible for implementing an advanced public safety computer system for the city of Visalia. After leaving the police department, Judy had exciting but short careers with different technology companies. Judy and Dick were married for 33 years, recently renewing their vows in a beautiful church ceremony at the Bay Area Church of the Nazarene with Pastor Ron Halverson presiding.

While living in Visalia, Judy and Dick attended Calvary Chapel and were in charge of the senior group who prayed for others' needs. They then relocated to North Bend in 2003 because they loved the weather and that's when they joined the Bay Area Church of the Nazarene, where Judy was chairwoman of women's prayer ministry and the encouragement ministry where she sent out hopeful notes and cards to church members in need.

For much of her life, Judy was a master seamstress and chef, creating designer-quality clothes and many culinary delights for family and friends. Judy and Dick were fond of traveling when health was better for both, trekking across the U.S. and Canada in their motorhome and also flying to Hawaii several times. Judy and Dick also had a boat and belonged to a boat club and ventured out into the sea often. Judy's beauty transcended her illness, and she always "dressed to the nines" whether she was going out to dinner or down the street to the doctor. She was a loving, nurturing, devoted wife, mother and grandmother, outspoken and a true champion of family and friends in need. She was also a caring daughter and sister, and a deeply committed friend and family member, always the one to send cards and make calls on every occasion 365 days a year. She will sorely be missed by those she left behind.

Judy is survived by her son, Kevin of Santa Cruz, Calif.; daughter, Kristen of Visalia, Calif.; daughter, Michelle of Tulare, Calif.; daughter, Stephanie of Merced, Calif.; daughter, Simon of Eureka, Calif.; sister, Elizabeth of Fresno, Calif.; grandchildren, Celeste, Nicholas, Tomi, Richard, Shaunda, Bethany, Beatrice and Bryce; three great-grandchildren; and other aunts, uncles, nephews, nieces and cousins.

Mom, we will miss you every day but you will forever be with us. We will always love you.

Please send flowers or donations to either church in Judy Grossman's name.

Arrangements are under the direction of Coos Bay Chapel, 541-267-3131.

State officials begin new term

SALEM (AP) — Four Oregon Democrats took the oath of office Friday to continue in their jobs after winning the November election.

Secretary of State Kate Brown, Treasurer Ted Wheeler and Labor Commissioner Brad Avakian all won their second elections. Attorney General Ellen Rosenblum won her first election after being appointed to the office in June. All four will serve four-year terms.

Democratic Gov. John Kitzhaber, whose office was not on the ballot last year, administered the oath.

Rosenblum, the first woman elected Oregon attorney general, acknowledged the milestone but said she looks forward to a day when there are no more milestones to celebrate.

"Together with the 1,300 employees at the Department of Justice, we will do justice, we will serve the rule of law, we will work every day to protect and advocate for the most vulnerable among us," Rosenblum said.

As treasurer, Wheeler pledged to be a fiscal watchdog, champion access to higher education and vocational training, work on implementing his Oregon Investment Act, and partner with other West Coast states to improve access to funding for infrastructure projects.

"All of these are big ideas," Wheeler said. "All of them require a heavy political lift. But I'm confident that if we all pull together, as we typically do here in the state of Oregon, that we will get these things and many others done."

Brown said she'd use a second term as secretary of state to ensure effective auditing of government agencies and would ask the Legislature for authority to create an office to help small businesses navigate the state regulatory process. She also said it's time for Oregon to limit contributions to political campaigns.

"I will put the strength of democracy before politics," she said.

Avakian said the four statewide elected officials work together as a team to do good work for the people of Oregon.

"Every Oregonian is touched in some way by the very important work that these four offices do," Avakian said.

Former U.S. Rep. Giffords visits Newtown

By John Chirstofersen
The Associated Press

NEWTOWN, Conn. — Former U.S. Rep. Gabrielle Giffords of Arizona on Friday visited the Connecticut town where a gunman killed 26 people last month inside an elementary school.

Giffords, who was shot and critically wounded in a 2011 shooting, met with U.S. Sen. Richard Blumenthal and Lt. Gov. Nancy Wyman and Newtown's first selectman, according to Sue Marcinek, an assistant to the selectman. Giffords was accompanied by her husband, astronaut Mark Kelly.

She was planning to meet later Friday with families of some of the Newtown victims, according to Steve Jensen, a spokesman for Wyman.

Giffords was left partially blind, with a paralyzed right arm and brain injury, when a gunman opened fire at a constituent meet-and-greet outside a Tucson grocery store on Jan. 8, 2011. Arizona's chief federal judge and five others were killed and 13 people, including Giffords, were injured.

The gunman, Jared Lee Loughner, pleaded guilty to 19 federal charges and was sentenced to seven consecutive life sentences, plus 140 years.

Kelly said on the day of the Newtown shooting that it should lead to gun control.

"This time our response must consist of more than regret, sorrow, and condolence," Kelly said on his Facebook page, calling for "a meaningful discussion about our gun laws and how they can be reformed and better enforced to prevent gun violence and death in America."

Giffords' visit comes one day after Connecticut Gov. Dannel P. Malloy announced the creation of an advisory commission that will review and recommend changes to state laws and policies on issues including gun control in the wake of the Dec. 14 rampage at Sandy Hook Elementary School.

Poll: Fight obesity but keep the junk food

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Everyone could use a little help keeping those New Year's resolutions to slim down. But if it means the government limiting junk food, the response is an overwhelming, "No."

Americans call obesity a national health crisis and blame too much screen time and cheap fast food for fueling it. But a new poll finds people are split on how much the government should do to help — and most draw the line at attempts to force healthier eating.

A third of people say the government should be deeply involved in finding solutions to the epidemic. A similar proportion want it to play little or no role, and the rest are somewhere in the middle, according to the poll by The Associated Press-NORC Center for Public Affairs Research.

Require more physical activity in school, or provide nutritional guidelines to help people make better choices? Sure, 8 in 10 support those steps. Make restaurants post calorie counts on their menus, as the Food and Drug Administration is poised to do? Some 70 percent think it's a good idea.

"That's a start," said Khadijah Al-Amin, 52, of Coatesville, Pa. "The fat content should be put up there in red letters, not just put up there. The same way they mark something that's poisonous, so when you see it, you absolutely know."

But nearly 6 in 10 people surveyed oppose taxes targeting unhealthy foods, known as soda taxes or fat taxes.

And when it comes to restricting what people can buy — like New York City's recent ban of supersized sodas in restaurants — three-quarters say, "No way."

"The outlawing of sugary drinks, that's just silly," said Keith Donner, 52, of Miami, who prefers teaching schoolchildren to eat better and get moving.

FDA proposes sweeping food safety rules

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Food and Drug Administration on Friday proposed the most sweeping food safety rules in decades, requiring farmers and food companies to be more vigilant in the wake of deadly outbreaks in peanuts, cantaloupe and leafy greens.

The long-overdue regulations are aimed at reducing the estimated 3,000 deaths a year from foodborne illness. Just since last summer, outbreaks of listeria in cheese and salmonella in peanut butter, mangoes and cantaloupe have been linked to more than 400 illnesses and as many as seven deaths, according to the federal Centers for Disease Control and Prevention. The actual number of those sickened is likely much higher.

The FDA's proposed rules would require farmers to take new precautions against contamination, to include making sure workers' hands are washed, irrigation water is clean, and that animals stay out of fields. Food manufacturers will have to submit food safety plans to the government to show they are keeping their operations clean.

Many responsible food companies and farmers are already following the steps that the FDA would now require them to take. But officials say the requirements could have saved lives and prevented illnesses in several of the large-scale outbreaks that have hit the country in recent years.

In a 2011 outbreak of listeria in cantaloupe that claimed 33 lives, for example, FDA inspectors found pools of dirty water on the floor and old, dirty processing equipment at Jensen Farms in Colorado where the cantaloupes were grown. In a peanut butter outbreak this year linked to 42 salmonella illnesses, inspectors found samples of salmonella throughout Sunland Inc.'s peanut processing plant in New Mexico.

Under the new rules, companies would have to lay out plans for preventing those sorts of problems, monitor their own progress and explain to the FDA how they would correct them.

Job market shrugs off fears of 'cliff'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. job market proved resilient in December despite fears that a budget impasse in Washington would send the economy over the fiscal cliff and trigger growth-killing tax hikes and spending cuts.

Employers added 155,000 jobs last month, roughly matching the solid but unspectacular monthly pace of the past two years.

The gains announced Friday weren't enough to reduce unemployment, which remained a still-high 7.8 percent. The November rate was revised up a notch from the 7.7 percent the government had originally reported.

The stable pace of December hiring suggested that many employers tuned out the fracas in the nation's capital. The threat wasn't averted until a deal won final passage on New Year's Day.

Rather than hold back until the fiscal cliff was resolved, many employers kept hiring, most likely in anticipation of higher customer demand.

"What would hiring have been if we had not been facing the fiscal cliff in December?" said Robert Kavcic, senior economist at BMO Capital Markets. "We might have seen quite a bit stronger job growth" — something closer to 200,000 a month.

That's an encouraging sign for the job market, because an even bigger budget showdown is looming: Congress must vote to raise the government's $16.4 trillion borrowing limit by late February. If not, the government risks defaulting on its debt. Republicans will likely demand deep spending cuts as the price of raising the debt limit.

Robust hiring in construction and manufacturing drove last month's job increases.

Longtime women's center director to be honored

■ Anonymous donor will match funds for abuse prevention

By Tim Novotny
The World

Judy Moody, who recently retired, still holds a title with the Women's Safety and Resource Center. The executive director emeritus will be the guest of honor at their annual Ambassadors Club Dinner later this month.

Moody was at the helm of the center as it grew over the past 12 years from the Women's Safety Center, with a cramped four-bedroom safe refuge, to the current WSRC, complete with the much larger Coddington Place, Cloe House and Jane's House facilities.

Her dedication, vision and leadership will be honored at the Jan. 31 banquet at the Red Lion Inn.

The WSRC Ambassadors Club, composed of those who donate $500 or more to the cause, is a major source of funding for the organization. To honor Judy Moody for her service to the community, and because of increased expenses due to higher case loads, David and Marian Crumley have announced a source will match any new donations of $500 or more to the center.

The annual ambassadors banquet is free to all eligible donors, including those who will be making first-time donations this year. Anyone interested in supporting the center, or otherwise honoring Judy Moody for her long effort to end domestic violence in our community, can contact the center at 541-888-1048, or David Crumley at 541-756-0719.

Lions candy sales provide glasses

With Christmas and candy often going hand in hand, the Coquille Lions Club was able to sell one kind of gift to acquire another.

Lions Chairperson Linda Aiken touted the success of this winter's See's Candy sale, which included sending $1,000 to the Oregon Lions Sight and Hearing Foundation.

"We raised over $2,400 that will go toward sight and hearing issues in our community," Aiken said.

