Roseburg man arrested after police chase

By Alysha Beck, The World North Bend and Coos Bay police search for Christopher Michael Beamer, 24, of Roseburg after he led them on a high-speed chase through Coos Bay. Beamer wrecked the Ford Mustang he was driving near the intersection of Newmark Avenue and Cape Arago Highway.

THE WORLD

COOS BAY - A Roseburg man was arrested on multiple felony charges after he led police agencies on a chase through North Bend and Coos Bay early Saturday morning.

After more than an hour search, North Bend police arrested Christopher Michael Beamer, 24, on charges of reckless driving, seven counts of reckless endangering, attempt to elude by vehicle, attempt to elude by foot, two counts of attempted assault, two counts of attempted assault on a public safety officer, possession of a controlled substance and thirddegree escape.

The chase began just before 1 a.m. when a North Bend police officer attempted to stop a red Ford Mustang driving erraticallv near Sheridan Avenue and Washington Street. After the car took off onto U.S. Highway 101 South, units from Coos County Sheriff's Office, Coos Bay Police Department and the Oregon State Police joined in the pursuit.

The car sped west along Commercial Avenue through Coos Bay, and then traveled northwest on Ocean Boulevard into Empire.

Police deployed spike strips in an attempt to stop the car as it turned off Newmark Avenue onto Cape Arago Highway. Beamer apparently lost control of the vehicle after hitting the strips, causing the car to go off the shoulder near the Johannsen Avenue intersection.

Responding officers found the car empty and precariously dangling over shoreline below, supported only by a tree branch. K-9 officers were brought in to locate the driver.

Beamer is being held in the Coos County jail awaiting arraignment.

Festival lands money for youth programs

By Tyler Richardson

The World

Local music and seafood highlighted the seventh annual Octoberfish festival at the old school in Charleston on Saturday.

Tuna sizzled on the grill as people from across the county lined up to enjoy some nice weather and help raise money for Oregon Coast Community Action's children programs.

"It's really all about the community," ORCCA's Volunteer and Public Relations Coordinator Amanda D'Souza said of Octoberfish.

"It's about having fun and supporting our kids programs so kids can continue to thrive and have a steady education."

D'Souza said money raised from the festival, which included raffles of donated items, goes toward ORCCA's Great Afternoons, CASA, Head Start and Snack Pack programs.

The idea for Octoberfish came to Shannon Souza seven years ago while she was running trails. Souza said she wanted to get kids in the community to think about art and music in a different ways, rather then being an obligation required by their school. Souza said she looked out on the bay, saw a fishing boat and thought getting the community together, along with local fisherman, to have an artthemed festival could benefit both the fleets and children.

"The idea is to get the community to help themselves," she said. "We wanted to teach the kids about arts and performance in a new way."

Indiana super PAC spends big on Robinson

BY DANIEL SIMMONS-RITCHIE The World

With less than three weeks until ballots are mailed, an Indiana group has spent $220,000 to support Art Robinson's election bid against Democrat congressman Peter

On Wednesday, Republican Super PAC Inc spent $109,700 on radio advertisements and $109,700 on television commercials in support of Robinson, according to filings with the Federal Election Commission.

The spend-up may herald the start of an aggressive push by outside groups in the closing weeks of Oregon's Fourth District race. Before Wednesday, Republican Super PAC Inc. had spent only $29,280 on radio ads in July and August in support of Robinson.

Despite the name, Republican Super PAC Inc is an independent group with no official ties to Robinson or the Republican Party. The group's treasurer is James Bopp, an Indiana attorney and anti-abortion activist.

Bopp's group was founded in 2011, and is a byproduct of loosened restrictions on campaign spending. While federal candidates are limited by how much they can accept from a single donor, the U.S. Supreme Court ruled in 2010 that independent groups can raise and spend unlimited amounts on behalf of a candidate.

These groups are called "super PACs". Robinson's opponent, Peter DeFazio, has repeatedly criticized the rise of super PACs. DeFazio told The World in September that the Supreme Court's decision gave wealthy Americans free reign to manipulate elections.

"This is going to be an election which is really an attempt from very narrow interests to purchase America," he said. DeFazio is well aware of the power of super PACs. In Robinson's unsuccessful bid against DeFazio in 2010, a New York hedge fund manager spent $600,000 on advertising that either supported Robinson or attacked DeFazio. So far this election, Republican Super PAC Inc is the only outside group that has campaigned for either candidate.

Tribe vows lawsuit over Medford casino plan

MEDFORD (AP) — The general counsel of the Cow Creek Band of the Umpqua Tribe says it's a safe bet that another tribe's effort to build a casino in Medford will trigger lawsuits.

The Coquille Indian Tribe has purchased two properties and leased another in Medford. It plans to petition the U.S. Interior Department to place the purchased land in federal trust, opening the way for a casino. "If the secretary of the Interior makes the determination, 'Yes, you can place it in trust, the next day you can expect us and others to file lawsuits," Cow Creek general counsel Wayne Shammel told the Medford Rogue Rotary Club on Friday. "If the secretary of the Interior does not place it in trust, the next day you can expect the Coquilles to file a lawsuit."

The Coquilles announced last month that they had purchased a bowling alley and a former restaurant in hopes of opening a Medford casino along South Pacific Highway. The tribe also agreed to lease Bear Creek Golf Course, adjacent to the two buildings.

