Soccer game could have been COVID spreader

Contact tracers struggling to get information from youth sports organization

ZACK DEMARS

A youth soccer game Saturday may have caused an unknown number of COVID-19 exposures, health officials announced Thursday.

Coos Health & Wellness officials aren't certain who was at the game or if players or attendees were wearing masks, and are asking those who were at the game to contact the agency's contact tracers to assist in slowing the spread from the resulting exposures.

"The investigators have done everything they can to try to contact the individuals involved," CHW spokesperson Dr. Eric Gleason said Thursday. "So, at this point, we're not getting any cooperation from the Coos County Youth Sports organization and we have to kind of put it into the community, so we can get community help."

The game was held April 10 at 12:30 p.m., at North Bend's old Bangor school field, according to Gleason.

In some cases during the pandemic, organizers of events which have led to virus exposures have assisted contact tracers by providing the names or contact information of attendees, who can then be contacted by the agency and asked to quarantine if necessary.

That's what happened earlier this year when a karaoke party at an area bar led to dozens of new virus cases in the community.

At the time, CHW declined to publicly name the bar, saying it had

You don't have to be an ultra-marathoner like Amarissa Wooden to try on shoes at her new store in downtown Coos Bay.

While 50-kilometer runs (yes, as in 31 miles) are Wooden's favorites, she says many of the customers she's seen in the past month have been people just hoping to get out and walk more often as the spring warms up.

"I guess to help somebody feel confident to go out and be more active or fit is — that's my passion right there," Wooden said. "I've had a few clients come back in after finding the extra-wide shoes that they needed so they can go for walks and the types (of apparel) that they need to make them feel confident to go out and work out in public."

Built on her years as part of the South Coast's running community, Wooden's Wild Coast Running Company opened last month and offers shoes, athletic wear and a space to connect for anyone who's physically active.

"If I can create the community hub for active living, boom, I want it to be here. It doesn't really matter what the active living is," Wooden said.

And Wooden knows a thing or two about active living: In the healthcare industry for the last two decades, she's been the president of the South Coast Running Club for the past five or six years.

From the events she's planned with the group and the people she's met while spending hours upon hours running trails around the Bay Area, Wooden's made a sizeable group of friends who like to run as much, or almost as much, as she does.

But a few years ago, she began to notice most of the people she's

"And it was just exhausting, ordering them and shipping them back. And then I knew I'm like, I'm not the only one doing this, a ton of other people are doing it," Wooden said.

Beyond just being the inspiration for the store, the South Coast community is represented all over the store: The furniture from local antique stores, the art made by local friends, even the store's name is

Escaped debris burns bring crews to early fires

ZACK DEMARS

Southwestern Oregon fire officials are urging property owners to exercise caution after crews responded to five small fires April 13th.

"If you don't need to burn, hold off on burning," said Jef Chase, a spokesperson for the Coos Forest Protective Association, Wednesday.

According to Chase, the five fires Tuesday were sparked when high winds pushed debris burns into surrounding areas with unusually dry fuels.

Tuesday's first fire was reported in the Gaylord area south of Myrtle Point, and burned about a quarter of an acre. Several engines and pickups responded and, while on the scene, were called to another fire.

That one, near Dement Creek west of Gaylord, was the largest fire crews responded to throughout the day, totaling between 10 and 15 acres, according to Chase.

Additional fires included a half-acre fire on the Coos River, a tenth-acre fire in Lee Valley east of Coquille and a fire of unknown size near Port Orford.

A small fire near Lee Valley was one of five fires local crews responded to Tuesday. With little moisture recently, fire danger is high in the region.

Fires

From A1

The fires, while small, are unusual this early in the year, Chase said. This year, the weather has kept fuels across the region drier than usual. “Normally April and May, we get some good, decent rainfall,” Chase said. “But this year, we haven’t had the consistent rainfall, so we haven’t gotten the green-up.” What’s more, cold temperatures night contribute to the drying, by freezing moisture and bringing it to the surface of fuels to be evaporated by morning sun, Chase said. Tuesday’s fires came before CFPA had completed its hiring for the summer season, meaning the agency called anyone they had available to assist on the fires. A Shutter Creek Correctional Institution crew assisted on the Dement Creek fire, as did the Myrtle Point Fire Department, Chase said. “Anybody that’s available, we send them out there,” Chase said. The five fires were not the cause of light smoke in the air some county residents noticed midday Wednesday — that came from a controlled burn in Douglas County, according to fire officials. “There were two burns ignited (Wednesday) morning for about 1,700 tons in (northwestern Douglas) County about 33 miles (north-northeast) of Coos Bay,” Oregon Department of Forestry spokesperson Jim Gersbach said. “Coos Bay had a light smoke impact (incident) from those burns.” According to Chase, the early fires are a sign to residents to be cautious when burning debris, especially in high winds and on dry days. Not having a safe clearing around piles, leaving piles unattended, failing to make sure the pile is completely out before adding to it and burning too large a pile can all be causes of debris burn escape, Chase said. “A lot of folks have burned for years, and never had a problem — they usually don’t until they do,” he said. “They definitely don’t want to be one of the folks that has several fire departments at their house putting fires out.” The South Coast’s fires weren’t the first in Oregon this year: ODF said Tuesday the agency has already responded to 70 fires this spring, more than three times as many as an average year. CFPA’s fire danger remains low, but Chase said the agency will continue monitoring the spring’s weather and could declare a fire season and prohibit certain activities, as it did last summer. The agency updates fire risk and restrictions on its website at www.coosfpa.net.

the information it needed to conduct contact tracing. But that’s not the case this time: Officials said Thursday CCYS has been uncooperative in providing the names of attendees to the agency, making it difficult to conduct contact tracing operations and forcing the agency to ask for the public’s help. “It makes it very difficult. It makes it so that we’re behind the eight ball from jump street,” Gleason said. “We’re so far behind at this point. We’re five days past this game.” CCYS has referred the department’s inquiries to the nonprofit’s attorney, Gleason said. CCYS said on its Facebook page that it had confidentially notified families of a possible exposure associated with a student from the Millicoma School. Later, CCYS Coach and Board Chair Kevin Dubisar responded to the public health department’s allegations in a statement to The World. “According to Coos Health and Wellness, the player tested positive for the virus on Monday, April 12, 2021. The last soccer event was the prior Saturday, April 10th.”

apart,” Sears said. The “Tourism Declares” organization is a global effort, with tourism agencies and companies across the planet declaring climate emergencies and committing to its targets. Tour operators, travel agencies and destinations representatives — like the tourism bureau for all of Scotland — have signed on. With the declaration, the organizations commit to making a plan to reduce emissions, and set a target of reducing global carbon emissions by 55% from 2017 levels by 2030 — the rate the International Panel on Climate Change says is necessary to prevent the worst impacts of future warming.