Coquille Lions President Aldo Marca added that the Lions provide a great resource, having spent over $5,500 providing eye exams and new glasses for Coquille residents who could not otherwise afford them.

"We have provided $830 for various Coquille High School programs and $1,229 for the Coos County Fair," Marca said.

The Coquille Lions meet at 6 p.m. the second Monday of the month at Mr. Zacks Bar and Grill in Coquille.

Power for art at Coos Museum

The Pacific Power Foundation has awarded a $2,000 grant to Coos Art Museum to help support its 2013 exhibition season.

The funds will assist the Coos Art Museum in producing more than 19 art exhibitions in its six exhibition galleries during 2013.

Among the exhibitions to be featured is the current Ken Means' Carousel display, which continues until Jan. 26.

Of particular note is the upcoming 15th National Maritime Art Exhibition of the American Association of Marine Artists. Coos Art Museum is one of only two West Coast venues to host this major exhibition, which runs from March 22 through May 18.

"Pacific Power Foundation is proud to help sponsor the programming at this dynamic and growing art institution on Oregon's Coast," said Monte Mendenhall, Pacific Power regional community manager.

A MINUTE MESSAGE

From NORM RUSSELL

Fiscal Cliff?

I have no idea what will happen in Washington D.C. regarding this "Fiscal Cliff" stuff. By this time you read this you may know, however ad I write this, it is still a confusing situation.

We cannot put our heads in the sand and say we do not care, but frankly there is nothing you or I can do the change things or even let them know what we think.

However, we can rest assured that God is still in control of our world. He calls the stars by name and the hairs on your heads are numbered. He knows the ending before the beginning and that gives me great comfort.

Being a Christian does not insulate me from the concerns each of us experience in life. It does however, enable me to put it in perspective. Things that occur here that are so troubling cannot be compared with the life I will live beyond this one. My only concern here is that I trust God and allow Him to work in me to shape me into that which He wants me to be.

Don't worry about what you cannot change, and trust Him who can change you.

Come worship with us Sunday.

"Why I Believe in Oregon Pacific Bank."

"Hello, I'm Tricia Benetti. When asked to serve on Oregon Pacific Bank's Board of Directors over eight years ago, I gladly took the opportunity, and I've never been sorry.

The reason is, as a smaller community bank, Oregon Pacific Bank is more friendly and personal. If you're like me, you know how important it is that a bank not only offers great service, but that the employees genuinely take an interest in you, your family and your business.

I also appreciate that Oregon Pacific Bank supports our local community both financially, and with active, involved and caring employees.

It is very satisfying and inspiring to know that Oregon Pacific Bank is making a positive impact within our communities."

ADMINISTRATOR
Report calls for 2 new managers

officer will be a "lightening rod" for some people, but it shouldn't overshadow the report.

"I would hate to see people discount the whole report based on that one issue," she said. "There's a lot of really important stuff in there."

Cribbins and Sweet are strong supporters of the report's suggestions to create a long-term plan for the county and to collaborate with other cities and counties.

The pair also agree with the report's proposal to veer away from "department liaisons."

At present, each of the three commissioners oversee six to 10 different departments. Cribbins and Sweet agree with the report's conclusion that the board should communicate with "one voice."

"I think the liaison arrangement does break down the county into some silos and minimizes communication between departments and between the board as a whole," Sweet said.

But Cribbins and Sweet may be at odds with Main, who likes the arrangement. Main is particularly fond of his role as liaison to the Sheriff's Office.

"I think liaison assignments are important," he said. "You keep in touch with what's going on with the county."

The board is likely to discuss the report in a public meeting at the end of this month.

Reporter Daniel Simmons-Ritchie can be reached at 541-269-1222, ext. 249, or at dritchie@theworldlink.com.

Other major recommendations

■ Strategic plan: Create a long-term plan of priorities and contingencies. Hold a meeting in January or February to create a planning committee.

■ Budget: Forecast county finances five to six years in the future. The county should also tie its annual budget to the aforementioned "strategic plan," give better instructions to departments about spending expectations, and make each annual budget easier to understand.

■ Accounting and IT: Centralize management of vehicles and computers. "There appears to be a mix of systems and system ages such that basic inter-department management of the IT network is very difficult and inefficient." The county also should consider upgrading its 20-year-old accounting software.

■ Intergovernmental team: Follow example of other counties and form "collaboration alliance" with city councils and neighboring counties. Look at where services could be shared, e.g. 911 dispatch and public health services.

Coos County Commissioner John Sweet takes his Oath of Office on Friday in the commissioner's courtroom at the Coos County Courthouse. Sweet beat Tim Bishop in the November election for commissioner position 2.

COQUILLE — Standing before a 7-foot-wide American flag and a 40-strong crowd, a new set of officials prepared themselves Friday to take the reins of Coos County.

Six candidates elected by voters in November took the oath of office in the county courthouse. Their terms will officially begin on Monday.

Michael Dado, Mary Barton and Paul Frasier each start successive terms in the positions of surveyor, treasurer, and district attorney. All three ran unopposed this election.

"Sometimes you wonder what the heck you're doing," Frasier said after the ceremony. "But this was my chosen profession, my chosen career, and I hope I can continue doing a good job for everybody."

Meanwhile, John Sweet and Melissa Cribbins will replace Fred Messerle and Cam Parry on the Board of Commissioners. Bob Main returns with his second term on the board.

"I really appreciate all the support I had during the election," Main said. "It seems like yesterday when I started here in 1978 as an appraiser in the assessor's office."

In a gesture of commitment, illness couldn't deter Sweet from the big day. Although he had to offer a disclaimer to the crowd after taking his oath.

"This is a bad cold," Sweet croaked with a laugh. "Not over-indulgence from last night."

won't be easy.

"Some years, fishermen were able to just drop their pots over the side and catch a lot of crab; this year, it is going to take a little experience, a little luck, and you've got to move your gear," Adams said.

In response to the low returns, the price of crab has risen a bit in some areas to give fishermen a boost.

Adams says prices in Oregon range from the opening price of $2.30 per pound to $3 per pound in some areas. Washington crab has reached $3.75.

Adams says crab fishing is cyclical, so a lower than normal year would not be out of the ordinary considering recent success.

Last year, the Oregon Department of Fish and Wildlife reported a commercial Dungeness crab season in Oregon totaling 14.2 million pounds — a drop of 7.1 million pounds from 2010-2011.

Still, the crab catch has been up over the past decade. The ODFW reports an average catch of 10 million pounds 12 years ago, compared to an average of about 20 million pounds now.

And not all of the news from the coast is bad.

Offsetting the low numbers, the quality of crab coming into the Hallmark Fisheries has been fantastic. Adams says the Charleston-based seafood processor has been getting some very good quality crab.

"That's normal," he said. "When the crab get big like this it's hard to find the quantity."

Gillnetters file challenge to new rules

ASTORIA (AP) — Commercial fishermen turned to the Oregon Court of Appeals on Friday to challenge a recent change in the state's gillnet fishing rules.

In addition to a petition that asks the Oregon court to review the validity of the changes, a lawyer for the fishermen sent a letter to the Washington state Fish and Wildlife Commission, asking it to push back a gillnet rule change decision expected later this month.

The Daily Astorian reported that a motion to stay enforcement of the new Oregon rules will be filed next week.

On Dec. 7, the Oregon Fish and Wildlife Commission voted to ban the use of gillnets to catch fish on the main stem of the Columbia River, relegating the primary commercial-fishing tool to side channels and tributaries.

Washington's fish commission is expected to decide next week on similar rules.

The proposal has infuriated commercial fishermen, who say it'll be impossible for them to earn a living by fishing only in limited areas.

Cause is still under review offshore wreck was shared by the U.S. Coast Guard — which rescued the crew — and the vessel's insurer, Sunderland Marine Mutual Insurance.

But by Friday, the crab boat had split completely in two, with the stern section drifting toward shore.

According to Chris Havel of the Oregon Parks and Recreation Department, once that piece hit land, its removal became his agency's sole responsibility.

Commercial salvage crews worked alongside state and federal employees to secure the beach throughout the day Friday.

After exploring a number of scenarios, the agency has settled on using a crane to hoist the stern off the beach.

"The Simpson Reef overlook will be closed through Jan. 7," in order for equipment to be brought in and the stern section to be removed, Havel said.

The cause of the wreck is still under investigation.

Pilot fails alcohol test, suspended

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — An American Eagle pilot was suspended after failing a blood-alcohol test as he prepared to fly on Friday from Minneapolis to New York City, authorities said.

Police at Minneapolis-St. Paul International Airport said officers and a Transportation Security Administration agent smelled alcohol as they passed the pilot waiting to get on an elevator. The pilot was conducting preflight checks at about 6 a.m. when police boarded the aircraft, airport spokesman Patrick Hogan said.

Officers made him take a breath test and arrested him on suspicion of being under the influence of alcohol, Hogan said. Passengers had not yet boarded the flight to New York's LaGuardia Airport, he said.

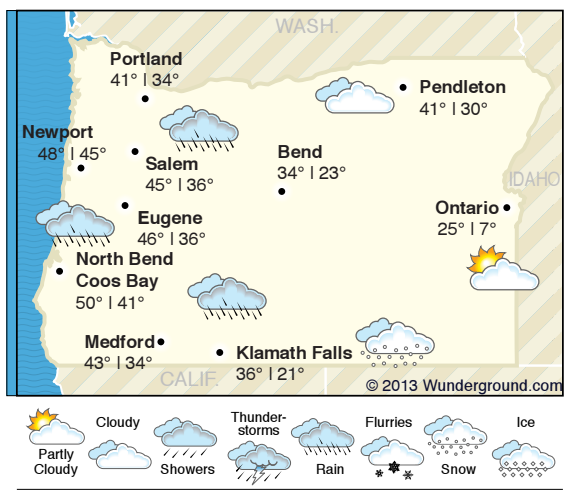

Hogan said airport police will wait until blood tests are processed before deciding whether to file charges against the pilot. Police identified the pilot as 48-year-old Kolbjorn Jarle Kristiansen. He was released to airline employees several hours after his arrest.

Federal rules prohibit pilots from flying within eight hours of drinking alcohol or if they have a blood-alcohol level of 0.04 or higher, half the level allowed for motorists.

Congress approves $9.7 billion in Sandy flood aid

By Andrew Miga
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The new Congress on Friday rushed out $9.7 billion to help pay flood insurance claims to 115,000 people and businesses afflicted by Superstorm Sandy, two days after New Jersey's governor and other Northeast Republicans upbraided Speaker John Boehner for killing a broader package for state and local governments in the storm's path.

The bill replenishes the National Flood Insurance Program that was due to run out of money next week with the pending Sandy-related claims as well as 5,000 unresolved claims from other floods.

"It's a small down payment on the larger aid we need," said Sen. Chuck Schumer, D-N.Y. The legislation cleared the Senate by a voice vote following passage by the House, 354-67.

