Peace Rocks Project opened reception is Feb. 4

BANDON - The Peace Rocks Project will be featured in the Bandon Pubic Library display case during the month of February with the opening reception 2-4 p.m. Sunday, Feb. 4. The opening is in conjunction with artist Geri Inokuchi’s opening, will be held in the Sprague Room.

Peace Rocks Project began in April 2006, when Bandon resident Jane Clark decided to paint the word “peace” on some rocks and pass them out to all who attended a concert featuring the community Peace Choir and to a number of local musicians. Clark passed away in 2007, but not before she started an international movement.

In March 2010, the folks at Unity of Bandon decided to paint more Peace Rocks and distribute them around the community.

Since then, thousands of rocks have been painted with images, words and messages of peace and distributed all over the world. Groups, large and small, gather to paint rocks, oftentimes engaging in heartfelt conversations and feeling their deep connection with one another while doing so.

Anyone can participate in this activity, whatever their age or ability. Peace Rocks gatherings are held at 7 p.m. the first Thursday of every month at Unity of Bandon, 50211 Highway 101 south.

For more information, visit www.peace-rocks.org, Peace Rocks Project Facebook page, or email: info@peacerocks.org. Painted rocks will be available at the reception for people to write messages on and take with them.