Dubisar wrote. “There is no evidence as to her positivity on that date, nor have any of our other players or their families tested positive, to the best of our knowledge.” Dubisar also listed a number of the organization’s safety precautions, including frequent handwashing, the regular cleaning of restrooms, balls, cones and other equipment and limits on who can interact with team members. “CCYS has taken and continues to take every precaution to ensure the safety of our players and their loved ones,” Dubisar wrote. “CCYS thanks the residents of Coos County for their ongoing support of our youth during these difficult times” Officials are concerned the virus could have spread significantly in the time since the event, since those who may have been exposed haven’t been told to quarantine. “We do know that there was exposure at that game. Meaning that we would be wanting to have these individuals under quarantine and monitoring,” said Kelsey Orr, a CHW contact tracer. Investigators do know the cases have led to an exposure of some school students, but that seems to be about all they know: Gleason said CHW doesn’t know how many players, coaches, parents or others were in attendance, or whether virus precautions were followed. “We are aware that the mask mandate hasn’t necessarily been adhered to at these events, so this could be a fairly significant issue, so please contact us,” Gleason said. And while Coos County’s virus numbers have remained steady enough to keep indoor dining and other businesses open, Gleason said events like this one could cause case rates to increase once again after several weeks of declines. “I think we’re staying OK, but I think we’ve hit the bottom of our drop, and we’re just waiting to see if it stabilizes, or if it starts to increase,” Gleason said. “State numbers would indicate that maybe the trend looks like it might be going back up, but it only takes a few events like this, or a few more karaoke snafus to put us right back on the track for going up again.” CHW encourages anyone who was at the game and is experiencing virus symptoms or is concerned about possible exposure to contact investigators by calling 541-266-6700. Gleason said the exposure offers an example of why residents should still pay attention to wearing masks and socially distancing, even when outside.

Sears pointed to die-offs of the coast’s oyster farms due to ocean acidification (where the ocean gets more acidic as its level of carbon dioxide increases) and this summer’s unusual coastal wildfires as examples of a continually warming planet’s impact on the coast. Those problems could pose threats to the industry’s future, she said. “Charter boats that take people fishing — what if there’s nothing to catch?” Sears said. Janice Langlinais, the executive director of the Coos Bay-North Bend Visitors & Convention Bureau, said her agency hasn’t yet “declared” a climate emergency, but is supportive of OCVA’s efforts to research the issue and provide guidance for local agencies and businesses. “I believe this is a very important issue for the travel & tourism industry to put their focus on, especially as tourism grows following this pandemic, with pent up demand for natural areas,” Langlinais said. Once the OCVA begins making recommendations for destinations, Langlinais said the VCB will consider its options for implementing the recommendations. “We want to ensure that our environment and planet are taken care of for future generations while providing a welcoming experience now,” the VCB director added. More information about OCVA’s effort is available on its website at <https://visittheoregoncoast.com>. Sears said the organization is looking for ideas to incorporate into its efforts, as well as examples of coastal businesses taking steps towards climate action. “I think that the Oregon coast has really courageous people,” Sears said. “We’re looking for courageous thinkers.”

Wild Coast Running Company owner Amarissa Wooden looks at the results of a custom scan of a customer's feet. The computer system analyzes how a customer's feet are shaped, helping them to pick a shoe size and insole.

Running

inspired by conversations Wooden had with local running partners.

But she hasn't always been part of that South Coast running community.

Wooden ran briefly in high school, but a quad injury kept her away from the activity for years. That changed 11 years ago at the age of 30, when a friend invited her to run the Bay Area's Prefontaine Memorial Run.

"And I told her, that was a horrible idea. I was not a runner," Wooden remembered. "The night before the Pre I went to Fred Meyer, and I bought a pair of shoes, because I didn't even own tennis shoes. And then I decided I was going to go run six miles, just to make sure I could actually run six miles, the night before."

The Pre — named, of course, for the deity of the Bay Area's running history, who grew up just blocks from where Wooden's store now sits — was a turning point for the store owner.

Her day-old shoes didn't fit right, and she couldn't always breathe on the course, much less breathe and talk, but she finished the race (in what she recalls as a "reasonably decent" time, no less).

After the Pre, she kept running, training with the friend who'd taken her to the race and her future husband.

She learned to run and breathe, then run and talk, then run without spraining an ankle.

Wooden kept running, eventually entering herself into some of Oregon's biggest races, and bigger races across the country. The South Coast Running Club eventually asked her to take over as president and, by now, she's run the Boston Marathon twice and coaches the North Bend High School cross country team.

"Ultimately the person you're racing in the, you know, the Boston (Marathon) is yourself. And I would say both my Bostons haven't been my finest runs, but they've been just awesome experiences," Wooden said.

Inspiring people to achieve their own activity goals is part of why she opened the store.

It's been a process to do so: She's been renting the storefront since November, but has spent much of that time retrofitting the inside and getting her inventory ready to go.

And since the shoe suppliers Wooden partnered with produce and ship shoes in six-month cycles, she's had to work with company representatives to start building an inventory from what they have available.

"Where we would run into barriers was if perhaps some models had no product available for orders, such as they'd already allocated it out to all of their partners so there wasn't any other supply left for complete size runs," Wooden said.

Still, the store's got a wall full of shoes, as well of racks of athletic pants, shirts, socks, hats, bras, visibility and hydration gear and more.

If customers aren't sure where to start, Wooden walks them through the process. She starts by having them step onto a specialized pad, which scans the size and shape of their feet to recommend a shoe size and style of insole.

She's still learning about her customer base — she's seen a lot of her running friends come into the store, but she's also met a lot of people she doesn't know.

Many ask her to special order shoe and clothing sizes she wasn't expecting to see many of when she started.

"So now I'm just playing, and it's just so much fun to do that. And I've enjoyed the experiences working with people again," Wooden said.

Beyond running shoes, Wooden said she's hoping Wild Coast can be a store for anyone living actively. What's more, she wants the space to be a place where the community can share ideas, like spreading the word about upcoming yoga classes or organizing stroller walking groups.

"And that's kind of how this all started was I just had a keen interest in solving a problem," Wooden said. "And I also really wanted to figure out something I can do where I could just share my love and passion and maybe help inspire other people to just become passionate about whatever it is they truly enjoy."

Wild Coast Running Company is located in Coos Bay's Hub Building at 145 S Broadway, and is open Tuesday through Saturday from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. on Sundays from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Officials raise alarm over rising cases, vaccine inequity

ZACK DEMARS
The World

Oregon health officials Friday addressed accelerating COVID-19 case counts across the state, ahead of Monday's vaccine eligibility expansion to all adults.

The comments from Oregon Gov. Kate Brown came in a press conference with officials from the Oregon Health Authority.

"It's clear that this virus is persistent and it's stubborn. While we flatten the curve again and again, COVID will not surrender," Brown said.

State Epidemiologist Dr. Dean Sidelinger said the state's pandemic picture is again worsening, with cases, hospitalizations and deaths all on the rise in recent weeks.

Weekly cases have increased by more than 20% for each of the last three weeks, "eclipsing even the most pessimistic scenario in our most recent COVID-19 modelling," Sidelinger said.

"Recent data are troubling, showing that the virus is on the march throughout our state, sickening our friends and neighbors," Sidelinger said.

Variants are also spreading rapidly in the state, Sidelinger said, including the faster-spreading UK variant, which now accounts for more than half of virus cases nationwide.

Still, Brown said the increasing cases won't push the state to establish any new virus restrictions beyond the current four-level framework, saying residents know how to take personal responsibility for wearing masks and limiting gatherings.

The state modified that four-tier system earlier this month, making it harder for counties to enter the extreme-risk category which closes indoor dining and other businesses.

"I think Oregon, throughout the entire pandemic, has gotten it right," Brown said. "Oregonians have made really smart decisions and tough choices to protect themselves and their neighbors and loved ones."

"This has been a nationwide phenomenon, and part of the challenge is people of means have got more ways to be able to access vaccines than others do. And that's a headwind that we're running into."