The government already has spent about $2 billion on the emergency response to the late October storm, one of the worst ever in the Northeast. It slammed the Atlantic coastline from North Carolina to Maine, with the worst damage occurring in New York City and its suburbs, New Jersey and Connecticut. The storm is blamed for 140 deaths.

Boehner has promised a vote Jan. 15 on a broader, $51 billion package of aid, which would bring the total to the more than $60 billion requested by President Barack Obama. Senate leaders have promised a vote the following week.

The Senate passed a $60.4 billion bill a week ago but House Republicans, complaining that it was laden with pork projects unrelated to the storm, cut it by more than half. Boehner canceled a New Year's Day vote on it after nearly two-thirds of House Republicans voted against the "fiscal cliff" package of tax and spending increases.

The White House praised Friday's vote helping homeowners, renters and businesses, and urged Congress to act quickly on the remainder of Obama's request.

New Jersey Gov. Chris Christie and New York Gov. Andrew Cuomo issued a joint statement also imploring Congress to move hastily on the rest of the money. "We are trusting Congress to act accordingly on January 15th," they said.

It was a more temperate response than was heard earlier in the week, when a livid Christie blistered House Republicans and Boehner himself for holding up the aid and other GOP figures from the region, as well as Democrats, cried "betrayal."

All of the "no" votes in the House were cast by Republicans, who said other government programs should have been cut to pay for the measure. As with past natural disasters, the Sandy aid proposals do not provide for offsetting spending cuts, meaning the aid comes at the cost of higher deficits.

The bill gives more authority to the National Flood Insurance Program to borrow money from the U.S. Treasury to pay claims. Premiums average about $625 per year and residential claims under the program average nearly $30,000.

Rep. Tim Huelskamp, R-Kan., a fiscal conservative who voted against the flood bill, said he was among those with concerns it would add to huge budget deficits. "We have to talk seriously about offsets," Huelskamp said. "We can't take $60 billion off budget, that's my problem with it."

Venezuela's Chavez may be on life support machine

By Ian James
The Associated Press

CARACAS, Venezuela — Venezuelan President Hugo Chavez is being treated for "respiratory deficiency" after complications from a severe lung infection, his government said, pointing to a deepening crisis for the ailing 58-year-old president.

Chavez hasn't spoken publicly or been seen since his Dec. 11 operation in Cuba, and the latest report from his government Thursday night increased speculation that he is unlikely to be able to be sworn in for another term as scheduled in less than a week. It was the first time the government has described the lung infection as "severe," and the strongest confirmation yet that Chavez is having serious trouble breathing after days of rumors about his condition worsening.

"Chavez has faced complications as a result of a severe respiratory infection. This infection has led to respiratory deficiency that requires Commander Chavez to remain in strict compliance with his medical treatment," Information Minister Ernesto Villegas said Thursday night, reading the statement on television.

The government's characterization raised the possibility that Chavez might be breathing with the assistance of a machine. But the government did not address that question and didn't give details of the president's treatment.

Independent medical experts consulted by The Associated Press said the government's account indicated a potentially dangerous turn in Chavez's condition, but that it's unclear whether he is attached to a ventilator.

"It appears he has a very severe pneumonia that he suffered after a respiratory failure. It is not very specific," said Dr. Alejandro Rios-Ramirez, a pulmonary specialist in Puerto Vallarta, Mexico, who is not involved in Chavez's treatment. "It does imply the gravity of his pulmonary infection that led to a respiratory failure."

Dr. Gustavo Medrano, a lung specialist at the Centro Medico hospital in Caracas, said he has seen similar cases in cancer patients who have undergone surgery, and "in general it's very bad, above all after a surgery like the one they performed on him."

"I don't know the magnitude of the infection he has, how much of his lungs have been compromised, how much other organs are being affected. That's not clear," Medrano said.

"What's most likely is that he's on mechanical ventilation," Medrano added. However, he said, while respiratory deficiency means there is an abnormally low concentration of oxygen in the blood, depending on the severity it can be treated in various ways.

Dr. Michael Pishvaian, an oncologist at Georgetown University's Lombardi Cancer Center in Washington, agreed that such respiratory infections can run the gamut from "a mild infection requiring antibiotics and supplemental oxygen to life-threatening respiratory complications."

"It could be a very ominous sign," Pishvaian said. He said it's possible Chavez could be on "life support," but added that it's impossible to be sure without more details.

Elephants feast on pine trees

BERLIN (AP) — Elephants at the Berlin Zoo finally got a chance to tuck into their Christmas dinner: A feast of donated pine trees.

The zoo treated its elephants and some of its other animals to the trees for lunch Friday. Before gobbling the greenery, elephants young and old played with the trees, whose strong smell attracts them.

Elephant keeper Ragnar Kuehne said the unsold Christmas trees were donated by local vendors.

He said "the animals love it. For them, the Christmas feast is starting now."

Kuehne says the zoo doesn't accept trees from the public, which could contain chemicals or leftover decorations. He also says Christmas trees inside houses aren't as fresh and juicy as those at cold outdoor markets.

Pakistani girl shot by Taliban leaves U.K. hospital

■ Shooting victim will return for skull surgery next month

LONDON (AP) — A 15-year-old Pakistani girl shot in the head by the Taliban for promoting girls' education has been released from a Birmingham hospital to live with her family, doctors said Friday.

Photographs and a video released by the Queen Elizabeth Hospital Birmingham showed Malala Yousufzai hugging nurses, waving and smiling shyly. Her steps seemed tentative as she walked down the hospital corridor talking to nurses, the injured side of her face deftly turned from the lenses. But hospital officials say she is strong and recovering well.

Malala will live with her parents and two brothers in the U.K. while she continues to receive treatment, but will be admitted again in the next month for another round of surgery to rebuild her skull.

Experts have been optimistic that Malala, who was airlifted from Pakistan in October to receive specialized medical care, has a good chance of recovery because the brains of teenagers are still growing and can better adapt to trauma.

"Malala is a strong young woman and has worked hard with the people caring for her to make excellent progress in her recovery," said Dr. Dave Rosser, the medical director for University Hospitals Birmingham. "Following discussions with Malala and her medical team, we decided that she would benefit from being at home with her parents and two brothers."

The Taliban targeted Malala because of her relentless objection to the group's regressive interpretation of Islam that limits girls' access to education. She was returning home from school in Pakistan's scenic Swat Valley on Oct. 9 when the militants shot her for criticizing their efforts to keep girls from getting an education.

Her case won worldwide recognition, and the teen became a symbol for the struggle for women's rights in Pakistan. In an indication of her reach, she made the shortlist for Time magazine's "Person of the Year" for 2012.

Pakistani doctors removed a bullet that entered her head and headed toward her spine. The decision to send Malala to Britain was taken in consultation with her family. Pakistan is paying for her treatment.

Pakistan also appointed Malala's father, Ziauddin, as its education attache in Birmingham. The position, with an initial three-year commitment, virtually guarantees that Malala will remain in Britain for now.

Coquille gets big win on home court

By John Gunther
The World

COQUILLE — Coquille's girls basketball team took the first important step toward a possible berth in the Class 3A playoffs on Friday, beating visiting Glide 48-36.

The Red Devils, Wildcats and Bandon are battling for one spot in the playoffs, facing each other three times over the coming weeks, and preserving home court may prove vital in that playoff race.

"Now that it's league, we're getting that fire back," said Coquille senior Taylor GeDeros. "Every game matters."

GeDeros came out on fire from the start for Coquille, scoring nine points in the first five minutes on the way to a game-high 25.

The Red Devils built a quick seven-point advantage, only to see Glide cut it to three. Similarly, Coquille had a nine-point lead in the second quarter, only to see Glide pull within two. And the Red Devils went up 34-25 late in the third quarter.

But Glide scored the last two points of that quarter and then the first six of the fourth, after Coquille turned the ball over on its first three possessions.

"We started panicking," GeDeros said. "Then Coach called a time out and we settled down."

Coquille's Taylor GeDeros tries to steal the ball from Glide in the second half of their game Friday night in Coquille. GeDeros had a game-high 25 points in the win.

The Red Devils scored nine straight — a jumper and two free throws by GeDeros, a three-point play inside by Kaitlyn Hyatt and two free throws by Emily Lack — and this time Glide wasn't able to come back.

"At the end, we realized we had to win this, because it's a league game," said Lack, adding that the team played better overall in the second half, and especially rebounding the ball.

Lack finished with eight points, seven rebounds and four assists. The Red Devils also got a huge boost from junior post Nicole Romine, who hit six of her eight free throws and also played solid defense in relief of Hyatt, who got in foul trouble in the first half.

"She's been tearing it up in practice," said Coquille coach Tim GeDeros.

Romine's contribution was vital with sophomore Mikayla Schepp unavailable due to an illness.

"She did so good," Taylor GeDeros said.

Kali Vickery had nine points and Amanda Hatley added eight for the Wildcats.

Coquille improved to 2-0 in the hybrid Sunset Conference and Glide fell to 0-2. In the standings that matter for the playoffs, the Red Devils are 1-0 and Glide is 0-1 heading into Coquille's home game with much-improved Bandon on Tuesday.

"We needed that one," Tim GeDeros said. "Now we've got to focus on Bandon."

Taylor GeDeros said the Red Devils are eyeing both the league title and a berth in the playoffs.

"Especially me and Emily," she said. "We've been Sunset champions every year."

Pirates build winning streak

By Tyler Richardson
The World

COOS BAY — Freshmen usually are considered an afterthought when it comes to varsity basketball, but Jake Miles stole the show Friday night at Marshfield as he led the Pirates to their second consecutive victory.

Miles controlled the tempo of the game by limiting his turnovers and orchestrating a half-court offense that allowed his young team to close out a close fourth quarter.

The Pirates were able to defeat Brookings-Harbor 50-42 behind Miles' 18 points and 7-for-9 shooting from the free-throw line.

"He took care of the ball really well," head coach Jesse Ainsworth said about his young point guard. "He's the catalyst of our team. I ask a ton of him and he did a a good job."

The Pirates jumped out to an early lead by shooting 6-for-13 in the first quarter. Junior Matt Woods, who finished with 13 points and 11 rebounds, controlled the glass and scored down low early to put his team up six at the end of the first.

Brookings-Harbor battled back with hot shooting from Junior Justin Murray and took a 23-21 lead into halftime.

The Pirates came out in the second half and slowed down the Bruins' up-tempo offense with good team defense and execution in the halfcourt. They outscored Brookings-Harbor 16-11 in third, behind Miles' shooting from the stripe and the inside play of Woods.

Red Devil boys top Wildcats

By John Gunther
The World

COQUILLE — Round one goes to Coquille's boys.

