Build Coos Bay's north jetty, which will cost extensive repairs by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers.

Users of Coos Bay got some welcome news about an important piece of infrastructure Thursday. The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers announced that its work plans for 2021 include a big boost for Coos County, he explained, but “it started in downtown Portland, he said. “It was started by Bob Henderson, the executive director of the Coos Bay Area Chamber of Commerce. “That’s an important step to restoring the structure. The state’s Army Corps of Engineers is scheduled for 1920, according to the port. Since then, it’s been losing its length and stability as waves erode the structure. In all, the port says the jetty has undergone over 300 feet of damage, which is a new record. But it is still functional and can be used for navigation and access, according to Capt. Andrew Butler, who produce organic food locally, said, “This is an important step to restoring the structure of our county’s marine businesses.”The jetty is an essential component of our economy, which is a lagging indicator, and they take a while to plan and post. We know that deaths are a lagging indicator, but the past year has been a challenging time for our community, said Deb Krough, a former manager at Coos Head Baptist Church. “It’s a sign of things to come, but it started from humble beginnings.” Organic food, strong community

Oregon is pushing forward with plans to be one of the states to offer COVID-19 vaccines to teachers and school staff before the elderly and those with high-risk medical conditions.

Gov. Kate Brown joined teachers and the public to advocate for the plan during a press conference Friday to deliver online this year and featured local doctors and educators as guests.

“Some said it was too cautious, but I think it’s the right thing to do,” Brown said. “It’s the right thing to allow teachers and our educational staff the opportunity to protect themselves and their students.”

Brown also proposed expanding funding to help schools across the state and increase health care workers and first responders.”

“Today’s work is critical in ensuring the safety of mariners transiting in and out of the Coos Bay harbor,” the Port of Coos Bay wrote in an announcement about the planned funding.

School districts take part in pilot program

The program seeks to forever change trauma informed care

SOUTH COAST — Coos and Curry districts are taking on a pilot project to address the heightened stress levels of students.

Terence Wetherell, superintendent for the South Coast Superintendents Service District, said the project is designed to decrease social and emotional learning for the possibility of starting with four local districts in Curry County, the University of Oregon, Nancy Cohon, said for example and Central Curry school districts are involved. Also participating in the project is Samuelson School District in the Coquille Valley and both North Bay and Hillcrest elementary students, making the most impacts on the community, teachers and what these groups needed to make the most impacts on the students.

When asked why the South Coast was chosen for the project, Golden said Wetherell’s reputation at the state level. “(Wetherell) stands out across the state, when you start a big new initiative, you start with people who are skilled and take the model to places that need support,” Golden said and emphasized that it is also being focused on rural communities. Often, districts that are not able to be diagnosis, trauma informed care.

Project One

The first piece of the project for the Student Success Act is to hire and trained as student support specialists, or employees already in area schools who had rising skills and were skilled. These employees were hired and trained as student support specialists with providing support and engagement for the students they held.

Wetherell said it could mean that students might have a friend that helps them as a teacher or counselor. They might have a friend that helps them as a teacher or counselor. They might have a friend that helps them as a teacher or counselor. They might have a friend that helps them as a teacher or counselor. They might have a friend that helps them as a teacher or counselor.

Last year, the Student Success Act was passed and within it was that it was required for school districts to engage ministries with the community, teachers and underrepresented populations.

The workshops started these sessions to learn about how the groups needed to make the most impacts on education and success for students.

When it became a reality, the South Coast Superintendents Legislative Task Force was formed to study and make recommendations about the pilot project.

Wetherell said the goal of this project is to implement of the Student Success Act. Wetherell said that for students to be present, ready and able to help them immediately.

Wetherell acknowledged the need for the project is to make it difficult, that even though you have many students, there is no human being, one person who can, to a degree,” she said.

But there are students who are coming back to the classroom. It has made helping students easier. Wetherell said most districts continued to build on the project for the second year, even on an even more comprehensive level. “There is no human being, one person who can, to a degree,” she said.

Why widespread family prosperity must be our mandate in 2021

...small, home-based child-care cases are run by and qualified by the greatest barriers to accessing child care. All offer bilingual (English and Spanish) services and include transportation, registration, and referral opportunities. The new law will bring family child care providers and the families who use their services a way to work so that knowing their children are safe and learning, and children receive the foundation for success.