OHA Director Patrick Allen

Brown did offer one reason for optimism for parents and students across the state: While she didn't commit to mandating it, she said she expects Oregon's students to be in classrooms full time in the fall.

"I've been really clear, it is my expectation that we will have kids in school five days a week in the fall. Obviously, the virus makes the timeline," Brown said.

Monday marks the deadline for Oregon schools to bring students back to the classroom for at least part-time in-person instruction. Earlier this month, and Oregonian/OregonLive analysis showed vast differences between how much in-class time schools and districts were offering their students during hybrid learning schedules.

That wasn't the only disparity health officials addressed Friday.

Brown and OHA Director Patrick Allen also acknowledged the unevenness of the state's vaccine rollout, with wealthier ZIP codes seeing generally higher rates of vaccination than others.

"This has been a nationwide phenomenon, and part of the challenge is people of means have got more ways to be able to access vaccines than others do," Allen said. "And that's a headwind that we're running into."

What's more, the vaccine rollout has been disproportionate along racial and ethnic lines, especially among the state's Latino population.

OHA faced criticism

Thursday from a group of Latino leaders concerned about the state's lack of effort at vaccinating that population. The group pointed to state statistics showing that, while about 13% of the state's population is Latino, only about 6% of those vaccinated are.

Allen said Friday the state's made efforts at outreach to the population specifically through federally qualified health centers, community based organizations and the prioritization of migrant farm workers for vaccines.

But Allen agreed there was more to be done.

"The numbers are stark and clear: For too many people, race and income are predictors of whether you can access a COVID vaccine or not," Allen said. "As a state, we can and need to do better."

Allen also said the state's future vaccine supplies still remain uncertain, as the federal government continues a review of the Johnson & Johnson vaccine it paused Tuesday.

The officials said Friday a continued need for safety precautions like masking, social distancing and vaccinating — even among young people and others at low risk for the virus, who make up a large share of the state's new virus cases.

"Getting enough people vaccinated to achieve community immunity may take many months, but will happen more quickly, and we can keep the virus from overtaking it, if we remain faithful to the public health interventions," Sidelinger said.

Van Slyke honored by Douglas County

On April 9, the Douglas County Board of Commissioners officially changed the name of the Douglas County Parks, Umpqua Dunes OHV Staging Area in Winchester Bay to the “Dan Van Slyke OHV Staging Area County Park” during a special dedication and ribbon-cutting ceremony honoring the former commissioner.

Van Slyke is a former Douglas County commissioner, serving from 2003-2006, whose passion and determination during his tenure resulted in the coordination and transfer of state and federally owned land to the county for management in 2004, and the subsequent development of a dedicated OHV access corridor on the dunes (Umpqua Sand Dunes Recreational Area); creation of a quiet space between the corridor and neighboring residents; an OHV accessible campground and a paved ‘launching pad’ staging area for OHVs. The staging area allows riders to park, unload their off-road vehicles and head to the Oregon Dunes National Recreation Area without having to ride along Salmon Harbor Drive.

Commissioner Tom Kress presided over the dedication ceremony and said, “Development of the Winchester Bay area has long been a priority for the Douglas County commissioners. The infrastructure projects, improvements and investments in the last 25 years have definitely shaped the economic vitality of our coastal communities and businesses, created recreational opportunities that are second to none, improved the safety of the roads and provided a destination for tourists. We owe a lot of gratitude to Dan for his vision of what this area could become nearly 20 years ago, and that is why we have chosen to dedicate this area to him today.”

The dedication ceremony featured the unveiling of the new sign at the staging area and was attended by all three Douglas County commissioners, Tom Kress, Tim Freeman and Chris Boice; Douglas County Sheriff John Hanlin, Undersheriff Jeff Frieze, Douglas County Parks Director Rocky Houston, Douglas County Sheriff’s Office deputies, Douglas County

Parks Department staff, Former Douglas County Commissioner Doug Robertson, Dan Van Slyke and his wife Tracee and several members of their family.

The dedication ceremony comes on the heels of a Douglas County Park expansion project at the OHV Staging Area, which essentially doubles the capacity (now 37 spots) for the staging and parking of Off-Highway Vehicle trailers and trucks seeking access to the Umpqua Dunes portion of the Oregon Dunes National Recreation Area. The project is set to be completed in the next few weeks.

Prior to 2004, the access corridor and staging area did not exist, and county commissioners were concerned about the safety of both OHV riders and passenger vehicles utilizing the main road between Salmon Harbor and the dunes at the same time. The commissioners were looking for a way to resolve the access problem and work with local residents and businesses, while still keeping the dunes area open for recreational access, at a time when the state was considering shutting it all down. There were many hurdles, including multiple jurisdictions and the maze of rules and restrictions that needed to be transferred or changed. But, Van Slyke, a county commissioner at the time, gladly took on the challenge that would ultimately improve access to the dunes and provide a benefit for both the county and the private business sector as well. For more than a year, he made it his mission to find a resolution, and when it was all said and done, Van Slyke had negotiated and worked out a solution with local businesses, the state, the governor, the Forest Service, the Coast Guard, the BLM and even the Department of Defense, and of course all of law enforcement agencies with responsibilities in the area. Van Slyke’s business background was in the private sector, and he also understood how important it was for the county to make every effort to work closely with the various private entities in the area, especially the RV park that was adjacent to the dunes recreational area.

Former Douglas County Commissioner Doug Robertson also joined the dedication ceremony and commented, “What we see here today is the result of Dan’s vision, leadership and commitment. Not just to improve the access and safety for the public, but to do it by recognizing the importance and value of the Government working with the private sector for the benefit of all involved.”

SWOCC announces commencement plans

Southwestern Oregon Community College’s 2021 commencement ceremony will take place at noon Friday, June 11, in an online format. The college’s virtual ceremony will be available for viewing on several different platforms. Join Southwestern through its LiveStream website feature by going to <https://livestream.com/accounts/1075958> at the designated time. The video ceremony will also be available via Southwestern’s Facebook page (www.facebook.com/swocc) or YouTube channel (<https://www.youtube.com/user/socccvideo/>).

Southwestern is especially proud to be celebrating the 2021 graduates who have persevered under very stressful and difficult times. This year the college is pleased to honor a total of 351 graduates from 18 states and five countries.

Degrees being awarded are:

- 141 associate of arts Oregon transfer
- 131 associate of applied science
- 31 associate of general studies
- 46 associate of science
- 80 certificates of completion (one year)

Southwestern also congratulates 14 local high school students who acquired their associate degrees at the same time they were getting their high school diplomas.

Southwestern’s University Center congratulates 23 graduates receiving advanced degrees: 18 bachelor, and five masters. These degrees come from Southwestern’s partnership with Easter Oregon University, Southern Oregon University and Oregon State University.

Included in this year’s graduates are two master of arts in teaching and three bachelor of science in education studies (elementary teacher licensing candidates).

Additional information can be found on the graduation webpage located at <https://www.socc.edu/graduation> or contact the Admissions Office at 541-888-7636.

OHA seeks input on which beaches to monitor in 2021

Oregon Health Authority’s Beach Monitoring Program invites public comment on a list of beaches it is proposing to monitor this summer.

The OHA Oregon Beach Monitoring Program works with the Oregon Department of Environmental Quality to pick beaches that need monitoring based on established criteria. These criteria include pollution hazards present; previous beach monitoring data that identify water quality concerns; type and amount of beach use; and public input.