The Coquilles already operate a casino in North Bend, 170 miles northwest of Medford. They noted, however, that Jackson County is part of their service territory, and the effort to put a casino there won't be deterred by the Cow

"Each tribe is going to respond in its own way; our concern is to move the project forward," Coquille Indian Tribe spokesman Ray Doering told the Mail Tribune newspaper.

Shammel predicted the Coquilles will have a tough time winning approval because of the distance between Medford and their home base. The typical distance limit for a casino has been about 50 miles from the main area of the tribe. The Cow Creek, Klamath, Siletz and Grand Ronde tribes also include Jackson County in their service areas.

"With all due respect, this is not Coquille territory," Shammel said.

The Cow Creek would fight the Coquille proposal to protect its own Seven Feathers Casino in Canyonville, 70 miles north of Medford but conveniently located on Interstate 5.

"Medford is our No. 1 market, so this is aimed at our economic future," Shammel said. "We understand the Coquilles need economic development. We're sympathetic ... but it's hard to be too sympathetic when you are taking money out of our kids' mouths and putting it in yours."

The wrong way to legalize pot

ROSEBURG NEWS-REGISTER

The Oregon Cannabis Tax Act is wrong for Oregon - and badly written to boot.

To be clear, there are strong arguments for the legalization of marijuana as part of an overall national drug policy. But that's a topic for another day.

Measure 80 would allow adults in Oregon to grow and possess marijuana without interference from the state. A seven-member Oregon Cannabis Commission would be created to regulate the licensing, cultivation, sale and advertising of Oregon cannabis products in national and international markets. Two of the commissioners would be appointed by the governor, with the other five elected by pot growers and processors.

We wonder if the tobacco industry knows it could be this easy to erase previous tobacco laws, and elect a commission of tobacco growers and processors to control that plant's cultivation, licensing and sale all over the world. Who knew, really?

Overall, Measure 80 is an

Spray is the way to stop noxious weed

THE BULLETIN

In a perfect world, perhaps pulling invasive weeds by hand would make sense. But when you're dealing with such things as knapweed, as the U.S. Forest Service is in its current spray program in Central Oregon forests, hand pulling is no solution at all.

Thus, despite challenges from the Blue Mountains Biodiversity Project, the agency is right to go ahead and spray.

Knapweed, one of the targeted weeds, is difficult to pull correctly, and failure to do the job right only serves to spread the pest.

Most animals, meanwhile, won't eat knapweed and the plant itself chokes out native plants they will eat. It fuels fires, prevents native plants from germinating and lessens biodiversity.

Experts say knapweed can be controlled in small areas - onequarter acre or less — by hand pulling, but the process must be repeated over a period of years to be successful. Be prepared for the nearly certain damage by fire, loss of native plants and animals, loss of recreation opportunities and all the rest.

If healthy forests are the goal, spraying is surely the best option.

Tax code drives away the wealthy

THE OREGONIAN

Of all the beneficial changes one might make to Oregon's tax code, perhaps none is as vulnerable to simplistic ideological parry as cutting the capital gains tax. Why, the response goes, would you even consider giving rich guys a tax break when teachers across the state are losing their jobs?

In many cases, capital gains go right back to work, which is to say they're poured into businesses, property or anything else investors consider potentially lucrative emphasis on potentially. An investment that promises to be lucrative can turn out to be disastrous because investing involves risk. That's one reason why capital gains are often taxed at a lower rate than regular income.

Why should those who don't have money to invest value such tax-code incentives? Because other people's investments allow companies to grow, allowing those businesses to hire more people, who, in turn, buy stuff and pay taxes. The more heavily you tax capital gains, the more expensive private capital becomes for the small businesses so many Oregonians support.

The rates imposed by individual states matter because people may move freely. In tax year 2007, for example, 297 Oregonians with capital gains income moved to Clark County, Wash.

Capital gains rates are only one component of a tax structure that nudges wealthy Oregonians toward the border.

Remember where the money comes from

This fall's county elections are unique since the tragic deaths of two of our commissioners means all three positions are up for election. This presents the opportunity for a dramatic shift in county government.

From last spring's primary to the present I have believed there is a group of people and organizations who are intent on taking advantage of this opportunity to reshape county government to their advantage or ideology. I recently researched the secretary of state's web site, oregonvotes.org, and found out that this is indeed the case.

There is an organization called "Coos County Alliance for Progress" which has and is continuing to provide large amounts of campaign contributions to Fred Messerle, John Sweet and Melissa Cribbins. Fred Messerle is receiving the major amount of this largesse. The major contributors to this Alliance are Sause Bros. Inc., Working Families for Bruce Starr, Oregon Resources Corp., the Coquille Indian Tribe and others.

A complete list is available with contribution amounts on the above web site. In addition, some of these same organizations are making large individual contributions to these same three candidates.

I readily admit that these campaign contributions are fully legal and that our democratic form of government not only permits but encourages this type of activity. I do believe, however, that county citizens should be aware of this political fundraising and that the three above recipients may be influenced, if elected, to make decisions that are not all in the best interests of the majority of Coos County citizens.

The Coos County Alliance for Progress, in its statement of purpose, is also supportive of the county administrator initiative and opposed to the home rule ballot measure. For me, personally, when I see large sums of money being spent on the campaigns for the above three candidates and in support of the county administrator position, I will take into account where it is coming from and vote accordingly.