The Red Devils beat visiting Glide 42-36 Friday in the first of their three head-to-head matchups of the Sunset Conference league season. Coquille, Glide and a young Bandon squad are battling for one spot in the Class 3A playoffs, meaning winning the head-to-head series is vital for reaching the postseason.

The Red Devils beat the Wildcats with a tough defense and a big second half.

Going into the contest, the top scoring threats for the two teams were Coquille's Larry Bowen and Glide's Brandon Halter. But they combined to shoot just 1-for-13 in the first half — an early bucket by Halter — and the teams entered the halftime lockerroom tied at 17.

Nearly all of Coquille's first-half points were scored by Terrence Edwards and Matt Miranda, though the Red Devils finally got Bowen some hoops inside against Glide's sagging zone defense in the third quarter.

The teams were tied three times in the third quarter, the last one when Edwards hit a 3-pointer for the Red Devils and Jake Livingston answered with one for Glide.

But Coquille finished the quarter on a 7-0 run to take the lead for good.

Oregon rolls to win in Fiesta Bowl

GLENDALE, Ariz. (AP) — As Oregon coach Chip Kelly was about to receive the massive Fiesta Bowl trophy, Ducks fans inside University of Phoenix Stadium started a chant of "We want Chip!"

Whether he returns or not is up in the air.

If Kelly does head to the NFL, this was a great send off.

Sparked by De'Anthony Thomas' 94-yard touchdown return on the opening kickoff, No. 5 Oregon turned the Fiesta Bowl into a track meet from the start and bolted past No. 7 Kansas State 35-17 Thursday night in what could be Kelly's final game with the Ducks.

"This wasn't going to be a distraction," Kelly said of reports that he was headed to the NFL. "It wasn't a distraction for me — I think it's an honor. But I think it's an honor because of the players we have in this program that people want to talk to me."

Teams that had their national title aspirations end on the same day, Oregon and Kansas State ended up in the desert for a marquee matchup billed as a battle of styles: The fast-flying Ducks vs. the methodical Wildcats.

With Kelly reportedly talking to several NFL teams, Oregon (12-1) was too much for Kansas State and its Heisman Trophy finalist, Collin Klein, who were playing catch-up from the start.

Marshfield girls run to win over Brookings-Harbor

By Tyler Richardson
The World

COOS BAY — The Marshfield girls basketball team got off to a hot start Friday and didn't look back.

By the time the first quarter was over, the Pirates had forced nine turnovers and were leading Brookings-Harbor 19-4.

The Pirates never took their foot of the gas during an up-and-down game, which they won handily 59-27. Transition baskets off the Bruins' turnovers and early hot shooting allowed the Pirates to never let their opponents within 20 points after the first quarter.

Junior Abby Thrall used a deadly mid-range game to amass 18 points. Senior Peyton Babb complemented Thrall's scoring with stellar defense, while also adding 13 points of her own.

The Pirates turned Brookings-Harbor's frenetic pace to their advantage, as they broke down the Bruins' full court press and got out on the break for easy baskets after forcing 22 turnovers.

"We knew they wanted to press us an force turnovers," head coach Bruce Bryant said. "We've really been trying to develop a transition game. We took good shots and ran the floor. We play our best when teams press us."

The Pirates shot 14-for-25 in the first half and finished 26-for-50 overall. Sophomore Jade Chavez added eight points and sophomore Katelyn Rossback handled the ball well off the bench, while adding six points.

Thrall moved her game from behind the arc to mid-range spots all over the court. She constantly found holes in the Bruins' zone and capitalized on her opportunities.

"I usually shoot from outside," she said. "I was happy things fell. We needed to get out and go tonight and that's exactly what we did."

The Pirates were coming off an impressive performance in the Les Schwab South Coast Holiday Basketball Tournament where they won three games and took home the title for the first time. The win moved their record to 9-4 and they have won six out of their last seven games.

Bryant said his team has showed up as of late, but with two big games looming with Midwestern League favorites Springfield and Willamette, next week will be a true test of how good the Pirates really are.

"We're developing confidence," he said. "We have very tough teams coming up. I told the girls we need those challenges. We need those games to find out where we are."

Glide's Brandon Halter and Coquille's Larry Bowen to for the rebound during their game Friday night in Coquille.

COQUILLE

Caleb Owens hit a free throw, Austin Arrant had a steal and layin, Bowen scored inside and Owens had a rebound hoop just before the buzzer.

When Bowen scored the opening hoop of the fourth, Coquille had a nine-point lead and Glide never got closer than five down after that.

Edwards finished with a team-best 13 points for Coquille, while Bowen had 10 and Miranda nine.

Jacob Fricke led the Wildcats with 14 points, going 10-for-12 from the line. Halter had eight, though six came on a pair of 3-pointers in the final 50 seconds.

"We defended him well," Coquille coach Dan Cumberland said of his players, who frequently double-teamed Glide's sharpshooter whenever he got the ball.

Edwards said Coquille picked it up in the second half, after a lethargic opening two quarters.

"Everybody stepped up," he said.

As for his own contributions, which included a pair of 3-pointers, Edwards said they were necessary.

"It had to happen, or else everybody will pack it in and stop Larry," he said. "Our outside game has to happen."

Miranda also had a 3-pointer for Coquille.

Coquille won despite a poor effort on the boards and shooting just 9-for-21 from the foul line.

"That's the fifth game in a row we haven't rebounded well," Cumberland said. "We're too big to do that."

Glide had a 34-28 rebounding edge. Owens led Coquille with seven boards.

Coquille will look to fix those problems before hosting Bandon on Tuesday. They then visit Oakland for a nonleague game and have their one trip to Glide.

Fortunately for the Red Devils, after Friday they are a game up on the Wildcats in the playoff race.

They can expect another big challenge, especially since Glide should have point guard Cory Finlay for that game — he missed Friday's contest with an illness.

North Bend boys win on the road

The World

North Bend's boys basketball team stretched its win streak to seven games with a 47-26 victory at Stayton on Friday.

Hayden Davisson had 15 points and Hamilton Mateski added 13 for the Bulldogs, who outscored the Eagles 30-14 over the middle two quarters after the teams were tied 11-11 through eight minutes.

Local Recap

T.T. Johnson had 12 points for the Eagles.

North Bend hosts Phoenix today in a game that originally had been scheduled for early December, but was postponed because of bad weather.

The girls tip off at 2:30 p.m. today, followed by the boys about 4 p.m.

Sutherlin 68, Myrtle Point 53: The visiting Bulldogs held off the Bobcats in the fourth quarter.

"We played them tough the whole way," said Myrtle Point coach Dave Larsen.

The Bobcats were leading for a few minutes in the third quarter and down by only a few late in the fourth before Sutherlin stretched its lead at the foul line.

"We tried to run with them," Larsen said, adding that his six-man rotation left the Bobcats worn out at the end.

"I think it was the best game we've played this year," he said. "We just couldn't pull it out in the end. I was really pleased with the way we played."

Taler Jensen had 17 points and Michael Matteo added 14 for Sutherlin. Cooper Stateler had 17 points, Matt Newton 14 and Kyle Seals 13 for the Bobcats, who return to league play with a trip to Gold Beach on Tuesday.

Sunset Conference

Gold Beach 60, Reedsport 35: Garrett Litterell had 19 points and Garrett Dolan added 17 as the Panthers rolled to the home win.

Gold Beach kept pace with Coquille atop the Sunset Conference standings and won its first matchup with one of the other two Class 2A teams in the league. The Panthers host the other Class 2A squad, Myrtle Point, on Tuesday and will play both the Braves and the Bobcats twice more after that.

Montana Frame had 11 for the Braves, who host Marshfield in a nonleague game Tuesday.

Skyline League

Pacific 74, Yoncalla 41: The Pirates had a dominant win in their league opener, blowing the game open by outscoring the Eagles 28-2 in the second quarter.

"Obviously, it was nice," said Pacific coach Ben Stallard. "I just think we've got a great group of kids. They always play hard.

"I think we made some better decisions in transition tonight. Hopefully, we build on those decisions and do better as we get into league here."

Brothers Ethan and Tyler Cline scored 17 points each for Pacific and Nick Scaffo and Cole Kreutzer both added 12. Alex Anderson had 11 for Yoncalla.

Camas Valley 57, Powers 29: The Cruisers couldn't keep up with the host Hornets in the league opener.

Ryan Gallagher had 17 points and Theran Hunt added 12 for Camas Valley.

Jaron MacDonald and Carl Martinez scored eight each for Powers, which hosts Elkton tonight.

GIRLS BASKETBALL

Nonleague

Stayton 56, North Bend 43: The Bulldogs had a great first quarter, but couldn't sustain the momentum against the host Eagles.

Madison Spence returned form an injury to score 11 of her 15 points in the first quarter, when North Bend led 20-15. But Stayton outscored the Bulldogs 30-11 over the middle two quarters.

Britni Ring added nine points for North Bend. Hannah Bradley had 14 to lead Stayton.

Sutherlin 44, Myrtle Point 13: The visiting Bulldogs added the Bobcats to the list of teams they've blown out this season, pulling away from a 13-5 lead late in the first half and cruising to the win.

"They're athletic and they play hard-nosed, tough defense and they don't have any weaknesses," said Myrtle Point coach Marty Stallard, adding that he was pleased with his team's effort for most of the first half.

"We were playing great defense and playing pretty smart," he said. "We just couldn't make a basket."

The Bulldogs scored the final 12 points of the first half and were never threatened the final two quarters.

Miranda Mendenhall had 15 points and Kazlyn Clarno added 10 for Sutherlin.

MacKenzie Findley led the Bobcats with three points.

Myrtle Point returns to Sunset Conference play with a game at Gold Beach on Tuesday.

Sunset Conference

Gold Beach 31, Reedsport 14: The Panthers trailed 7-3 after the first quarter, but limited Reedsport to just seven points the rest of the game, improving to 2-0 in league play.

Morrigan Clifford had 11 points for the Panthers, while Madi Richardson led the Braves with five.

Gold Beach led 11-10 at halftime, but pulled ahead by outscoring Reedsport 13-2 in the third quarter.

The game was the first of three between the two teams that will help determine which two teams — also including Myrtle Point — advance to the Class 2A district playoffs.

Skyline League

Camas Valley 33, Powers 31: The host Hornets tipped the Cruisers in the league opener for the two teams.

"We looked like we hadn't played in about 2½ weeks," said Powers coach Ben Baldwin, whose squad hadn't faced another team since Dec. 19.

"We couldn't make a bucket in the first half, really the whole game. We did not shoot well."

Powers had a chance to tie the game in the final seconds, but missed.

Kendall Stallard had eight points and Rebecca Standley added seven for the Cruisers.

Taylor Colvin had 15 to lead the Hornets.

Yoncalla 57, Pacific 38: The Eagles pulled away from a nine-point halftime lead in the league opener.

Salista Williams had 19 points for Yoncalla, while Karen Wickman added 13 and Tabitha Shaw 11.