As part of a flexible sampling plan, beaches and sampling locations are routinely re-evaluated to ensure available resources best protect public health. Based on OBMP’s evaluation criteria, the following list contains the proposed beaches for 2021 monitoring season; a copy of DEQ’s beach evaluation is available upon request:

- SEASIDE BEACH – Seaside, Oregon – Clatsop County
- SEAL ROCK BEACH – Seal Rock, Oregon – Lincoln County
- HECETA BEACH – Florence, Oregon – Lane County
- BASTENDORFF BEACH – Coos Bay, Oregon – Coos County
- SUNSET BAY SP BEACH – Coos Bay, Oregon – Coos County
- HUBBARD CREEK BEACH – Port Orford, Oregon – Curry County
- HARRIS BEACH SP – Brookings, Oregon – Curry County
- MILL BEACH – Brookings, Oregon – Curry County

The proposed list includes some of the most frequently visited beaches in Oregon, beaches where the program has found bacteria present, or beaches for which local partners and the public have requested monitoring due to potential pollution concerns.

OBMP will accept public comments and suggestions on the proposed 2021 beaches through April 26, 2021. Contact OBMP by email at Beach.Health@state.or.us or call 971-673-0400 to submit input.

GUEST COLUMN

Congressional Democrats to Biden: Pour some SALT on that infrastructure

By THOMAS L. KNAPP

As the debate over President Joe Biden’s infrastructure proposals heats up, Roll Call reports that “[a] new caucus pressing for repeal of the $10,000 limitation on state and local tax deductions boasts the support of more than one-third of Democrats on the House Ways and Means Committee.”

The SALT cap, implemented when Donald Trump was president and the GOP still held congressional majorities, is a “man bites dog” issue that places Democrats and Republicans opposite their usual supposed sides.

Simply put, the SALT deduction allows you to deduct state and local taxes from your “gross adjusted” income for federal tax purposes. The SALT cap limits those deductions to $10,000 per year.

Republicans usually posture as advocates of low taxes, especially on the upper end of the income scale, reasoning from the Reagan-era “supply side” (or what Democrats sardonically call “trickle-down”) premise that doing so encourages investment and creates “a rising tide that lifts all boats.”

Democrats usually advocate making wealthier Americans pick up “their fair share” of government’s tab, a “fair share” they tend to define as bigger, both in raw numbers and as income percentages, for the wealthier (Republicans sardonically call it “soaking the rich”).

When it comes to the SALT cap, though, the parties (mostly - New York congresswoman Alexandria Ocasio-Cortez is a notable exception to the rule) switch sides, and some are willing to hold the infrastructure deal hostage over it.

Pausing Oregon State Hospital admissions would violate rights of people with mental illness

On Thursday, Disability Rights Oregon and Metropolitan Public Defenders filed a motion in court to stop Oregon State Hospital from pausing admissions until April 26. The advocates warned that a pause would result in a rise in the number of people with mental illness in Oregon who wait in jail indefinitely for treatment in violation of their Constitutional rights. OSH claimed a pause in admissions was necessary to stem a surge in patients found to not have the mental capacity to stand trial — what is called “aid and assist.”

Nearly 20 years ago, DRO and MPD won a landmark civil rights case, Oregon Advocacy Center v. Mink, that sought to end the practice of people were found unable to assist in their defense waiting months in jail to receive court-ordered mental health treatment. The Ninth Circuit ruled the state hospital must accept defendants within seven days after an individual has been ordered for treatment to be able to face the charges against them.

Two people in the Coos County Jail are included in a group waiting for admission into the state hospital. One individual made the request April 2 and is waiting for admission. The second signed up to enter the OSH on April 9. Another person in the Curry County Jail signed to be admitted April 6.

“The cause of this problem and the solution are one in the same: the urgent need to build a community mental health system,” said Jake Cornett, executive director of Disability Rights Oregon. “Too many people with mental illness are being ensnared in the criminal justice system for low level offenses because of a lack of supports and resources for people with mental illness in the community. The state hospital is not discharging those individuals back into their communities fast enough because of a scarcity of community mental health resources. The failure of the state to build community-based treatment for individuals with mental illness is not a justification for denying people their constitutional rights.”

For people with mental illness, time spent in jail can substantially worsen mental health conditions. Jails are not equipped with adequate healthcare staffing or treatment. Solitary is the default placement in jail for people with mental health issues.

Why? Because an unlimited SALT deduction means that state governments get a sort of free ride on their own tax rates. A wealthy New Yorker or Californian who pays, say, $50,000 in state taxes can knock that $50,000 off of her federal taxable income.

The $10,000 SALT cap might encourage that wealthy New Yorker or Californian to consider moving out of New York or California, to a state with lower taxes (Florida or Texas, for example) and taking her prospective state tax payments with her.

It’s no accident that the two high-tax states I mention are “blue” Democratic states and the two low-tax states are “red” Republican states. The two parties’ tax philosophies are, generally speaking, mirrored at the state level.

The ability to move between states is way of “pricing” tax policy. Too high, people move out. Low enough, people move in. The SALT cap encourages people and their wealth to move from “blue” states to “red” states.

It’s shouldn’t surprise anyone that in this case, the Republican line becomes “make them pay their fair share!” while the Democratic line becomes “not like THAT!”

I don’t like taxes. You probably don’t either. But if we’re going to have them, federal tax policy shouldn’t be manipulated to artificially benefit tax-happy state governments. The SALT deduction shouldn’t be capped. It should be eliminated.

Thomas L. Knapp (Twitter: @thomaslknapp) is director and senior news analyst at the William Lloyd Garrison Center for Libertarian Advocacy Journalism (thegarri-soncenter.org). He lives and works in north central Florida.

Carl Macpherson, executive director of MPD, also explained what this means for each individual in jail: “Every day, public defenders see the suffering of our clients who struggle with mental illness. The pain and effect of serious mental illness is exacerbated for people who are incarcerated without services. Extending the suffering and incarceration without help is not acceptable.”

In 2002, the federal district court found that Oregon individuals whose mental capacity made them unable to aid and assist their counsel waited in jail an average of roughly 32 days for transport to the state hospital. More than a decade and a half later, 16 individuals are waiting longer than seven days with an additional 14 people and counting who will wait in jail for court ordered mental health services.

DRO has long advocated for expanded local mental health treatment for Oregonians found unable to aid and assist. Helping people with mental illness meet their most basic needs — like health care, housing, food and transportation — creates a foundation from which they can stay healthy over the long run. Treatment to help defendants with mental illness become healthy enough to stand trial is available in only a handful of communities in Oregon.

THERE IS A CHANCE THAT THIS VACCINE MAY HAVE SIDE EFFECTS, LIKE HAVING NO EXCUSE TO AVOID FUNCTIONAL ENGAGEMENT IN SOCIETY.

Is of really needed in English?

By JUNE CASAGRANDE

For a tiny word, “of” causes a lot of trouble. It pops up where it doesn’t belong in sentences like “I should of known.” It baffles even word-savvy users in expressions like “too big of a deal.” And it has an uncanny power to promote wordy, inefficient prose.

If you grew up speaking English, you never really had to learn “of.” Unlike “photosynthesis” or “germylander” or “noun” or any other word that teachers actively teach, “of” is so fundamental to the language that we can use it intuitively almost as soon as we start stringing sentences together.