Stores should let our little dogs in

I was at a local hardware store when a man came in with a flier that stated his small 6year-old black and white lhasa/doxie mix dog had been stolen from his car on Saturday while it was parked at Walmart. He said he and his wife had left the windows down a little.

I am asking local stores to relax their policy on allowing pets in their stores, especially little ones when there is no shade in their parking lots. If we left our children in our cars while we shopped, we would be arrested. My little dogs are cleaner and betterbehaved than a lot of people's children. If you won't allow pets (especially small ones) in your store, at least plant trees.

My heart goes out to this couple who lost their beloved pet. Whoever took this little dog, please return it. If you know someone who suddenly acquired a dog that is similar, pointedly ask them where they got it.

This really is the Year of the Woman

We know, you've heard this all before. But consider these numbers: More women are running for Congress than in any previous year -16 for the Senate and 163 for the House, according to the Center for American Women and Politics at Rutgers. And this year, women voters almost certainly will determine the outcome of the elec-

The latest ABC News/Washington Post poll in swing states makes this abundantly clear. In Ohio, Mitt Romney holds a slim lead among men, but President Obama enjoys a 17-point margin among women and an eight-point advantage overall. In Florida, men strongly favor Romney, but women are even more enthusiastic about Obama, putting the president ahead by four points.

Another sign that this is truly the Year of the Woman: On a busy day in New York, where he was addressing the United Nations General Assembly, Obama (and his wife, Michelle) made time to tape "The View," the popular morning show hosted by five women and watched mainly by stay-athome moms. He arrived with a basket of birthday gifts for co-host Barbara Walters and proclaimed his role was to provide "eye candy" for the audience.

Romney was caught on tape at a private fundraiser saying he'd never do the show because four of the hosts were "sharp-tongued and not conservative," but he's now agreed to appear next month. Clearly, he was afraid of a rising wimp factor. Cohost Sherri Shepherd got it right when she cracked, "If you can't handle four sharptongued women, how are you going to handle the coun-

Women as candidates and as voters are tied together by an important theme - what women want out of politics. Sure, there are plenty of female ideologues on both sides, but on balance, women tend to be more practical, realistic and conciliatory.

"Women are pretty frustrated with what they're seeing in terms of the way Congress operates," Karen Middleton of Emerge America, a group that trains Democratic women to run for office, told The New York Times. "We tend to be problem solvers." And there are plenty of problems to solve, starting with a dismally dysfunctional legislative legislators, women make a difference. They are far more likely to identify problems of gender bias, and we know this firsthand. Cokie's mom, Lindy Boggs, served 18 years in Congress and authored legislation banning discrimination against women in bank lending practices. No man would have made that issue a top priority. Women are also more likely to work across party lines. One example: Sens. Olympia Snowe, a Maine Republican, and Barbara Boxer, a California Democrat, co-sponsored an airline passenger bill of rights after a series of torturous flight delays. "Our constituents," explained Boxer, "were getting stuck on aircraft hour after hour ... with no

food, kids screaming, nightmare scenarios."

In perhaps the last bastion of bipartisanship left on Capitol Hill, the female senators from both parties gather regularly to share meals, stories and concerns. Speaking recently at the Rotary Club of Kalamazoo, Michigan Democrat Debbie Stabenow explained that these personal connections go "a long way" toward softening partisan hostilities. "I absolutely believe that building relationships and creating trust is critical," she said, according to the Kalamazoo

Women make a difference as voters, too. Since 1980, two trends have emerged: Women vote in greater numbers than men, and women are more likely to back Democrats. In 2008, the female vote exceeded the male vote by 10 million, and that gap is almost certain to expand this year. Obama barely beat John McCain among men but trounced him by 13 points among women. In 1996, Bill Clinton actually trailed among men but was rescued by women, who favored him by 16 points.

So that's why Obama is happy to be "eye candy" on "The View," and why Romney is willing to brave "sharp-tongued" questioning on the same show. This is the Year of the Woman, and both candidates know it.

Woman hesitates to commit to man with criminal past

DEAR ABBY: I have been dating a man, "Jerry," who committed a crime years ago. He and a friend participated in several robberies. Jerry was unarmed and no one was hurt, although the victims were traumatized. Jerry was caught, served time in prison and has completely reformed his life. He finished college, was which he is respected. Despite the way Jerry has lived his life, I am having a hard time getting over his past. Although I know he has done everything humanly possible to redeem himself, I can't help wondering what kind of person he is DEEP DOWN. We are starting to get more serious, and he doesn't know I'm aware of his record. (A mutual friend told me long before Jerry and I began to date.)

I'm concerned that if my children know about what he did, they will never accept him. Although I have never met someone with whom I feel so compatible since my divorce, I wonder if it's worth pursuing. - TORN OVER HIS PAST

DEAR TORN: Let me help you. Jerry is a man who made a very stupid mistake in his youth and who has paid for it. But it didn't stop him from turning his life around and making a success of himself. Many people would respect that. I know I do.

Because you and Jerry are getting serious, he should have mentioned his past to you. The two of you need to have a heart-to-heart talk. If you are truly worried about ing into a picture book that is the kind of person he is "deep down," this is the way to find out. As for your children once YOU accept him, so will mous silver pot used to make they if you impress upon soup for all the patients, comthem how hard he has plete with three ladles, whose worked to become the person he is today.