Reid becomes new coach of Kansas City

The Associated Press

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Andy Reid pulled up to Arrowhead Stadium in a black SUV on Friday, stepped out of it wearing a dark suit and red tie, and walked briskly toward the doors of the Kansas City Chiefs' home.

His new home, as it turned out.

Just a few hours later, Reid officially became the coach of the Chiefs.

The longtime Eagles coach signed a five-year deal, two people familiar with the situation told The Associated Press. The people spoke on condition of anonymity because they weren't authorized to discuss the terms of the contract.

The Chiefs have scheduled an introductory press conference for Monday.

Reid's agreement was finalized shortly after the Chiefs announced they had parted ways with general manager Scott Pioli after four tumultuous seasons in Kansas City.

It's expected that Reid will pursue longtime Packers personnel man John Dorsey or former Browns GM Tom Heckert — or perhaps both of them — to work with him in the front office.

NHL, union meet with mediator

NEW YORK — The NHL and the union are meeting separately with a federal mediator but have no plans yet to negotiate.

Federal mediator Scot Beckenbaugh is talking with representatives from the players' association and league Friday in an attempt to return the parties to the bargaining table after they spent most of Thursday apart.

The lockout is in its 111th day. The sides have one week to reach a deal on a collective bargaining agreement that would allow for a 48-game season — the minimum the NHL has said it will play. Commissioner Gary Bettman set a Jan. 11 deadline for a deal so the season can begin eight days later.

American Shiffrin wins slalom

ZAGREB, Croatia — Teenager Mikaela Shiffrin is living up to her billing as American skiing's next big star.

She earned her second World Cup title Friday by winning the slalom by a massive 1.19-second margin to regain the lead in the discipline standings.

The 17-year-old Shiffrin had the fastest time in both runs to finish in a combined 2 minutes, 1.73 seconds. She won her first career World Cup event last month in Are, Sweden.

Frida Hansdotter of Sweden was second, and Erin Mielzynski of Canada was 1.76 behind in third. The rest of the field finished more than two seconds off Shiffrin's winning time.

Weather delays PGA's opener

KAPALUA, Hawaii — The PGA Tour season now starts today.

Wind squalls that howled down the mountains above Maui were so severe Friday that the opening round of the Tournament of Champions was scrapped. Rickie Fowler and Jason Dufner, the first to tee off on the Plantation Course, only played eight holes. Six players in the 30-man field had not teed off.

The decision was great news for Scott Stallings, who already was 7-over par through four holes.

PIRATES

"We let our intensity down in the second quarter," Woods said. "We came back out and picked it up in third. I was impressed the way we came back out."

Brookings-Harbor came within three with six minutes left in the fourth quarter on a bucket by Ronnie Manley, but Miles came back down and drove past his defender for a soft floater in the lane to put the Pirates up 41-36. After a Brookings-Harbor basket, Miles sunk a a 15-foot jumper that knocked the wind out of a Bruins comeback, putting his team ahead 44-38 with under three minuets left.

Brookings-Harbor wouldn't get any closer, as the Pirates traded made free throws for defensive stops and ultimately put the game away.

Miles finished with only three turnovers against the Bruins' high pressure defense that didn't allow him to cross half-court without a man on his heels.

"I just tried to control things and keep everybody calm," Miles said. "My floater was falling tonight and I was feeling it."

Ainsworth said he was proud of his point guard, but also proud of his team that saw three freshmen play significant minutes throughout the game.

"We're young," he said. "Eventually we will figure this out and be pretty darn good. It's nice to get a win with this group. They work hard."

The boys moved to 2-10 on the season with the win and will face Reedsport Charter School on Tuesday, followed by a home game versus Springfield on Friday.

Blazers edge Grizzlies

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — The Portland Trail Blazers turned up the defense down the stretch to turn back the Grizzlies.

Wesley Matthews scored 21 points, J.J. Hickson added 19 points and 11 rebounds, and Portland beat Memphis 86-84 on Friday night.

Rudy Gay's jumper from near the top of the key was off the mark as time expired, allowing the Trail Blazers to escape a closely played game that saw nine ties and 21 lead changes.

"I thought we played very good team defense," said LaMarcus Aldridge, who had 15 points and 12 rebounds for Portland. "We played their tendencies very well down the stretch. We had talked about it all game, about knowing what guys were going to do, and I thought down the stretch we guarded that."

Nicolas Batum and Damian Lillard added 11 points apiece for the Trail Blazers, Lillard also handing out eight assists, as Portland won for the ninth time in its last 12 games.

Marreese Speights had a season-high 22 points and 13 rebounds for the Grizzlies in place of Zach Randolph, who missed the game with flu-like symptoms. Gay had 19 points, but was 8 of 21 from the field.

Marc Gasol scored 12 points and had a career-best eight blocks. Darrell Arthur contributed 10 points off the Memphis bench.

Portland Trail Blazers' Luke Babbitt (8) shoots over Memphis Grizzlies' Darrell Arthur during the first half on Friday in Memphis.

"We didn't play like we wanted to," Gasol said. "We let them set their defense and shoot their shots. I think it was more on us than on them."

Randolph, the Grizzlies' leading rebounder and second-leading scorer, missed his first game of the season. Speights made up the difference, particularly in carrying the Grizzlies offensively in the third quarter. But it didn't help Memphis in the fourth.

"We went to Marc and we went to Rudy down in the post, but obviously Z-Bo is the guy that we rely on in the post down the stretch," Memphis coach Lionel Hollins said. "Anybody who loses one of their best players is going to feel it, and we felt it at a crucial part of the game."

The teams were tied at 80 with 4:05 left, the ninth tie of the game, when Hickson hit one of two free throws. Batum's 3-pointer with 3:28 remaining put Portland, which never led by more than four, ahead for good.

"We have to be resilient," Matthews said. "We have players that have been

Clippers hang on to beat visiting Lakers

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Chris Paul had 30 points and 13 assists, Blake Griffin added 24 points, and the Los Angeles Clippers led all the way in beating the Lakers 107-102 on Friday night.

Kobe Bryant scored 38 points and Dwight Howard had 21 points and 15 rebounds for the Lakers, who lost for the second time this season to their Staples Center co-tenants.

Bryant carried the Lakers in the fourth quarter when they closed to 99-97 on his 23-foot jumper with 1:29 left. But Paul scored the Clippers' final eight points to seal the victory and drop the Lakers two games below .500. The Clippers lead the Lakers by 10 games in the standings.

Bulls 96, Heat 89: Carlos Boozer scored 27 points and Chicago dominated on the boards to become only the third visiting team to win in Miami this season.

Nets 115, Wizards 113, 2OT: Joe Johnson's jumper with 0.7 seconds left in the second overtime lifted Brooklyn over Washington.

Bradley Beal's two free throws tied the score at 113 with 9.1 seconds to play before Johnson, who had 18 points, hit the shot that improved Brooklyn to 4-1 under interim coach P.J. Carlesimo.

Brook Lopez had 27 points and 13 rebounds for the Nets, and Deron Williams added 24 points and 10 assists.

Thunder 109, 76ers 85: Russell Westbrook scored 27 points, Kevin Durant added 26 and Oklahoma City bounced back from a rare home loss to beat Philadelphia.

FIESTA

Thomas got Ducks flying

Thomas followed his before-everyone-sat-down kickoff return with a 23-yard touchdown catch, finishing with 195 total yards.

Kenjon Barner ran for 143 yards on 31 carries and scored on a 24-yard touchdown pass from Marcus Mariota in the second quarter. Mariota later scored on a 2-yard run in the third quarter, capped by an obscure 1-point safety that went in the Ducks' favor.

Even Oregon's defense got into the act, intercepting Klein twice and holding him to 30 yards on 13 carries.

"We got beat by a better team tonight, combined by the fact that we let down from time to time," coach Bill Snyder said after Kansas State's fifth straight bowl loss.

Last year's Fiesta Bowl was an offensive fiesta, with Oklahoma State outlasting Stanford 41-38 in overtime.

The 2013 version was an upgrade: Nos. 4 and 5 in the BCS, two of the nation's best offenses, dynamic players and superbly successful coaches on both sides.

Oregon has become the standard for go-go-go football under Kelly, its fleet of Ducks making those shiny helmets — green like Christmas tree bulbs for the Fiesta Bowl — and flashy uniforms blur across the grassy landscape.

Thomas offered the first flash of speed, picking up a couple of blocks and racing toward a not-so-photo finish at the line.

Thomas hit the Wildcats (11-2) again late in the first quarter, breaking a couple of tackles and dragging three defenders into the end zone for a catch-and-run TD that put the Ducks up 15-0.

It's nothing new for Oregon's sophomore sensation: He had 314 total yards and two long scoring runs in the 2012 Rose Bowl. The Ducks are used to it, too, averaging more than 50 points per game.

And they kept flying.

Oregon followed a missed 40-yard field goal by Kansas State's Anthony Cantele by unleashing one of its blink-and-you'll-miss-it scoring drives late in the second quarter. Moving 77 yards in 46 seconds, the Ducks went up 22-10 at halftime after Mariota hit Barner on 24-yard TD pass.

Alejandro Maldonado hit a 33-yard field goal on Oregon's opening drive of the third quarter and Mariota capped a long drive with an easy 2-yard TD run to the left. Kansas State's Javonta Boyd blocked the point-after attempt, but even that went wrong for the Wildcats. Chris Harper was tackled in the end zone for a bizarre 1-point safety that put Oregon up 32-10.

It was the first 1-point safety in major college football since 2004 when Texas did it against Texas A&M, STATS said.

Kansas State needed a little time to get its wheels spinning on offense, laboring early before Klein scored on a 6-yard run early in the second quarter.

Klein kept the Wildcats moving in the quarter, though not toward touchdowns: Cantele hit a 25-yard field goal and missed from 40 after a false-start penalty.

Klein hit John Hubert on a 10-yard touchdown pass early in the fourth quarter, but all that did was cut Oregon's lead to 32-17.

He threw for 151 yards on 17 of 32 passing.

Bills interview Chip Kelly

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — The Buffalo Bills coaching search went into overdrive Friday, when team officials interviewed three candidates, including Oregon's Chip Kelly, one of college football's hottest prospects.

The Bills announced just before midnight that newly promoted president Russ Brandon and his top executives also interviewed recently fired Chicago Bears coach Lovie Smith and Syracuse coach Doug Marrone. The Bills, stationed in Arizona for much of this week, didn't provide details regarding where the interviews took place or how long they lasted.

Next up for Buffalo is a trip to Denver on Saturday, when the team is scheduled to interview Broncos offensive coordinator Mike McCoy, according to a person familiar with Buffalo's plans. The person spoke on the condition of anonymity because the team has not revealed who they've lined up to meet.

The Bills are in the midst of their fifth coaching search since 2001 after Chan Gailey was fired on Monday.