A lot of English speakers probably don’t know that “of” is a preposition. Most of us couldn’t give a good definition for it. And most of us, if we ever looked it up in a dictionary, would struggle to understand what we were reading. For example, here’s the first definition of “of” in Merriam-Webster’s: “used as a function word to indicate a point of reckoning: ‘north of the lake.’” Here’s definition two: “used as a function word to indicate origin or derivation: ‘a man of noble birth.’”

When you think about how poorly we understand “of,” it’s amazing we can use it at all. No wonder we stumble sometimes.

“Could of,” “should of” and “would of” are common errors, as in “I could of been injured” or “I should of gotten the job.” These are understandable mistakes, considering that the correct contractions, “could’ve,” “should’ve” and “would’ve” sound identical. But don’t expect a lot of sympathy if you get these wrong. Usage guides use terms like “partly educated” and “semiliterate” to describe this use of “of” in place of “have.” And when writers use “of” this way on purpose, it’s usually in dialogue to show a character is uneducated. An example from “The Great Gatsby”: “If I hadn’t met Chester he’d of got me sure.”

Terms like “too big of a deal” are harder. Well-educated people use this structure all the time. “I don’t want to be considered too good of a loser,” New York Mayor Ed Koch once said. “How big of a carrier task force?” news anchor Jim Lehrer once asked. “It won’t be that long of a speech” shortstop Pee Wee Reese said in 1984. In all these cases, the “of” can go. Koch would have done better with “too good a loser.” Lehrer could have asked “how big a carrier task force?” A speech that doesn’t go on forever is “not that long a speech.”

I suspect “much of” adds to the confusion. “Much of” is usually correct. You don’t want too much of a good thing.” “I haven’t seen much of him lately.” “He’s not much of a singer.” So, when we want to say “too long a” or “how big a,” our experience with “much” makes it seem natural to put “of” in there.

But they’re not the same. In “much of,” the word “much” is a noun. But those flubs with “of” all involve an adjective — big, long, good, etc. Also, “much” has an idiomatic relationship with “of,” as do “most,” “many,” “few” and similar nouns.

Not sure if you need your “of”? Try taking it out. If “not too long a speech” sounds right, that’s because it is. If “I haven’t seen much him lately” sounds wrong, which it is, put “of” back in.

Finally, “of” can be a red flag for wordy, inefficient writing. “By the mid-1980s, many of these politicians were seen as a big part of the problem not only in terms of poor economic performance but also in terms of political authoritarianism,” noted a 1996 article in the Journal of Asian and African Studies. Garner’s Modern American Usage shows how to revise this sentence, cutting all but one “of” while also cutting the word count: “By the mid-1980s, many of these politicians were seen as having contributed to the problem both through poor economic performance and through political authoritarianism.”

Watch for too many “ofs,” especially in the expression “in terms of.” If you see them, just look for ways to make the sentence better.

On Earth Day, April 22, winning photos from Wild Rivers Land Trust’s inaugural photo contest will be exhibited at Coos Bay/North Bend Visitors Center — 50 Central Ave., Coos Bay, and Coos History Museum — 1210 N. Front St., Coos Bay. The shows will run through the end of May. You can view and purchase all the winning photos on our website: <https://www.wildriverslandtrust.org/photo-contest.html>

This event was designed to help share the natural abundance of wildlife on private lands along the southern Oregon coast. The 2020 Wild Rivers Land Trust Outdoor Photography Contest paired regional private landowners with wildlife photographers for a friendly competition showcasing water, land, wildlife and plants found on the Oregon South Coast. The contest teamed each photographer with a landowner who competed with other teams to photograph a diversity of wildlife, plants and scenery.

The first of its kind on the Oregon Coast, WRLT plans to expand the event in 2021. In 2020, the prize purse was $3,500 for the winning teams, over seven categories, split evenly between the landowner and the photographer on the team. It is modeled after a successful long running event in Texas.

2020 Teams

- Bandon Dunes Golf Resort with photographer Steve Dimock
- Camp Myrtle Wood with photographer Steve Holt
- Chisolm Ranch Coquille with photographer Michael Sherman
- Collier Farm with photographer Peter Pearsall
- LaBelle Retreat with photographer Kara Long
- Pistol River Ranch with photographer Steve Miller
- Wahl Ranch with photographer Rowland Willis

Many thanks to our 2020 sponsors: Wild Rivers Coast Alliance, Travel Southern Oregon Coast and Wild Rivers Land Trust. Sponsorships will be available for our 2021 contest and include opportunities to display and or purchase winning images and help us expand the event and its positive impact in the future. Deadly virus now confirmed in feral domestic rabbits

The USDA Foreign Animal Disease Diagnostic Laboratory has confirmed rabbit hemorrhagic disease in a feral domestic rabbit collected in La Pine on April 9. While the virus is highly contagious among rabbit populations and can spread through contact with infected rabbits, it poses no human health risk. The virus is only known to infect rabbits and hares.

This confirmation comes a few weeks after the same virus, RHDV2, was found in a feral domestic rabbit found dead in Milwaukie, a suburb of Portland.

RHD is a viral disease that causes sudden death in rabbits. It is resistant to extreme temperatures and can survive in the environment for months under certain conditions. The virus spreads through direct contact between infected and susceptible live rabbits or exposure to contaminated materials (carcasses, pelts, food, water, forage, etc.). Birds, rodents, flies, predators, and scavengers can spread this virus via their feces, fur/feathers or feces without becoming infected themselves. People can spread the virus indirectly by carrying it on their clothing, hands and shoes.

The Oregon Department of Agriculture and the Oregon Department of Fish and Wildlife is asking the public to voluntarily stop the transport of rabbits at this time. The releasing of a pet or domestically raised rabbit and allowing them to wander uncaged in neighborhoods or in the wild is unlawful (ORS 498.0520) and could further spread disease to wild rabbits and significantly impact wildlife rabbit and hare populations. Oregon is unique in the diversity of rabbit and hare species and habitats these populations occupy (<https://myodfw.com/wild-life-viewing/species/pikas-rabbits-and-hares>). However, three species are particularly vulnerable populations and