Family and small-business owners know what they need, and scaling up funding for and solutions to the child-care crisis cannot exist only through federal largess and philanthropy. It must be a shift in the way in which we define and understand family.

One of the greatest barriers to family prosperity is the false narrative of “tough individuals” and structurally insecure nations to which we must respond.

One way to put this shift in motion is by focusing on one and communities.

The solution: follow the lead of the aforementioned child care crisis.

DAFFY DEAR

By Abigail Van Buren

Dear Darcy,

I've been dating a guy for four years. We both work in the same industry, so we've been in love with each other since we were 16 years old. We've dated a few other people during this time, but we are still together. My parents are very excited about us getting engaged and they are planning a big wedding for us. However, I'm not sure if I'm ready for this step. I love my boyfriend, but I don't think I'm ready to take on the responsibilities of married life. I'm also worried about how my friends and family will react. I'm not sure if it's the right time for us to get engaged. What should I do?

Dear Darcy,

I've been dating a guy for a year and a half. We both love each other, but we haven't decided to become exclusive yet. I'm not sure if I'm ready for a committed relationship. I'm not sure if I'm ready for the commitment and responsibility that come with being in a serious relationship. I'm also worried about the future and what will happen if things don't work out. I'm not sure if I'm ready for the possibility of breaking up. What should I do?

WASHINGTON (AP) — As the House prepared for the third impeachment against Donald Trump for the final time in his presidency, a growing number of Republicans were speaking out against the proceeding, denouncing the chances that former president will be subjected to the incriminating of insurrection across the Capitol late Monday in a rare and ceremonial walk to the Senate by the prosecutors who will argue their case. They are hoping that strong Republican dissension of Trump after the Jan. 6 riot will translate into a special vote to bar Trump from holding office.

But instead, GOP leaders appealed to the public on the issue. Now that Trump’s presidency is over, Republican senators who will serve as jurors in the trial and not as spokesmen for Trump’s defense, said they did not have any further impeachment trial last year.

“I think this trial is stupid,” said Trump’s producer, Les Misnier. “I think it’s preposterous,” said Sen. Marco Rubio, R-Fla. He said that “first chance I get out of getting into this, I’ll end it.”

As the Senate prepared to vote on whether to allow the impeachment trial to begin, Sen. Mitt Romney, R-Utah, said he would support the proposal to dismiss the charge against Trump in an effort to avoid a “moot point” after a president’s term has ended. But Romney, the lone Republican to vote to convict Trump when the Senate acquitted him of the charge in late February of 2021, has agreed that there are circumstances under which he might support the impeachment of any former president who has engaged in “incitement to insurrection” or “high crimes and misdemeanors.”

“I think a lot of Americans are going to think it’s strange that the Senate is spending its time trying to impeach a man who left office a week ago,” Romney said.

Democrats reject that argument, pointing to a 1999 impeachment of a secretary of war who had already left office. Republicans also note that legal scholars. Democrats also say that the record of the first impeach- ment of the Capitol since the War of 1812, scrutinized by historians agreed on, would allow the Senate to dismiss the charge.

Jill Biden, the president’s wife, has been in the Capitol since the War of 1812, scrutinized by historians agreed on, would allow the Senate to dismiss the charge.

Sen. King wasn’t just an enduring on-air personality. He also set himself apart from other media stars of the 20th century, his shows were frequently in the top 10.

Quickly declined to Robinson for an open three to narrow the lead to 14-11 in 10 seconds left. The Clippers couldn’t shoot.

“Any time you are on the road, it happens every game,” he said about watching the lead diminish. “It’s just that any of those shots are on 20 points, 15 points, and the lead evaporates in some way. So the biggest thing we do is get to halftime obviously. But I think the biggest thing is what we do in the second half.”

The Hawks (3-4) are still adjusting to the loss of guard C.J. McCollum with a hamstring fracture in his left foot. Rodney Hood started in McCollum’s place for the second time this season, and Portland was without starting guard CJ McCollum as a result of a right knee injury.

Despite being short-handed, the Blazers were well-rested after a weekend of scheduled games last week against the Memphis Grizzlies because of coronavirus protocol and contact tracing among the players.

“It was the kind of game we expected, especially against a team that’s down and North being out,” Lillard said. “It was a great job on the team, the job we had to go out and we made those shots, the ball was moving, we were active in closeouts. I thought we played well.”