It was a busy day for Kelly, as well. He also interviewed with Cleveland on Friday, and a person familiar with those negotiations said the Browns are nearing a deal with Oregon's offensive mastermind. Kelly's interviews were conducted a day after he led the fifth-ranked Ducks (12-1) to a victory in the Fiesta Bowl.

Following the win, the 49-year-old Kelly said he wanted to get the interview process over "quickly."

Kelly was also supposed to meet with Philadelphia. However, a person familiar with the interviews says the Eagles are "heading in another direction." The person added the Eagles planned to interview several other candidates regardless of any conversations with Kelly.

Texas A&M's Johnny Manziel (2) reaches the end zone for a touchdown as Oklahoma's Frank Shannon (20) and others give chase in the first half of the Cotton Bowl Friday in Arlington, Texas.

Manziel joins Cotton club

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Johnny Manziel stretched out both of his arms and ran off the field as if he was flying.

With the Heisman Trophy-winning quarterback known as Johnny Football, Texas A&M certainly is soaring in the SEC.

Manziel tiptoed the sideline for a 23-yard touchdown on the first drive of the Cotton Bowl, the first of his four touchdowns as part of his bowl-record 516 total yards and the Aggies capped their first SEC season with a 41-13 win over 12th-ranked Oklahoma on Friday night.

"To come in and go against a Big 12 rival and do everything we wanted as a team, and send these seniors out with a win, we couldn't feel any better," Manziel said after his first game since becoming the first freshman to win the Heisman.

With first-year coach Kevin Sumlin and their young star quarterback, the Aggies (11-2) broke the SEC record with their 7,261 total yards this season (the first over 7,000 after 633 in Cowboys Stadium). They also averaged more than 40 points a game.

And they capped their debut season with an overwhelming victory in the only postseason game matching teams from those power conferences. It is the Aggies' first 11-win season since 1998, when they won the Big 12 title.

"I think tonight was really indicative of this season," Sumlin said. "It's one of the teams I thought in the country that truly got better every week."

Texas A&M never trailed while winning its last six games. That included a win at SEC champion Alabama, which plays for the BCS national title Monday night.

Manziel set an FBS bowl record with his 229 yards rushing on 17 carries, and completed 22 of 34 passes for 287 yards.

"Johnny Manziel is everything he was billed to be, expected him to be," said Oklahoma coach Bob Stoops.

Film could fire up gas debate

■ Gas industry and opponents prepare for inquiries in wake of fictional tale

By Michael Rubinkam
The Associated Press

ALLENTOWN, Pa. — The new movie "Promised Land" digs into the fierce national debate over fracking, the technique that's generated a boom in U.S. natural gas production while also stoking controversy over its possible impact on the environment and human health.

Written by and starring Matt Damon and John Krasinski, the film comes at an opportune time for a big-screen exploration of the issues surrounding the shale gas revolution, with cheap natural gas transforming the nation's energy landscape and "fracking" now a household word.

But viewers shouldn't necessarily expect a realistic treatment of drilling and fracking. It's not that kind of film.

"Promised Land" instead concentrates on another aspect of the drilling boom — the battle for hearts and minds as gas companies seek to lease land for drilling while environmentalists warn of the perils of punching a bunch of holes in the ground. Bewildered landowners, meanwhile, are left to sort out the competing claims and counterclaims.

It's potentially fertile territory. In real life, drilling companies injected millions of dollars into moribund local economies, transforming sleepy villages in Pennsylvania and other states into boomtowns almost overnight. But the industry also sowed division, pitting neighbor against neighbor as some residents complained of ruined water wells and other environmental degradation. Many others, judging by recent public opinion surveys, heralded the prosperity that drilling creates and the abundant homegrown energy it produces.

Even here, though, the movie seeks to entertain more than enlighten, with an implausible plot twist undermining what could have been a realistic portrayal of life as it is really lived in the gas fields.

"Promised Land" follows Steve Butler (Damon), a gas company salesman who shows up in an economically struggling small town in Pennsylvania that happens to sit atop a vast reserve of gas. His task: To get residents to sign on the dotted line, promising them they'll become instant millionaires once the gas starts flowing from the shale underneath their land. Standing in his way is Dustin Noble (Krasinski), an environmental activist determined to convince townsfolk they don't want what the driller is selling.

Damon's character repeatedly points out that drilling has brought new life to struggling towns, calls U.S. reliance on foreign sources of energy "insane," and defends fracking as a technology with a proven track record of safety. And he seems to believe it himself, at least initially.

Krasinski says he and Damon tried to avoid too much of a political message. Yet industry groups and environmental activists alike see "Promised Land" very much as a message film about the perils of the gas boom, and are reacting accordingly.

Drillers — who mounted a furious rebuttal of "Gasland," the 2010 award-winning, anti-drilling HBO documentary — began pushing back against "Promised Land" months ago while simultaneously noting that it is indeed a work of fiction.

The Marcellus Shale Coalition, an industry trade group, plans to run ads in 75 percent of Pennsylvania's movie theaters, encouraging "Promised Land" audiences to visit a website that it set up earlier this year to answer questions about shale gas.

"It's difficult to fact-check a work of fiction, so I don't know if we're going to be able to do that any more than we can fact-check 'Batman,'" said spokesman Steve Forde. "But certainly shale gas development is generating discussion around dinner tables, it's an important discussion to have, and that's the angle we are looking at."

Environmentalists, meantime, are positively giddy over the film's depiction of an industry they view as dangerous to land, water, air and people. They are planning their own campaign around "Promised Land," including the distribution of anti-drilling leaflets, postcards and petitions to audiences leaving theaters.

AP writer Ryan Pearson contributed to this story from Los Angeles.

The Associated Press

Elizabeth Allen, of Boulder, Colo., wears a "No Friggin' Frackin'" sign while waiting for a Dec. 13 meeting on fracking on Boulder County lands to begin. Hydrofracturing, or "fracking," has opened up U.S. gas reserves, raising the possibility not only of national energy independence but also of gas exports, such as those proposed from North Bend.

Coast Central Credit Union will purchase and assume the Crescent City branch and California memberships.

Rogue Federal said it had offered positions to all Oregon Chetco employees. The purchase enlarged Rogue Federal to more than 70,000 members and nearly $800 million in assets.

The NCUA placed Chetco into conservatorship in 2011. Chetco, which had 32,000 members and assets of $333 million last year, was one of only two Oregon credit unions that the NCUA has placed into conservatorship since 2009.

BUSINESS BRIEFS

Celebrate completion of Charleston road project

The Oregon International Port of Coos Bay and Coos County invite the residents of Oregon's Bay Area to Charleston for a celebration at 11 a.m. Thursday commemorating completion of the Boat Basin Drive Bike/Pedestrian Safety project. The gathering will be held at the Charleston Marina RV Park recreation room. Refreshments and entertainment will be provided.

The county road department, port staff and community members worked for nearly a decade to obtain funding for the project, succeeding in raising $1.3 million to install sidewalks, streetlights, landscaping and a new road surface. Engineers also designed a new storm drain system to reduce flooding and improve water quality.

The Jan. 10 celebration will include entertainment provided by the Wild Women of Charleston, awards and an opportunity to share stories and envision next steps to partnering for future projects to improve Charleston.

State seeks members for agricultural commissions

SALEM — Nominations are being solicited for open positions on several of the state's agricultural commodity commissions. Commissioners administer producer assessments spent on commodity commissions' promotion, education, and research projects.

Commission positions that are accepting applications at this time include: Oregon Dairy Products Commission, one producer, term ending June 30, 2015; Oregon Alfalfa Seed Commission, one producer and one handler, terms ending June 30, 2015; Oregon Dungeness Crab Commission, one producer, term ending June 30, 2015; Oregon Raspberry & Blackberry Commission, one handler, term ending June 30, 2014; Oregon Sheep Commission – 1 handler, term ending June 30, 2013; Oregon Potato Commission, one Malheur or Harney county producer, term ending June 30, 2016.

Appointments will be made by Oregon Department of Agriculture Director Katy Coba. A suggested deadline is Jan. 9. The director will begin making appointments after applications are received and reviewed.

Applicants for any commodity commission position must be a US citizen and an Oregon resident. For more information on qualifications and a complete listing of openings, visit www.oregon.gov/ODA/ADMD/Pages/cc_applications.aspx or contact Commodity Commission Program Manager Kris Anderson at 503-872-6600.

Farmers hope to ban modified food crops

GRANTS PASS (AP) — Some organic farmers in Southern Oregon hope to ban genetically modified crops in Jackson County.

Supporters of the ban filed signatures with the Jackson County clerk's office Wednesday to put a measure on the county ballot.

It would ban anyone from raising genetically engineered plants in the county, with exemptions for scientific research. It also calls for the county to conduct inspections and allows enforcement through citizen lawsuits.

Chief petitioner Brian Comnes says they want to protect organic farmers who stand to lose money if their crops get contaminated by pollen from genetically engineered crops, such as sugar beets and alfalfa.

Unemployed? Start a business

Q: I just lost my job and I'm headed to the unemployment office. Do I have options besides looking for another job?

A: Fortunately, in Oregon and a few other states, there is an option called the Self Employment Assistance Program (SEAP). To qualify individuals must meet certain Worksource Oregon criteria:

■ Be eligible for and receiving Oregon unemployment benefits

■ Not be receiving any form of extended unemployment benefits at the time of application

■ Be unlikely to return to your previous employment and not a member in good standing with a closed shop union

■ Have been identified, by the department's computerized mathematical formula, as likely to exhaust unemployment benefits

■ Have a viable business idea

■ Bw willing to work full time in developing the business

■ Have or be able to obtain the financial backing needed to start and sustain the business until it becomes self-supporting

■ If the business requires an occupational license (state license), the applicant must already hold that license at the time of application for SEAP.

More information about the program and accessing the benefits is available at www.oregon.gov/EMPLOY/ES/SEEKER/pages/self_employment_assistance.aspx or on the Department of Labor website, sea.workforce3one.org/state-strategies/.

Applications for the SEA program are available at your local Worksource Oregon center. Since not all unemployment claimants are eligible, claimant reemployment specialists are available to advise applicants on their options. Once accepted into the SEA program, you are required to submit a written business plan. Business planning assistance is available through the Small Business Development Center Network; visit www.BizCenter.org to find the office nearest you. SEAP participants do not have to continue searching for employment while in the program. Money earned from a business is not deducted from your unemployment check.

The SEA program has helped many unemployed individuals create viable businesses that not only provide them a job but often jobs for others.

Arlene M. Soto is the director of the SWOCC Small Business Development Center, www.BizCenter.org. She can be reached at 541-756-6445, asoto@socc.edu, or at 2455 Maple Leaf, North Bend, OR 97459.

Coos, Curry rapidly going gray

Our regional Employment Department workforce analyst Annette Shelton-Tiderman has shared some statistics she compiled for a customer. The take-home message for local businesses? Denture service: Hot. Diaper service: Not. Unless it's an adult diaper service.