DEAR ABBY: I have been going to a small community building near where I live to the remnants of the hospital's walls in the museum's sing karaoke. I love going there because no alcohol is served, everyone acts like family, and I can take my kids and grandkids. My husband doesn't go because he has other stress relievers and we have different interests. He knows some of the people there and doesn't mind me going with my best friend.

I love my husband very much. I am not "looking for love." However, last month the DJ's wife was waiting for me and said she didn't appreciate my singing with her husband (she never comes, either) and told me to stop leaving comments on his Facebook page.

I tried to explain that I thought he was my friend, but she wasn't having it. She wanted to start trouble and ruin what happiness we all have. I thought about not going back, but I love the singing.

I haven't done anything wrong or said anything inappropriate. My friends at karaoke want me back, and my husband says I should go. I have been so down about this. There's no other place around where they don't serve alcohol. Please help me. - INNOCENT AND HURT IN SOUTH CAROLINA

DEAR INNOCENT AND HURT: Although your relationship with the DJ is innocent, it appears he has a troubled marriage. If he doesn't know about the incident with his wife, then you should tell him. The next couple of times you visit the community building to sing, ask your husband to please come with you. And stop leaving messages on the Facebook page.

Mental health museum opens

By Hannah Hoffman The Associated Press

SALEM - David Nichols spent 27 years working in the Oregon State Hospital system from 1972-99, never at the Salem campus, but in Wilsonville and Portland as a clinical psychologist. His job was to talk with patients, learning about their histories, their families, their traumas, their lives. their stories.

"This is what I did for a living," he said. "I listened to stories."

But Nichols is part of a story as well. It's the story of the hospital and of mental health treatment in Oregon. On Saturday, that story was told more completely than ever, with props, videos, words and re-creations at the Oregon State Hospital Museum of Mental Health, which opened this weekend in the historic Kirkbride Building.

A few hundred people, including Nichols, turned out for the opening. Local officials and politicians were there for the ribbon-cutting, and Louise Fletcher, who played Nurse Ratched in the 1975 film "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest," turned up, to applause from the crowd.

The museum is like walksometimes beautiful and sometimes disturbing.

Elsewhere, a large painting hangs on a wall. It is the hospital in springtime, all brick and blue skies and green grass. It becomes haunting only when you realize the little girl in a pink dress who sits on the tree swing at the forefront of the picture could well have been a patient.

"Children as young as 6 were sent here," said Kathryn Dysart, secretary of the hospital board and one of three designers for the museum.

"People didn't understand something like autism," she told the Statesman Journa. "They just know that if they touched (these children), they screamed. There nowhere else to send them."

The museum includes personal stories about patients. One of them, Maggie Rodgers, was 10 when she came to OSH and 15 when she died there of tuberculosis. Her diagnosis: Imbecility. "She's easily angered and does not learn well," her chart

And, of course, the museum pays homage to Fletcher's film, which was shot at the hospital and started telling this story.

Photos from the filming, props from the movie and quotes from cast, directors and hospital patients who helped with the movie are all over the "Cuckoo's Nest" section.

That story focuses on Nurse Ratched's reign of terror over a ward of patients. Their world is turned upside down when Jack Nicholson's character, Randle McMurphy, arrives and encourages the patients to rebel against steely, tyrannical Ratched. The story ends with McMurphy brain dead after being given a lobotomy. A fellow patient suffocates him to end his misery and then escapes from the ward out the window.

A lobotomy, a procedure to neurologically detach a patient's frontal lobe from the rest of his brain, was practiced at OSH, and it's not excluded from the museum. A surgical table and information about the practice are included in the room dedicated to mental health treatments.

The hospital has embraced this chilling aspect of its history, including the movie that shone a light on it, and included it as part of a hospital has used. Some have ment with five major banks. worked (medications, shock therapy), some have backfired (lobotomies) and some goofy today seem (hydrotherapy, or soaking people in bathtubs of varying temperatures).

Hospital superintendent Greg Roberts told the crowd on Saturday morning that understanding this history, the story of how mental health treatment has changed and improved, is crucial to helping move away from the stigma that mental health issues have traditionally suffered under.

Nobel prize to Briton, Japanese for stem cell work

STOCKHOLM (AP) - A British researcher and a Japanese scientist won the Nobel Prize in physiology or medicine today for discovering that ordinary cells of the body can be reprogrammed into stem cells, which then can turn into any kind of tissue – a discovery that may led to new treatments.

Scientists want to build on the work by John Gurdon and Shinya Yamanaka to create replacement tissues for treating diseases like Parkinson's and diabetes, and for studying the roots of diseases in the laboratory - without the ethical dilemma posed by embryonic stem cells.

In announcing the 8 million kronor ($1.2 million) award, the Nobel committee at Stockholm's Karolinska Institute said the discovery has "revolutionized our understanding of how cells and organisms develop." Gurdon showed in 1962 -

In his book, "The Paradox of Choice: Why More Is Less" (Ecco, 2004), author Barry Schwartz says that freedom and individual choice have a downside. "As the number of choices grows further, the negatives escalate until we become overloaded," he writes. "At this point, choice no longer liberates, but debilitates. It might even be said to tyrannize."