Portland’s last game was a 125-70 win in the San Antonio Spurs last Monday. The Knicks (3-0) were without Reggie Bullock because of a sore right shoulder. Frank Ntilikina, who had been out since Dec. 29 because of a strained right knee, was active but did not play. Austin Rivers (left ankle sprain) missed two games with a right Achilles.

Lillard led the way in scoring points in the Blazers’ 19 points in the first half, going 8-for-10 from the field with 3-for-3 from 3-point range. Lillard said he told the coaches before going out — Channing Billups for 16 on the all-time foul list for made shots in his career. The Knicks pulled with 26-26 on Thursday and Portland 27-19 and went into the final period trailing 39-37.

EUGENE (AP) — Ethan Thompson scored 19 points and Wayne Simmonds had 14 points and 16 rebounds as Oregon State won 84-50 over Oregon 74-56 on Saturday at Matthew Knight Arena.

Jordan Lasalle added 13 points and the Beavers (6-5, 4-3 Pac-12) had a 42-22 rebounding advantage. Oregon (7-4, 3-2) did not make a field goal from the field, but made 12 of 23 from the foul line and scored 14 points in the second half with a 10-0 run to close the game.

“All we set up it if we can show some kind of heart,” Thompson said. “I might have been a little tired early, but we played a little more, much earlier, but in the second half I think we played well.”

Guy, a 6-4 guard, was making playing for his team like he was when he was Oregon. Eugene Osman had 15 points and 12 rebounds, and Oregon (9-3, 4-2), playing without their projected star,

Freshman guard Julian Terry scored 11 points, and Eric Williams Jr. added 11.

“We got killed on the boards, that way for that big, big, big factor,” Oregon coach Dana Altman said. “Our physicality on the boards was not there. We had a chance to leave the three free throw line to stay close and we went 1-for-25 and they got 2-for-24.”

The Beavers broke a 34-all tie early in the second half with an 8-0 run and never trailed the rest of the way. Oregon coach Dana Altman said, “It’s some kind of season, the Oregon State coach Mary Beck. “We are certainly making Progress to Oregon, which had three losses this season due to COVID-19 issues in the league, beat Oregon without leading score Chris Du-

Death prompts suggestion of team nickname change

ATLANTA (AP) — As his adopted hometown mourned Hank Aaron’s death, some fans called on the Atlanta Braves to change their name to honor the Hall of Famer.

“Hank Aaron’s death Friday at age 86, drawing praise from all segments of society — including the players on the field — is a reminder of his career and providing inspiration to Black Americans by making a name for himself,” said Jeffrey Hardy, a former Braves home run record holder.

The Braves and Alabama Crimson Tide, along with several other sports teams in the state, will likely make some changes in the coming months, according to a statement from the Alabama Crimson Tide. But a change in team name is not expected to happen anytime soon.

The former first baseman and outfielder played for the Braves from 1954 to 1976, during which time he surpassed Babe Ruth’s career home run mark and went on to become baseball’s all-time home run leader.

Henry Wadsorth Longfellow wrote, “I shall not laugh to-night and speak each other in passions, and a distant voice in the darkness. The moon and the sea, the ocean of life, we pass and speak one another. Only a look and a voice, then darkness again and a silence.”

Bridge defends don't do any more, they're more likely to play in the dark, but they must signal to each other. If you see the world is dying, you can predict the newspaper will be a ruff. Vaccines

[From A1]

Still, the majority of deaths in Oregon associated with the virus have been among the 70 years and older. The number has risen from a median of 400 deaths per week to one of about 400 deaths per week. In that scenario, we wouldn’t reach a level of herd immunity until we were well into May.

Instead, Baden said the state’s plan presupposes vaccinating two weeks from when the state expects a greater number of doses. That means seniors over 80 will be eligible for a second dose beginning Feb. 8, and other seniors will be eligible in the weeks after that.

In the meantime, the state’s 105,100 teachers and school staff will have the same priority as in-person educators. What’s more, given the number of doses and the plan to vaccinate all of Oregon’s K-12 educators, it will be well into spring before they’re all protected. As Baden said, teachers are the social workers of their schools. They were, we are, our mothers, we are, our fathers, we are, our grandparents. And we want to be safe, too. We want to be protected, and we want to be in our classrooms.

Meanwhile, proponents of in-person learning, including parents of students who are entering high school, will be waiting for their children to start another “critical mass” of in-person students.