- are identified as Oregon Conservation Strategy Species.
- Please report rabbit mortalities to track the virus's presence and movement. Call 1-800-347-7028 or visit <https://oda.direct/RHD> to report domestic or wild rabbits suspected to have died from RHDV2.
- Following are some tips to avoid spreading the RHD virus:
- For those raising domestic rabbits:
- Minimize exposure to wild rabbits and hares by keeping your rabbits in hutches or cages that are elevated off the ground.
 - Keep pet rabbits inside to avoid exposure to environments potentially contaminated by wild/feral rabbits or by people, vehicles or implements that can spread the disease.
 - Do not allow your rabbits to graze or roam in a yard if wild rabbits are present in your area.
 - Restrict visitors to your rabbitry and limit the handling of the animals by visitors.
 - Avoid transporting or importing domestic rabbits.
 - After visiting a show, fair or meeting where rabbits were commingled, shower and change clothes before handling your rabbits.
 - Quarantine new rabbits away from existing ones for 30 days.
 - Know the health status of the rabbitry from which you purchase rabbits.
 - Keep dogs, coyotes, insects, birds, rodents and other animals away from your rabbits, as they may carry disease.
 - Be aware of the state's rabbit disease status or country of origin of any equipment or supplies you are purchasing.
 - Wash and disinfect hands, clothing, gloves, footwear, cages, and equipment between rabbits from different sources. (RHDV is inactivated by 10% bleach to water solution.)
- Immediately contact ODA (800-347-7028) if you suspect RHD or have sick or freshly dead rabbits.
- For hunters:
- If sick or dead rabbits are observed in an area, do not hunt, run dogs or fly falconry birds in that area. Contact ODFW immediately at 866-968-2600.
 - Avoid hunting in areas in states where RHDV-2 outbreaks have been recently documented. Contact the state wildlife agency where you will be hunting for information on where RHDV-2 has been identified.
 - After handling wild rabbits, wash hands and change clothing and footwear before handling or caring for domestic rabbits.
 - Do not eat, drink or smoke while handling animals.
 - Wear rubber, nitrile or disposable latex gloves while handling and cleaning the game. Wash hands thoroughly with warm water and soap or sanitizer after handling the game. Disinfect all knives, equipment and surfaces that were in contact with the game.
 - Thoroughly cook all game to an internal temperature of 165°F.
 - Do not feed game meat from wildlife that appears sick, are found dead or test positive for a contagious disease to people or pets, including falconry birds.
 - Avoid transporting live wild rabbits for release into training pens or field trials, mainly if sick or dead rabbits have been observed in the area.
- Carcass Handling
- If you find a dead rabbit:
- Wear disposable gloves when handling rabbit carcasses.
 - Double bag carcasses and spray outside of the bag with disinfectant.
 - Wash hands with soap and warm water after handling carcasses and removing gloves. Dispose of gloves in trash headed to a landfill.

Senate passes COVID tenant protections

The COVID Tenant Protection bill passed the Senate Thursday with a strong bipartisan vote of 25-5 after a workgroup of tenant advocates and landlords came together on the legislation. SB 282A will provide protections for renters facing COVID-era financial challenges after the eviction moratorium ends June 30, and give renters certainty that they will not be evicted this summer if they owe back rent.

Members of both parties spoke in favor of the bill.

“We need to ensure that tenants and housing providers can avail themselves of the assistance available, so we can avoid an eviction cliff,” said Sen. Anderson, (R-Lincoln City) while urging a yes vote.

There is rental assistance available now and more will be available soon with the distribution of funds from the American Rescue Plan. Renters who need assistance should dial 211 or contact <https://www.211info.org/> or their local Community Action Center.

Sen. Kayse Jama, (D-Portland), who led the successful workgroup process, said, “Imagine you are a mother of four and you lost your job and you’re not able to pay your rent. Imagine that and how difficult it is. This is a reality of Oregonians, regardless of which district they live in or whether they are urban or rural. This is a moment where all Oregonians need to step up - and this body needs to step up - to protect all Oregonians,”

Summary of SB 282:

- Extend the repayment grace period for back-due rent to February 28, 2022, and continue temporarily an extended non-payment termination notice. While renters must make timely payment of current rent after July 1, this will give renters extra time to access rent assistance funds or earn income to get caught up on back-due rent from the moratorium period.

- Protect tenants’ ability to rent in the future.
 - Prohibit potential landlords from screening out applicants based on COVID-era evictions and allow sealing of evictions during COVID from a tenant’s record.
 - Prohibit credit history reports on any late payments during the moratorium and prohibit landlords from screening out tenants based on nonpayment during the eviction moratorium and grace period.
- Protect the right to share resources in a crisis. Prohibit eviction for doubling-up occupancy limits imposed by landlords that are narrower than current law, during the COVID period when people have had to share housing due to the pandemic and wildfires.
- Protect against landlord retaliation. Temporarily extend HB 4401’s increased damages provision for retaliation violations during the COVID era.

“There is incredible worry among renters that they will lose their homes without more time to catch up after COVID,” says Sybil Hebb of the Oregon Law Center. “SB 282A will protect people’s homes while also ensuring that people’s rental record won’t be permanently harmed due to the pandemic’s massive job and income loss that affected so many Oregonians. We are very hopeful it will move quickly through the House.”

Oregon House Democrats pass bill protecting survival activities in public spaces

On Thursday, House Democrats passed House Bill 3115, which will ensure that individuals experiencing homelessness are protected from fines or arrest for sleeping or camping on public property when there are no other options.

Without adequate alternatives like housing, shelter and safe camping spaces, some Oregonians are left with no option but to sleep outside in public spaces – in a park, under an overpass or wherever they can find shelter and safety.

In 2019, the federal court ruling in the case of Martin v. City of Boise required local governments to reconsider how they treat people who are experiencing homelessness. The court found that “as long as there is no option of sleeping indoors, the government cannot criminalize indigent, homeless people for sleeping outdoors, on public property, on the false premise they had a choice in the matter.”

Plainly, local governments cannot adopt ordinances that criminalize homelessness when no alternative is made available. HB 3115 operationalizes the principles of that landmark decision.

“Even prior to the challenges brought on by the pandemic, local governments didn’t have enough shelter space for everyone who needed it, let alone enough permanent affordable housing options,” said House Speaker Tina Kotek (D- North Portland). “This bill is one piece of a much bigger effort to address Oregon’s housing crisis by increasing the state’s supply of affordable housing, supporting Oregonians who are experiencing homelessness, preventing evictions and foreclosures and reducing housing disparities for communities of color.”

House Bill 3115 affirms a key principle of current case law: if a city chooses to regulate “survival activities” like sitting, lying, sleeping or keeping warm and dry, those laws must be reasonable. They must take into account the resources available to houseless individuals and the impact of the regulations on persons experiencing homelessness. This statutory framework will also protect individuals experiencing homelessness from fines or arrest for sleeping or camping on public property when there are no other options.

FEMA will provide financial aid for COVID funeral costs

U.S. Sens. Ron Wyden and Jeff Merkley recently announced that FEMA is providing financial assistance for eligible COVID-19 related funeral expenses incurred after January 20, 2020, in Oregon and nationwide.

“The COVID-19 global pandemic has left thousands of families throughout our state and country shouldering the financial burden of end-of-life care while grieving the losses of their loved ones,” Wyden said. “The critical financial support from FEMA for funeral costs hopefully will ease some of that financial burden and allow Oregonians to focus on grieving the loss of loved ones.”

“The pandemic has taken a heavy toll on communities in Oregon and across the country. The last thing families should have to worry about is how they’re going to pay for the funeral of a loved one as they grapple with the grief of sudden loss,” Merkley said. “Help is here: FEMA is opening up a new program to reimburse people for COVID-related funeral expenses. For Oregonians who have lost a loved one to COVID and incurred funeral expenses, I encourage you to apply.”

The COVID-19 Funeral Assistance Line Number is 844-684-6333 | TTY: 800-462-7585

Applications began this week with calls being accepted Monday – Friday from 6 a.m. to 6 p.m. Pacific time. Multilingual services are available.

CAN YOU ADJUST YOUR CAMERA SO I'M NOT LOOKING UP YOUR NOSE?

OKAY, NOW CAN YOU ADJUST YOUR LIGHTING SO YOU DON'T LOOK LIKE A LIGHTBULB WITH A BEARD?

HOW'S MY AUDIO?

IT'S AS GOOD AS YOUR IDEAS.

CLASSIC PEANUTS

I DON'T WANT YOU TO HIT ANY OVER MY HEAD, DO YOU HEAR?