Recently, I attempted to count the number of choices in the cookie aisle at my local supermarket. When I hit triple digits, I stopped. That makes me crazy! How can I expect to make the right choice when I have so many options? Schwartz savs so many choices may be a sign that commercial capitalism is bad for us Several, not hundreds, of choices would give us the freedom to show our individuality without pushing us into the maddening dilemma of having to make the perfect choice.

Thankfully, I've discovered ways to escape the tyranny of too many choices.

1. I stay away from places known for an abundance of choice. I depend on experts to narrow the possibilities to a number I can manage easily.

2. I avoid shopping malls, preferring warehouse clubs. Their buyers narrow my choices from hundreds to just one or two. I can deal with that.

3. Manufacturers' coupons narrow my choices considerably in the grocery store. I create a list based on items that are on sale and for which I have a coupon. My choices are made for me long before I walk through the door. In addition, researching publications like Consumer Reports in the quiet of my home or office helps me to narrow my choices for a variety of items. If they'd asked me, I would have suggested that Melissa's parents move the mountain of gifts to another location, bringing out just one or two gifts at a time. Or better yet, scale the party down to just a few friends to avoid being overwhelmed by too much of a good thing.

Union chief: Border agents opened fire on each other head of the U.S. Border Patrol agents' union says the agent killed last week in a shooting in southern Arizona apparently opened fire on two colleagues thinking they were armed smugglers and was killed when they returned fire.

The two sets of agents approached an area where a sensor had been activated early Tuesday from different directions and encountered each other in an area of heavy brush, National Border Patrol Council president George McCubbin said.

Agent Nicholas Ivie apparently opened fire first and wounded one of the other agents but was killed in the return fire.

"I don't know what it was he saw or heard that triggered this whole event," McCubbin said. "Unfortunately it resulted in his death and another agent injured."

The new details add to a FBI statement Friday that the shooting appeared to be a friendly fire incident that involved no one but the agents.

Sensors are set up in different areas along the U.S.-Mexico border to detect smugglers or illegal immigrants, with Border Patrol agents responding when they're set off. The shooting occurred in a rugged hilly area about five miles north of the border near Bisbee, Ariz., an area known for illegal trafficking.

McCubbin and Rothrock both said the two sets of agents knew the others were heading to the area on foot but apparently didn't know they were so close. McCubbin said he'd been briefed by the agency, while Rothrock's agency has been involved with the investigation.

Nemeth said he got involved with Octoberfish the first year as a way to bring the community together and cook great local seafood.

"They heard we liked to cook and we were crazy," he said. "We are here to serve good seafood, drink good beer and listen to good music."

Nemeth said around 160 pounds of seafood was picked up at a local fishery and served to around 320 people.

"The fish was caught locally and will be served locally," he said.

Nemeth said 40 pounds of shrimp was donated by the Oregon Trawl Commission, 30 pounds of fish by the Oregon Albacore Commission and 10 pounds of crab from the Oregon Dungeness Commission.

The seafood was turned into salads, combination plates and individual plates. Nemeth said the idea of sharing the seafood with the community came from late fisherman Jim Peterson, who passed away last year.

"He was everybody's best friend," Nemeth said of Peter-

"A lot of this stems from him. I'm glad everybody locally has been helping out to make this happen."

Fisherman Byron Hanks, who helped serve tuna at the festival, echoed his friend's thoughts about the importance of Peterson and bringing the community together.

"That's why we are here," he said. "We are the community."

"It's a great program," she said about Youth Leadership. "This is a great community cultural event."

D'Souza said the event was made possible by a lot of local donations and support from various organizations. She said ORCCA hoped to raise a few thousand dollars to be divided equally among the children programs.

Coquille City Councilor

Question: Why do you want to be a city councilor?

A: I want to be a city councilor because I feel being on the city council is the best way to affect change as opposed to being in the audience.

Question: What are the three most important problems or opportunities facing your city?

A: First, I see the city struggling to provide quality essential services on an increasingly tighter budget. Add to that the city's aging infrastructure and the increasing cost of repairing it; and third, as a citizen who lives and works in the downtown area, I feel the whole downtown area could be better represented by our city government.

Question: If elected, how will you address those issues?

Coquille City Councilor

Question: Why do you want to be a city councilor?

A: For a small town, Coquille is very busy and creative. I am amazed at the drive and energy of our citizens to accomplish endeavors, such as the new swimming pool and River Walk.

Question: What are the three most important problems or opportunities facing your city?

A: Our infrastructure desperately needs improvement. We also need to attract and keep families with jobs and recreational opportunities. Third, we need to keep our citizens healthy and connected with our town and its many attractions.

Question: If elected, how will you address those issues?

A: I pledge to try and get the most egregious streets drivable.

Most of our streets are at least 100 years old, and were not built to support the weight of modern day vehicles. Second, the need to actively market more business. Last, more housing. We need to look at putting in either some apartments or condos on the GP site.

Reds stifle Giants for 2-0 lead in playoffs

The Associated Press Cincinnati's Bronson Arroyo allowed just one hit while pitching the first seven innings of the Reds' win over San Francisco on Sunday.

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Bronson Arroyo pitched the Reds back to Ohio on quite a playoff roll.

Arroyo retired his first 14 batters and delivered a gem a day after 19-game winner Johnny Cueto went down with a back injury, and Cincinnati beat the San Francisco Giants 9-0 on Sunday night to head home with a 2-0 NL division

A pair of Ryans provided the big hits. Ryan Ludwick connected leading off the second inning for his first career playoff homer and Ryan Hanigan hit a two-run single in the fourth and a later RBI single. Jay Bruce added a two-run double and Joey Votto had three hits in his first multihit postseason game.