First, she looked at the nation, where the Census Bureau projects that by 2030, 19 percent of the population will be 65 or older. Currently, however, just 13.0 percent of Americans are 65 or older.

In Oregon, 13.9 percent are 65 or older, placing us near the mean, unlike the outliers Florida (17.3 percent) and Alaska (7.7 percent).

But in Coos County, 21.4 percent of us are 65 or older. In Curry County, it's 28 percent. Curry is the state's oldest county, with a median age of 53.5; Oregon's median age is 38.4, 16th highest in the nation.

Gift shop, gradually

Several months ago, Christina Nielsen began the process of moving My Little Gift Shop to Coos Bay from Klamath Falls. While she and her husband wrap things up in Klamath Falls, the Coos Bay shop at 135 Anderson Ave. is in the care of her dad, Jim Nielsen, who keeps it open seven days a week from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. The store has a constantly changing mix of paintings, furniture, knives and decorative items. By summer, Nielsen hopes to have a mix that will appeal to tourists coming in off the nearby U.S. Highway 101. Local artists are invited to call Christina at 541-281-1458 if they have wares to display.

Right at Home: Design your own chic, comfy bedding

The Associated Press Photos

Former interior designer Lynn Cimino's creation of the Twist mattress – components include cotton covers and buckwheat hulls that you self-assemble by filling the covers with the hulls and twisting and tying (www.openyoureyesbedding.com). Fully customizable, the mattresses are similar to Japanese futons.

By Kim Cook
The Associated Press

There are stores full of exquisite bedding. But fancy sheets, duvets and mattresses can sometimes fall short of our wish lists, in style, price, comfort or all three.

What if you could make your own?

You don't need to be a professional designer, or even much of a sewer, to create one-of-a-kind bedding that looks as nice as the stuff of dreams.

First, your existing bedding can be embellished with sew-on or iron-on appliquis, available in craft and stitchery supply stores.

Writer and crafter Kim Ray offers suggestions on the website Doityourself.com. Trim the edges of sheets with flowers or butterflies for a feminine touch. Monogrammed initials give a smart, tailored and custom look. Ray also recommends edging a sheet with lace, making simple ruffles out of rayon seam binding, and embellishing coverlets with flowers made of various-size buttons. www.doityourself.com

Allison Hepworth of Austin, Texas, chronicles her efforts to creatively and affordably decorate her "cookie-cutter" home on her blog, House of Hepworth. When shopping for a bedding ensemble for her daughter's room, she found what she liked at PB Teen but didn't want to spend $400. Instead, she bought a couple of basic sheet sets from Wal-Mart, cut one up to make a pretty pink band on the sheets, and used heat bonding to attach a contrasting grosgrain ribbon trim on comforter and sham. Her final cost was under $70.

"I rarely sew and couldn't make a dress if my life depended on it," Hepworth says. "I can, however, sew bedding sets and curtains, because it only involves a straight line and patience."

If you'd rather have someone else put your bedding together, check out Inmod's Design Studio. The online option page lets you pick a pattern from a selection of nature and graphic themes. You then move on to fabric choices — cotton, linen/cotton blend or Dupioni silk, then embroidery colors. You're given the opportunity to see your final design in a virtual room before purchasing. www.inmod.com

Got specific colors in mind? You can customize duvets and sheet sets in any color combination at www.custom-bedding.com.

If you want to really get custom, you can make your own mattress. Former Manhattan interior designer Lynne Cimino started having back problems and found that the marketplace had options, but pricey ones. Working out of her Marbletown, N.Y., home, she came up with a no-sew buckwheat mattress that's similar to a Japanese futon.

Sections of cotton canvas are filled with the hulls, then twisted and tied in sections for a custom-size finished product that looks like a big billowy cloud.

Since the hulls have no nutritional value, she says, pests aren't a problem. The hulls are virtually non-flammable so no harsh retardants are needed, nor is buckwheat typically farmed with pesticides.

A knock-off version of a popular but pricier PB Teen bedding ensemble using inexpensive sheet sets and iron-on ribbon created by Austin, TX-based, Allison Hepworth. She provides a tutorial on her blog www.houseofhepworths.com.

The cotton covers are machine-washable. You buy both elements separately and do the assembling yourself. www.openyoureyesbedding.com

Nest Bedding of Albany, Calif., offers a range of DIY mattress components including natural latex cores, vegan or cotton and wool covers, kapok and wool comfort layers and toppers. www.nestbedding.com

This image taken on Feb. 1, 2008 shows trees that were taken down by the weight of snow and ice. Don't be in a rush to repair or replace snow-or ice-covered trees, as most will spring back after a thaw, like these weighted-down trees that did not suffer any lasting damage.

Tips for protecting trees and shrubs from storms

By Dean Fosdick
The Associated Press

Even the sturdiest-looking trees can be brought down by high winds, heavy snow and ice, but there are ways you can limit the damage.

Here are some storm-proofing suggestions that will pay off over time, starting with determining which trees in your landscape are the most vulnerable.

"I'm a great believer in storm-proofing or preparing for anything that will have the most impact on your lifestyle," said Mark Chisholm, a third-generation arborist from Howell, N.J., and spokesman for Stihl Inc., a manufacturer of outdoor power tools.

"Try to prep your house and yard if you have the time," he said.

"Clear rain gutters so water will flow. Remove loose lawn furniture from decks. Stabilize trees around the house by cabling or tying them down, especially those that you know have structural flaws."

Additional tips:

■ Get to know an arborist or tree-care professional — now. "When a storm hits, you'll likely be prioritized as an existing customer," said Chisholm, who works with the power industry clearing debris left behind by severe weather, including Hurricane Sandy in October.

■ Get a pre-storm assessment to identify trouble spots. Decaying and leaning trees should be pruned, staked or removed, especially those threatening dwellings or utility lines.

■ Think safety during cleanup. "The stuff on the ground won't hurt you unless downed power lines are involved," Chisholm said. "It's what's overhead that's dangerous. Stress fractures or dead and broken limbs can come crashing down and do serious harm."

■ Be especially careful when working with chainsaws. "If a tree is on the ground, try to cut it up without harming yourself in the process," said Kim Gabel with University of Florida Extension in Key West. "If a badly damaged tree is still standing, it's not recommended that a layman climb a ladder to take care of it. Get professional help."

■ Patience can be a money-saver when dealing with ice or snow loads on trees. "Wait until it melts and the weight is removed to see what kind of damage was done," Chisholm said. "Trees are resilient and are capable of bouncing back."

■ Plant native trees rather than exotics. Some varieties fare better than others in storms, especially trees with conical branching, those with strong branch connections and trees that are small when mature, according to the Insurance Institute for Business and Home Safety.

■ There is strength in numbers. "Trees planted in groups survive better in high winds," Chisholm said. "They can't bend as readily to the point of failure. They also help dampen the (wind) force."

■ Learn how to assess damage. "If you have a tree that has lost a couple of branches of significant size but the trunk is mostly intact, that's still a keeper," said Hank Stelzer, a state forestry specialist with University of Missouri Extension. "If you lose the top of a tree from ice or a windstorm and if half or a quarter of the trunk is gone, that's a no-brainer. It should go."

Give wood a touch of drama

HOUSE WORKS

STEVE BATIE

Q: I saw a table in a furniture store recently, and at first I thought it was made of black plastic, but when I looked closer, I realized it was wood. But the grain showed through the black paint — like it was stained.

I'd liked to refinish an old dresser I have to look like that. Do you have any idea how it's done, and is it something I could handle?

I'm fairly sure what you were looking it was an ebonized finish, and I'm equally sure it's something you could do yourself.

In fact, I've done it myself on several occasions.

The counters for the three bookcase cabinets in my den all have ebonized finishes, and I gave one of my wood carvings and a picture frame ebonized finishes to disguise the fact that they were made of poplar (a particularly ugly wood).

It can give rather mundane wood — and the room it's in — a touch of drama.

The traditional method for ebonizing (literally, making it seem as though any wood is ebony — we should be so rich!) involves using tannic acid to prep the wood, then applying a vinegar solution that's been been steeped with rust. Just about anything that's iron will rust in vinegar — nails, bits of hardware, wire, even steel wool.

Purists would have my head for this, but I've found a far easier method that I think duplicates that traditional look very nicely.

First, you have to be working with a wood that will absorb a finish easily. Walnut and oak are fine, as is pine (all those counters are nothing but ordinary plywood), but if that dresser happens to be made of rosewood, you might look for a different finish. Rosewood is VERY dense.

Prepare the wood as you would for any finish. In your case, that will mean stripping the dresser down to bare wood and sanding thoroughly. Rub it down at the final stage with 0000 steel wool and wipe with tack rags.

You want it to be as glassy-smooth as you can get it.

Now get a can of ordinary flat-black latex paint and RUB that into the wood with rags. It may take two or three applications to get an even black hue, but don't worry that it's dull, because ...

After it's thoroughly dry — and been polished yet again with steel wool and tacked off — you RUB on fast-drying polyurethane varnish.

You can brush on poly if you like, but I find I get much cleaner finishes — free of streaks and dust spots — if I use rags. I haven't brushed anything but house paint in more than a decade.

The only downside is that a rubbed finish is thinner than a brushed finish. That means you'll need to apply at least two coats of varnish — maybe more. Remember to steel wool and tack between coats.

The upside is that you're using fast-drying varnish, and that often means you can get three or more coats down in a day.

That's it. Quick and fairly simple — and no acids involved.

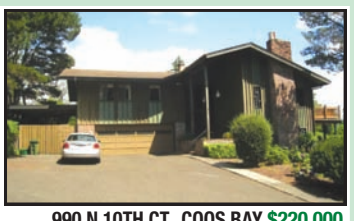

One last thing: For those who don't want black furniture, this system works equally well with any color of latex paint. Fire-engine red and hunter green come out particularly well.

Just be sure you get flat latex. I tried this once with semi-gloss paint (thinking that would save me time later with the varnishing), and it didn't come out nearly as well.

Don't let kids' activities break the bank

EVERYDAY CHEAPSKATE

Mary Hunt

Dear Mary: My biggest budget-busters are enrichment activities for my four children. I want to spark their joy for living, providing opportunities to sample different sports and hobbies.

Currently, they attend a private school that is academically aggressive. Each takes piano lessons, and the boys take karate and the girls, ballet. They are also involved in sports, as well as theater productions at school — none of which is free. We are a one-income family, and I stay home with the children. Our finances are very tight, and we end up using credit to make it through the month. It sounds simple enough to just put my children in public school and drop all the extras, but my mommy-guilt says NO. I want the best for my kids. Any advice? — Tricia, email

Dear Tricia: The definition of "guilt" is "remorse caused by feeling responsible for some offense." You have not committed any offense, so I don't think this is about guilt. You are most likely fearing that by not providing experiences and opportunities to your kids, you are failing as a parent.