AND DON'T HIT ANY WAY OUT IN FRONT OF ME, EITHER! I WANT YOU TO HIT 'EM RIGHT TO ME!

BONK!

ALL RIGHT, THEN LET'S TRY HITTING 'EM A LITTLE TO ONE SIDE...

FRANK AND ERNEST

I SHOULDN'T HAVE SPENT A THOUSAND DOLLARS ON AN ESPRESSO MACHINE.

COFFEE KEEPING FRANK UP AT NIGHT

WEDNESDAY

DILBERT

I'M NOT FEELING WELL, SO I'M GOING TO TAKE THE DAY OFF FROM WORK.

YOU WORK AT HOME, AND YOU'LL BE JUST AS SICK WHETHER YOU WORK OR NOT, SO WHY NOT WORK?

I DON'T KNOW IF YOU KNOW THIS ABOUT ME, BUT I DON'T LIKE WORKING.

CLASSIC PEANUTS

PRACTICE?! WHY DO WE HAVE TO PRACTICE? WE NEVER WIN ANY GAMES...

WHAT ARE WE GONNA DO, PRACTICE OUR LOSING?!

THAT WAS JUST A LITTLE JOKE!

FRANK AND ERNEST

I NEVER THOUGHT I'D SAY THIS, BUT IT'S GREAT TO SEE SOME FAN INTERFERENCE.

Track season starts

In a normal year, icebreaker often is a fitting name for the first track meet of the season, when the weather is cold, rainy or both.

In 2021, when the track season started a month later than normal, the term icebreaker wasn't at all a fitting descriptive word for the season-opening meet Friday when Marshfield hosted North Bend in balmy conditions.

The teams also put up some solid marks, given that the meet came less than two weeks after the first practice of the season, with multiple athletes from each school winning more than one event.

For the boys, North Bend's Roman Fritz had a solid opening mark in the javelin, with a winning throw of 173 feet, 7 inches, and also took the shot put (39-6). Teammate Alex Garcia-Silver raced to impressive wins in both distance races, taking the 1,500 meters in 4 minutes and 17.52 seconds and the 3,000 in 9:31.44.

Marshfield's Sam Grayson won both the high jump (5-6) and 100 (11.93).

For the girls, Marshfield's Mira Matthews nearly was a triple winner, taking the shot put (31-8 ½) and javelin (108-8) and finishing second to North Bend's Alexis Hampton in the discus (105-7). Hampton's winning throw was 112-2. Teammate Sydnee Trendell won both the 100 hurdles (21.06) and 300 hurdles (59.04).

North Bend's Randee Cunningham won both the long jump at 14-9 and triple jump 32-3 ½.

North Bend teammate Celeste Le won the 100 (13.84) and 200 (29.02) and Sara Slade took the 1,500 (5:28.81) and 3,000 (11:50.85).

SPRING OPENER: Bandon swept the team titles in the 10-school meet at Reedsport on Friday.

Bandon's boys won seven of the 14 events while amassing 102.5 points to easily beat runner-up Myrtle Point (80) and Yoncalla (69).

Bandon's girls only won five events (one a shared title), but had enough other high finishes to score 89 points. Myrtle Point had 77.5 and North Douglas 67.

Coquille, Powers, Gold Beach and Pacific also were at the meet.

Ansen Converse won both the 1,500 (4:33.5) and 3,000 (10:09.1) for Bandon, which also got wins by Owen Brown in the pole vault (12-6), Trevor Angove in the triple jump (43-11), Andrew Robertson in the 400 (57.0), Charlie Ells in the 800 (2:17.3) and the 4x400 relay.

Myrtle Point's Troy Warner won the long jump (20-9 ½) and tied for first in the 100 (all races were hand-timed) with a mark of 11.7.

For the girls, Bandon got wins by Olivia Thompson in the pole vault (9-0), Cassie Kennon in the 1,500 (5:48.8) and Holly Hutton in the 300 hurdles (53.3) as well as by the 4x400 relay. Analeis Miller tied Trinity Blanton of Powers in the high jump, both clearing 4-4.

Joy DeRoss of Camas Valley had a huge throw in the discus (144-3) and also won the shot put (33-6 ¾). Elkton's Margaret Byle won the 200 (27.9) and 400 (104.8) and Myrtle Point's Sarah Nicholson took the 800 (2:37.2) and 3,000 (12:07.1).

NB girls pick up tennis victories over Lancers, Crusaders

THE WORLD

North Bend's girls tennis team picked up its second win of the young season Thursday, beating Churchill 7-1. The Bulldogs also topped St. Mary's of Medford on Saturday 6-2.

The Bulldogs won three of the four singles matches and swept the doubles matches against Churchill.

North Bend's first two wins went to three sets, with Maja Hartmann overcoming a first-set loss to take the No. 1 singles match and Molly Richcreek winning the second set.

Haley Reeves also won for North Bend at No. 3 singles.

All of the doubles matches went to North Bend in straight sets.

Adrianna Frank and Olivia Knutson teamed for the win at No. 1 doubles and the pairs of Chelsea Gould and Madeline Groth, Emily West and Madison West, and Chloe Moore and Trinity Barker also won.

Against St. Mary's, Hartmann and Reeves won their singles matches and the Bulldogs swept the doubles matches with the same pairings as against Churchill.

THE WORLD

North Bend got a spectacular pitching performance from Brylee Anderson and beat visiting Creswell 10-0 in five innings at Clyde Allen Field in North Bend's season opener Friday.

Anderson pitched a one-hitter with no walks, facing just 16 batters and striking out eight. Anderson threw first-pitch strikes to 15 of the hitters and never got to a three-ball count against any batter.

"It was nice," North Bend coach Brad Horning said, adding there was little to be critical of with Anderson's outing.

Anderson also had two hits and two runs and drive in a run. Chase Platt had two hits and an RBI and Daylen Brown, Bridger Holmes, Hunter Wheeling and Knoll Gederos also had hits for North Bend.

North Bend led just 3-0 until scoring seven runs in the bottom of the fifth, when Creswell's pitchers started struggling to find the plate. North Bend had four walks and three hit batters in that inning.

The game-ending run came on one of those, when Anderson walked to bring in fellow senior Brendan West.

PIRATES, TIGERS SPLIT: Marshfield's baseball team split a Sky-Em League doubleheader at Junction City on Friday, winning a wild opener 11-10 before losing 9-5 in the nightcap, shorted to five innings due to darkness.

Marshfield took an 11-4 lead with seven runs in the top of the sixth inning in the opener and then had to hold on as Junction City scored six runs in the bottom of the half.

Wyatt Peck had a home run and scored two runs in the opener. DJ Daugherty had a double and triple and scored two runs, Drake Rogers had a double and three RBIs, Dom Montiel had two runs and two RBIs and Luke Parry drove in two runs and scored once.

Jaxson Fraser had a pair of solo home runs for Junction City.

Landon Croff pitched the first 5 1/3 innings for Marshfield, striking out eight.

Marshfield jumped out to a 4-0 lead in the first inning of the nightcap, but Junction City scored five runs in the third and three in the fourth to build the lead. The game was called after Marshfield was out in the top of the fifth and there wasn't enough daylight to guarantee another inning.

Rogers had a home run and Montiel had two hits and two RBIs in the second game. Waterman had two hits. Peck had a pair of runs.

REEDSPORT 16, COQUILLE

11: Reedsport had a big day hitting the ball in its season opener, a victory at Coquille on Friday morning.