"Coming on the road, you think about getting one as a success and victory," Bruce said. "To be able come here and get two is very important."

Former San Francisco skipper Dusty Baker came into his old stomping grounds by the bay and left with two commanding victories 10 years after managing the Giants within six outs of a World Series title before falling short.

The Giants were handed their worst playoff shutout in franchise history.

Game 3 in the best-of-five series is Tuesday at Great American Ball Park. Homer Bailey (13-10), who pitched a no-hitter Sept. 28 at Pittsburgh, takes the mound as the Reds try to close out the series against Giants right-hander Ryan Vogelsong (14-9).

The Reds won their first playoff game in 17 years by taking Game 1 without their ace Saturday night, and now they're going back home looking for their own sweep after the Phillies eliminated them in a frustrating three-game first round two years ago.

"You're not comfortable at all until it's over," Baker said. "We've been there before. It's hard to take the last breath out of anything."

The Reds will try for their first postseason sweep since beating the Dodgers in the first round in 1995. Cincinnati got swept in the NL championship series that year by Atlanta to start what became a seven-game postseason losing streak before Saturday's win.

The shaggy-haired Arroyo, the right-hander with that high leg kick slightly resembling the familiar motion of Giants Hall of Famer Juan Marichal, went untouched before Brandon Belt's two-out single to the gap in right-center with two out in the fifth. San Francisco didn't get another hit until Pablo Sandoval lined a double off the right-field arcade with two outs in the

"You hate to get beat like that, especially at home," Giants manager Bruce Bochy said. "It happened. We know where we're at right now. We know our backs are to the wall. We have to come out and be ready to play once we get to Cincinnati. I know they know what's at stake. They've done a great job all year bouncing back."

Bobcats honor past champions

The World

MYRTLE POINT - The youngest inductee gave the most emotional speech at the Myrtle Point Hall of Fame ceremony on Saturday night.

Kaylie Towne, who graduated in 2004, spoke of growing up in town after her mom died.

"It really was a village raising a child," she said. "There were a lot of families that helped after my mom passed away."

Towne was inducted in the school's fourth class, along with John Breuer, Ron Mason, John Franzen, coach Pat Rickard, the 1941 costate champion football team and the 1982 state champion volley-

Towne's accomplishments were many, including earning allstate honors while helping lead the Bobcats to the 2003 state basketball title, setting the school record in the pole vault, competing in the state cross country meet four years (two when the Bobcats won trophies) and then becoming an All-American in crew for Oregon State University. She also was valedictorian of her graduating class at Myrtle Point and Pac-10 scholar-athlete at OSU.

Towne spoke glowingly of Myrtle Point basketball coach Marty Stallard while reflecting back on the championship season, when the Bobcats lost to Gold Beach three times before beating the Panthers in the championship game.

Stallard told the team during the season that the fourth game against the Panthers was the one that would matter.

"We made some changes," she said. "That was a testament to his coaching ability and the belief he had in us." Towne said Stallard's impact went beyond the basketball court.

"The high standard he held us to set me up for what I was able to accomplish later in my life," she said.

Towne also spoke fondly of her dad, Pat, who taught her values father. Her love of basketball started in first grade, and he found time to take her to the old Maple School twice a week to work on basketball fundamentals. She said her dad had a lot of help from many other families raising the three girls. "I'm very proud to be from here," she said.

That sentiment was repeated often during the ceremony.

Breuer, who graduated in 1968, talked about loving Friday nights as a youngster, when football games were so popular in town.

"My dream was to be a stud football player," he said. "As a 130pound freshman fullback, that didn't happen."

Kenseth avoids crash to win at Talladega

TALLADEGA, Ala. (AP) – The championship contenders said Talladega Superspeedway would be the wild-card race in the Chase for the Sprint Cup. That was an understatement.

Talladega delivered yet another "big one" Sunday, when defending NASCAR champion Tony Stewart triggered a 25-car pileup as he tried to protect the lead. His bid to block a long line of traffic on the last lap backfired, and his car was sent sailing through the air in a chaotic crash that collected 10 of the 12 title contenders.

Daytona 500 winner Matt Kenseth won under caution, and everyone else was left wondering when NASCAR will do something dramatic to alter the dangerous racing at restrictor-plate tracks.

"It's not safe. It's not. It's bloodthirsty," Dale Earnhardt Jr. said. "If that's what people want, that's ridiculous."

Stewart, who assailed the wreckfests at Talladega with a sarcastic diatribe in May, took full responsibility for creating the latest carnage.

He had charged to the lead on the first lap of a two-lap sprint to the finish, but got too far ahead of the pack to hang on to any drafting partners.

Kenseth was charging on the outside of him and Michael Waltrip was leading a line of traffic on the inside. Stewart was blocking all over the track, and said he mistakenly chopped across the front of Waltrip's car to trigger the accident.

The contact hooked Stewart to send him into a spin, and his car lifted into the air and sailed on its roof and then on its side over several other cars. It created chaos through the pack, which was running three-wide in a frantic dash to the finish.

"I just screwed up. I turned down and cut across Michael and crashed the whole field," Stewart said. "It was my fault, blocking and trying to stay where I was at.