Experts tell us it is not good for kids to be overstimulated by things or activities. You can push kids to the brink of despair by over-involving them in sports, music, karate, dance and academia all at the same time. That you are going into debt to enable all of this is even more troubling.

Twenty years from now, your worth as a parent will not be measured by the number of their activities, their SAT scores or their trophies. It will be measured by the depth of their character and the way they live their lives. As for school, don't ever assume a teacher — public or private, secular or Christian — can take your place when it comes to passing values to your children.

I suggest you allow each child to pick one activity and then make sure they have plenty of free time to just be kids. As for school, I am a huge proponent of public schools and encourage you to get involved with yours should you send your children there.

Dear Mary: My daughter is engaged to a man who refuses to find a job. He is 23 and lives with his parents. My daughter pays all of their dating expenses, her car payment and insurance. He sleeps until noon, plays computer games all day and then waits for her to pick him up. She is expecting me to pay for their wedding. I say I'm not putting one solitary dime into a wedding to a man who won't work. What do you think? — Kendra, Illinois

Dear Kendra: Hold your ground, and tell your daughter all the reasons you cannot support this marriage.

Is there a therapist or family counselor she would speak with? There's some reason she is willing to settle for so little in a husband and father for her children.

I hope she figures it out before she makes the biggest mistake of her life.

Do you have a question for Mary? Email her at mary@everydaycheapskate.com, or write to Everyday Cheapskate, P.O. Box 2099, Cypress, CA 90630.

Your Birthday:

SUNDAY, JANUARY 6, 2013

Remain optimistic while looking for upswings in both your personal and financial affairs in the year ahead. Adopting some positive convictions is one of the quickest ways to attract good things in ways you might never suspect.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) — Your enthusiastic nature is exceptionally contagious, and it won't take much to get others involved in whatever interests you. However, you'll be selective as to whom you enroll.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) — This could be one of those strange days when you might not do much right, yet everything will turn out OK. Work on something big while Lady Luck is with you.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) — What makes you so effectively persuasive is your ability to isolate a key person and turn him or her into your ally. This person will convince others to join your cause.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) — Something you're trying to put together with another has a good chance of succeeding if you plan your strategy while your mind is rested and, consequently, a bit sharper than usual.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) — If you're required to make an important decision that is likely to have some far-reaching effects, try to make it now, while the aspects say your faculties are keenest.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) — You want to see things through to their conclusions, but sticking to any one project is another story. Today, however, chances are you will finish what you start.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) — Your sphere of influence is likely to be very pronounced, making a strong impact on most everything you do. You'll even be able to solve some difficult problems with ease.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) — Don't allow small, problematic distractions to disturb you. You'll have a natural way of working things out for the ultimate good, regardless of hiccups.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) — If you're not totally spent from the holidays, make an effort to make some quality time for activities that require physical and mental exertion. It'll help revitalize your outlook.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) — You could be rather fortunate where your material circumstances are concerned. The opportunity to profit from one of your many irons in the fire is quite high.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) — Bold leadership, good judgment and strong initiative can be some of your more dominating characteristics, and it's one of those times when you might be motivated to use them all.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) — Huge influences that you probably aren't aware of will be stirring beneath the surface. When they do decide to emerge, they'll prove to be materially lucky for you.

MONDAY, JAN. 7, 2013

You're likely to travel more in the year ahead, for both practical and pleasurable purposes. Although you might go to many places on matters of business, you'll find time to enjoy the sights as well.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) — When out on the town sharing a good time with friends, cough up an equal share of the tab, even if you don't eat or drink as much as some others. It'll make you look small if you don't.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) — Before driving yourself to the limits in order to achieve an objective, be absolutely certain it's something you want in the first place. There's a chance that your efforts could be misplaced.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) — Even if you get a choice opportunity to badmouth someone you don't like, it behooves you not to do so. Your pals will wonder if you'd do the same to them.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) — Someone who is known for taking advantage of others might try to do so with you. If you're on the ball, you won't let him or her get away with it.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) — If you find it necessary to team up with another in order to accomplish something, try to solicit an associate who has some experience in the matter at hand.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) — Do your best to keep up with your duties and responsibilities. You'll quickly find that you're not likely to function efficiently if you allow things to pile up.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) — If an unfamiliar subject or situation rears its head, don't pretend that you know something about it. You won't look too good if you're drawn into the discussion.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) — Budget planning with your family could turn out to be frustrating if everyone wants the advantage. Pay the bills first, and then split what's left.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) — It's a mistake to become overly concerned about your coworkers' job performance. Once you start concentrating on them, your own work will suffer.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) — You can count on buyer's remorse setting in if you do not manage your resources as well as you should. It behooves you to limit your spending only to what is essential.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) — It's possible that you could create a problem with family members by treating outsiders with more consideration than you do them. Don't think the clan won't notice.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) — If you insist upon nursing a senseless grudge, you'll only crowd out all the sunshine in your life. Strive to be forgiving and forgetful where old slights are concerned.

TUESDAY, JAN. 8, 2013

The probability of good material growth in the year ahead will be a bit stronger than usual for you. However, don't be surprised if you have to make a number of adjustments along the way, to meet your goals.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) — It's important to be astute regarding touchy situations, because if you're not, you could easily allow yourself to be dominated by another. Don't let it happen.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) — Frivolous social pursuits should not be permitted to interfere with your more serious affairs. Put anything of that sort at the bottom of your agenda until you complete your duties.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) — When you are unable to achieve your objectives, don't look for scapegoats to blame. The fault will easily be traced back to you should you bite off more than you can chew.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) — If you're given important information to relay to another, don't trust it to memory. Your recall might not be as accurate as you think.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) — It's important to prevent emotion from dominating your thinking. If you don't, what you let yourself believe about a financial matter might not be in line with reality.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) — Do not let a reckless companion inspire you to act in a similar manner. If you should, together you might do something quite foolish and costly that you'll later regret.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) — Some big problems could arise if you foist onto co-workers certain jobs that you should be taking care of yourself. Strive to be industrious instead of manipulative.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) — Normally, you're a pretty good judge of people, yet your instincts could unexpectedly fail you. Unfortunately, you could place your trust in someone who has no intention of living up to it.

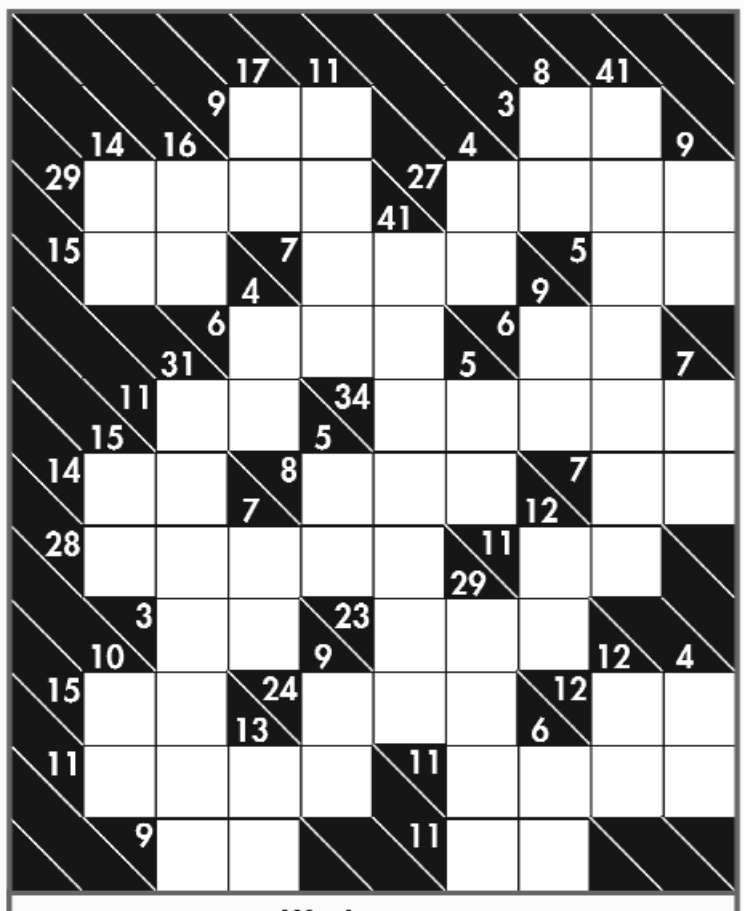

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) — Objectives you establish for yourself are likely to be achieved. However, the targets you're striving to meet will turn out be of little consequence to you or anybody else.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) — You might not be as mentally sharp as you think. It's one of those days when you should avoid trying to match wits with anyone who has lots of knowledge and expertise.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) — Guard against inclinations to count your chickens before they hatch. Be a little optimistic, but, first and foremost, let your common sense prevail.

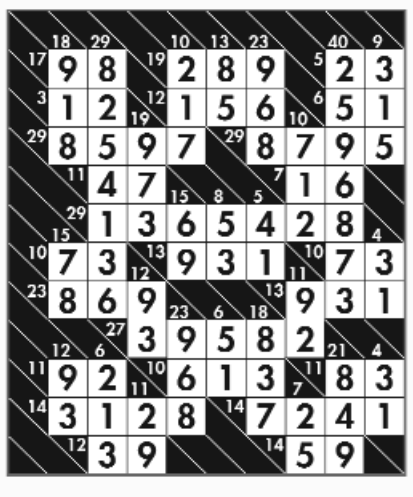

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) — Try not to let your indifference put you in a position where you have no input in important decisions being made about your life. Others' thinking could easily work against you.

BRIDGE

Hunter S. Thompson, a journalist and author who died in 2005, said, "When the going gets weird, the weird turn pro."

If it looks weird, talks weird and smells weird, it must be weird — especially if produced by a pro.

In other words, if a competent player does something weird, it is (almost certainly) not because he has lost his marbles, but because he is hoping to sneak a trick past an unsuspecting opponent.

In today's deal, South is in three no-trump. East is in the spotlight. West leads a fourth-highest club six. What should East be thinking?

First, though, let's look at declarer's problem. He has only eight top tricks: five spades, two diamonds and one club. And with clubs wide open, he must hope that East has the heart ace and is sleeping soundly. South should win the first trick and call for the heart jack, trying to look like a man about to take a finesse.

What should East conclude now?

Initially, East should have asked himself this question: What is declarer likely to do at trick two? Here, if South doesn't have the spade ace, he will surely establish that suit. So, when South doesn't do that, it is because he has the spade ace. Ergo, the suit is ready to run and declarer has eight top tricks: five spades, two diamonds and one club. Why is he calling for the heart jack? South must be trying to sneak his ninth trick.

East mustn't fall for it: He should jump in with the heart ace and play clubs. If East ducks, South, in desperation, will put up his king and, when it wins, claim.
