COOS HEALTH AND WELLNESS TO SURVEY HOUSEHOLD EMERGENCY SUPPLIES

COOS COUNTY — On Sunday, March 29, Coos Health and Wellness is conducting a survey to evaluate emergency supplies in the average household.

The survey is designed after the Centers for Disease Control methodology, known as Community Assessment of Public Health Emergency Response, or CASPER.

“We are attempting to be proactive,” said Brian Leon, epidemiologist with CHW. He added that there has been no indication of tighter social isolation measures or community-sized quarantines to slow the spread of COVID-19, but that “we want to be prepared for that possibility.”

On March 29, Leon said people clearly identified as being with Coos Health and Wellness will knock on randomly selected homes to ask a quick set of questions. Those questions include whether or not the household has a week’s worth of nonperishable food and if there are enough medications.
“This first survey is to get an update on where the community is,” he said. “If there are tighter restrictions, if we see evidence of concern that folks don’t have enough food, we would potentially do a second survey to see if there is an (improvement).” Leon explained that if there is a concerning lack of nonperish-able foods in the average Coos County household, CHW is already working with Oregon Coast Community Action and its food share program to potentially cover needs.

“It’s going to help as much as possible if people are home and can answer their doors,” he said. “It is a random sampling, so we can’t say exactly where this will be done but hopefully we get the rural areas as much as anywhere else. They won’t go inside the home, just speak at the door.”

As Leon explained it, CHW would rather have this information on hand in an event where it’s needed as opposed to being thrown into a situation and not have it.

“This is an indicator of being proactive,” he said.