"I was trying to win the race and I was trying to stay ahead of Matt there and Michael got a great run on the bottom and had a big head of steam, and when I turned down, I turned across the front of his car. Just a mistake on my part but cost a lot of people a bad day." Stewart gamely waved to the crowd as he climbed from his battered car, while Jimmie Johnson sat on the ledge of Earnhardt's window for a lift back to the garage. Everywhere they looked, they saw crumpled cars.

Five-time Talladega winner Earnhardt said enough is enough with the carnage. He was credited with a 20th-place finish that dropped him four spots in the standings to 11th.

"If this was what we did every week, I wouldn't be doing it," he said. "I'll just put it to you that way. If this was how we raced every week, I'd find another job. That's what the package is doing. It's really not racing. It's a little disappointing. It cost a lot of money right there.

"If this is how we're going to continue to race and nothing is going to change, how about NASCAR build the cars? It'll save us a lot of money." Of the 12 Chase drivers, only race winner Kenseth and secondplace finisher Jeff Gordon avoided the final wreck and it pushed Gordon up four spots in the standings to sixth with six races remaining. But there was little change beyond that as everyone else ended up with a sub-par finish. "That was the craziest, craziest finish I've ever experienced at Talladega," Gordon said. "It was just insane. I remember when coming to Talladega was fun, and I haven't experienced that in a long time. That was bumper-cars at 200 mph. I don't know anybody who likes that." It took NASCAR more than an hour to sort the final finishing order. When the results were finally posted, Kyle Busch was third and was followed by David Ragan and Regan Smith, who grabbed a season-best fifth-place finish in his final race with Furniture Row Racing.

Chase driver Greg Biffle was sixth, followed by points leader Brad Keselowski, Travis Kvapil, Ryan Newman and Jeff Burton.

Keselowski considered himself lucky to be leaving with a 14-point lead over Johnson. Keselowski said he was holding on trying to stay in the bottom lane because he figured that would be his escape route when the inevitable accident happened. He was credited with a seventh-place finish, but his Penske Racing team had a photo that showed Keselowski on the apron in fourth with the caution lights on - when the field should have been frozen. Both owner Roger Penske and team president Tim Cindric believed the driver wasn't awarded the proper finish.

■ Luck leads rally for Indianapolis; Brees sets record for Saints

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The weeping team owner held up the game ball and vowed to leave the stadium with it.

Jim Irsay would be taking it to Chuck Pagano, who has everything to do with the Indianapolis Colts' 30-27 shocker over the Green Bay Packers on Sunday even though the head coach wasn't on hand.

"We know what kind of man we have down the street, fighting, fighting for his life, and winning the fight," Irsay said of Pagano, who has been hospitalized with leukemia. "Everyone in here knows how much that this means, and this ball is going right down the street."

Rookie quarterback Andrew Luck and veteran receiver Reggie Wavne won it with a 4-vard touchdown pass with 35 seconds left to complete the Colts' secondhalf rally from a 21-3 deficit. Interim coach Bruce Arians acknowledged he was fighting back tears when he spoke to reporters afterward.

"You guys doing this today, Bruce coming in, all you guys pulling together, Reggie being so close to Chuck going back for so long," Irsay told his players.

Wayne finished with 13 receptions for a career-high 212 yards the second-highest total in Colts history behind Hall of Famer Raymond Berry in 1957. And he wore orange gloves instead of the traditional pink ones for breast cancer awareness month, because that's the color for leukemia patients.

"I just wanted to do something, you know, for Chuck," Wayne explained. "I had some equipment guys make some calls. If they (NFL officials) fine me, they fine me. I really feel like that would be a terrible thing to do, but if so, so be it, I'll go ahead and take the fine and do it for Chuck."

They all did it for Chuck on Sunday.

Saints 31, Chargers 24: Drew Brees threw for 370 yards and broke a half-century-old NFL record by throwing a touchdown pass in his 48th straight game, and New Orleans won for the first time this season with a victory over San Diego.

Brees' 40-yard pass to Devery Henderson eclipsed the mark of 47 consecutive games with a touchdown pass set by Johnny Unitas from 1956-60. Brees' also had three scoring strikes to Marques Colston, giving him a franchiserecord 52 touchdown catches with the Saints (1-4).

At Brees' request, the NFL allowed head coach Sean Payton, assistant head coach Joe Vitt and general manager Mickey Loomis all serving various suspensions in connection with the NFL's bounty investigation — to attend the game. Unitas' son Joe was also in attendance. "It gave us a good mojo for sure," Brees said of Payton's presence. "I love my coach, so glad he could be here. Mickey and Joe Vitt as well. It is special for our team, special they could be a part of this record."

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BALTIMORE -Sabathia, Russell Martin and the New York Yankees crashed a party that was 15 years in the making.

Martin led off the ninth inning with a tiebreaking home run off Jim Johnson, Sabathia turned in a sparkling pitching performance and the Yankees beat the Baltimore Orioles 7-2 Sunday night in the opener of their AL divisional series.

Sabathia allowed two runs and eight hits in 8 2-3 innings to help the Yankees take the edge off the Orioles' first home playoff game since 1997. The husky left-hander went 0-2 in three starts against Baltimore during the regular season, but in this one he returned to form and improved his lifetime record against the Orioles to 17-4.

"Fastball command was good, worked off that." Sabathia said. "Throwing the ball pretty good getting the corners. Tried to stay out there and make some pitches."

Sabathia is 6-1 with the Yankees in the postseason, 4-0 in the division series.

With the score 2-all, Martin drove a 2-0 pitch from Johnson into the leftfield seats. It was the first of four straight hits off Johnson, who led the majors with 51 saves. Raul Ibanez and Derek Jeter followed with singles, Ichiro Suzuki drove in a run with a swinging bunt and one out later, Robinson Cano hit a two-run double.

In his seven prior appearances against New York, Johnson allowed one run in seven innings and had three saves. Nick Swisher capped the five-run ninth with a sacrifice fly off Tommy Hunter.

"It's tough. It's just tough going, period," Orioles manager Buck Showalter said. "Jimmy has been great for us all year and will be again. Tonight just wasn't his Orioles starter Jason Hammel allowed two runs, Lew Ford singled and both four hits and four walks in 5 2-3 innings...

New York missed an excellent chance to take the lead in the seventh. After Troy Patton walked Martin and Ibanez, Darren O'Day entered and Jeter dropped down a perfect two-strike sacrifice bunt. With the infield drawn in, Suzuki hit a sharp grounder to second baseman Robert Andino, who threw home. Matt Wieters grabbed the ball on the short hop and tagged out Martin. O'Day then struck out Alex Rodriguez.

But Suzuki was thrown out trying to steal third, and Hammel settled down by striking out Rodriguez and retiring Cano on a broken-bat fly to right.

Sabathia retired the first six batters he faced without allowing a ball out of the infield, then ran into trouble in the third inning. Chris Davis led off with a single, runners moved up on a bunt before Nate McLouth bounced a two-run single into right field for a 2-1 lead. New York promptly tied it in the fourth, but another potential big inning was short-circuited when a runner was thrown out on the basepaths. Triple Crown winner Miguel Cabrera doubled twice for the Tigers, hit a fly ball that resulted in a tworun error and later singled in the ninth.

Detroit will go for a sweep of the division series matchup in Game 3 on Tuesday at Oakland.

The Tigers overcame three A's leads and seesawed to victory. It was 1-all before a wild final three innings that included a big Oakland misplay, two game-tying wild pitches and several momentum changes.

Nationals 3, Cardinals 2: Pinch hitter Tyler Moore blooped a two-out, two-run single in the eighth inning and the Washington Nationals won in their postseason debut, beating the defending World Series champion St. Louis Cardinals on Sunday in an NL playoff opener.

Defense carries OSU to 4-0 start

CORVALLIS (AP) - A week after Oregon State relied on its offense for a victory over Arizona, the defense helped secure the win against Washington State.

The Beavers improved their record to 4-0 (3-0 in the Pac-12) and jumped four spots in The Associated Press rankings to No. 10 after a 19-6 win at home over the Cougars on Saturday.

"Our record says we are perfect right now, and I can't argue with that," said Oregon State receiver Markus Wheaton. "But we have a lot to work on. As you can see there are a lot of penalties and missed assignments."

There were also turnovers. Sophomore Sean Mannion was 25 of 42 for 270 yards, but he threw three interceptions to kill promising drives. Add that to 11 penalties for 110 yards, and the Beavers were their own worst enemies at times.

The first half was particularly trying, with Mannion throwing two of his INTs and another drive stalling at the Cougars 24 when the Beavers failed to convert on fourth-and-2. They took a tenuous 6-3 lead into halftime.

"I'm really proud of the way our team came out in the second half," Mannion said. "I think that says a lot yards passing and just 20 yards on the ground. Washington State (2-4, 0-3) had five turnovers — four interceptions and a fumble.

Through wins over Wisconsin, UCLA, Arizona and the Cougars, the Beavers haven't had both the defense and offense clicking at the same time.

'We have so much potential to win every game on our schedule," Crichton said. "We haven't played as a whole team yet because either the offense or defense carries us in each game. Once we finally play as a team, you guys are in for something great."

The Beavers are 4-0 for the first time since 2002. They haven't started a season 5-0 since 1939. Even the Fiesta Bowl champions of 2000, who finished 11-1, full game," running back Storm Woods lost their fifth game.

Oregon State travels to BYU on Saturday. These Cougars (4-2), survived a scare Friday night against Utah State, narrowly winning the battle for the Old Wagon Wheel 6-3. BYU features a stingy defense that has held opponents to under 300 yards of total offense in 12 straight games.

To play a truly complete game, the Beavers will have to end that streak. And while OSU is 2-0 on the road this season, having beaten UCLA at the Rose Bowl and Arizona in Tucson, LaVell Edwards Stadium – with an elevation of 4,600 feet and a rabid crowd – will likely be the most inhospitable venue the Beavers have seen this year.

"Man, I can't wait to put together a said, "and see how good we are."

Cincinnati beat San Francisco's two best pitchers on their home field. Matt Cain lost Game 1.

Bumgarner had pitched a one-hitter June 28 against the Reds at home, but was nothing close to that dominant this time.

Ludwick, who came in just 1 for 16 lifetime against Bumgarner, silenced the orange towel-waving sellout crowd of 43,505 AT&T Park in a hurry when he sent the first pitch of the second inning over the center-field wall. Many of the fans quickly made for the exits after the Reds went ahead 6-0 on Bruce's two-run double in the eighth.