"We had some young kids hit the ball really well today," Reedsport coach Jason Lavigne said.

Sophomore Gabe Foster had three hits including a home run, freshman JB Noel had a double and two singles, junior John Train had a triple and two singles, junior Derek Johnson had a triple and single, and freshmen Cody Schuttpelz and Kenny Gould each had two hits, with Gould driving in four runs for the Brave.

Lakers sweep Storm

THE WORLD

The Southwestern Oregon Community College softball team improved to 5-1 in South Region play by sweeping a doubleheader against visiting Chemeketa on Friday, led by a big day at the plate by McKenna Marshall. .

The Lakers won the opener 8-6 and the nightcap 9-1.

Brittany Bye had a solo home run and Marshall had a double, two singles and three RBIs in the opener.

Rheanna Russo, had a double and single and Elizabeth Cornejo also had two hits, with each scoring a run and driving in a run. SWOCC's eight runs all came from separate players.

The Lakers led the nightcap 2-1 before exploding for seven runs in the sixth inning.

Marshall had four more hits, including a home run and double, scored three runs and drove in three others.

Samantha Mansfield and Brooklynn Cox had two hits each and Hannah Tennant and Russo drove in two runs.

Alyssa Smokey pitched a complete hitter, allowing six hits but giving up just one run.

The Lakers improved to 14-2 overall with the wins.

They played at Chemeketa on Sunday and are home this weekend for a pair of double-headers against Mount Hood on Friday and Saturday.

VOLLEYBALL

The Lakers lost a pair of matches to Rogue, swept both times.

In the home match, SWOCC fell 25-17, 25-22, 25-21. Amanda Clark had eight kills, Halen Riness added 21 assists and two aces and Maegan Grogan had nine digs.

In the match at Grants Pass, the Ospreys beat the Lakers 25-14, 25-14, 25-22. Tayler Parks had seven kills, Riness had 13 assists and Grogan had 12 digs.

The Lakers, now 4-4, host Clackamas on Wednesday and visit the Cougars on Friday.

SOCCER

The SWOCC women suffered their first loss of the season last weekend when they fell 2-0 to Lane in Eugene.

The Lakers visit Clackamas on Friday.

Recap

From A12

“We hit the ball well, but struggled throwing strikes,” Lavigne said. “It’s a young team with a lot of talent.”

BANDON 14, TOLEDO 11: Colton Siewell had two hits, three walks and three RBIs and pitched the last four innings as the Tigers came from behind to beat the Boomers.

Cooper Lang and Wyer Dyatt both had triples for the Tigers.

“There was a lot of fight for our guys in a six-run comeback, but our defense was awful,” Bandon coach Jay Farrell said.

GOLD BEACH 10, MYRTLE POINT 7: The Panthers opened the season with a road win.

SOFTBALL

PIRATES TAKE TWO: Marshfield won a pair of high-scoring games at Junction City on Friday, taking the opener 16-6 and the nightcap 19-3.

The Vikings will try to keep their win streak going when they visit Siuslaw on Tuesday.

COQUILLE 5, REEDSPORT 2: Coquille beat visiting Reedsport on Friday.

MYRTLE POINT 12, GOLD BEACH 11: The Bobcats edged the visiting Panthers for their first win of the season.

TOLEDO 10, BANDON 4: The Tigers fell in their Sunset Conference opener on the road.

Beloved SWOCC coach Walker dies

JOHN GUNTHER
The World

The South Coast lost one of its beloved track figures last week when Kermit Walker died after a long battle with cancer.

Walker, who was 85, made his mark on the South Coast as the jumps coach at Southwestern Oregon Community College, but he meant so much more to the community, recalled Dan Neal, his close friend and long-time SWOCC head coach.

“He just had that personality that everyone liked being around him,” Neal said.

Walker had a special bond with SWOCC’s Black athletes, because he was able to share all his experiences growing up with them.

“He was a good example for them, living through what he lived through,” Neal said.

He was raised in Oklahoma where his parents picked cotton and worked to escape that life he hated so much, Neal said.

Walker left Oklahoma to get a college education, competing at San Jose State University and eventually he earned a masters degree in business and physical education. When he first came to the South Coast in 1980, he was a commercial fisherman. His skills also included refinishing old furniture.

Walker was a good counselor and mentor for all students, and also was popular with people beyond their college years.

“He had the 50-and-over fitness class at the college,” Neal said. “It was always the highest-enrolled class we had.”

He also helped adults with their rehabilitation following injuries with exercises that might have seemed odd.

“He did these crazy exercises and leg lifts in the weight room and the kids would watch him,” Neal said. “He was the picture of fitness.”

For decades, every morning Walker did crunches, push-ups, sit-ups and leg lifts before he started his day, Neal said.

“That was the hardest thing for me, when he passed, he was just down to bones and skin,” Neal said. “The saddest thing for me was to see him have to go through that.”

Walker was known far beyond the South Coast for his longevity as an athlete himself, competing in regional masters track and field meets until the first time he was diagnosed with cancer, about five years ago.

As he moved up to each new age group, Walker was constantly in pursuit of a masters world record in either the long jump or triple jump. He never quite achieved that goal, but his athletes and community members knew of his efforts.

“The year he was going to try to break the record in the triple jump (at a masters meet in Coos Bay), they made T-shirts with his face on them,” Neal recalled.

Walker was the best in the world for his age group one year, but he was an inch or two off the record.

He jumped 29 feet in the triple jump when he was in the 75-79 age group.

Among the first people Neal called following Walker’s death were various masters athletes and other coaches from around the state.

“They had a special relationship,” Neal said.

Neal and Walker’s relationship was beyond special, if possible, since they coached together about 20 years and remained friends long after.

“I got to spend the last couple weeks with Kermit almost every day,” he said. “It was a good time. We were joking and laughing. We had great conversations.”

Perhaps surprisingly, it wasn’t track and field that initially sparked their relationship, but music.

“A friend of ours had a party at his house and everybody was playing music,” Neal said. “Kermit was playing saxophone. I was playing drums. We started playing music together.”

Walker had crossed paths with a number of top musicians over the years before Neal knew him.

“I don’t think a lot of people realize he was a great jazz musician,” Neal said.

It wasn’t until much later they realized they had a common love for track.

Neal invited Walker to help out and he started as a volunteer coach before the college was able to pay him as an instructor and later get him a coaching stipend.

Walker coached numerous NWAC champions in the jumping events and lent tips to a number of high schoolers who went on to become state champions.

Neal and Walker took SWOCC athletes to meets around the region and attended many clinics together. And whenever he had the chance, Walker was in the famed heart of Northwest track and field, the University of Oregon’s Hayward Field.

“He lived for track and field,” Neal said. “He was a Hayward Field addict. He loved to go up and perform in their masters meets.”

When he was younger, Walker was a standout in the jumps despite being relatively short.

“You look at someone that stature and you think that guy jumped 26 feet,” Neal said. “He just must have been a human spring. He triple jumped (almost) 54 feet. He was a stud athlete during the day.”

Walker even competed internationally with the U.S. National team.

Walker also was known for telling funny stories and one of Neal’s favorites was from when he competed against former long jump world record holder Bob Beamon.

“The last time I jumped against Bob Beamon, I beat him,” Neal recalled Walker saying. “I jumped 25-10 and he fouled all his preliminary jumps, so I beat him.”

Aside from competing, probably the thing Walker was best known for was his care of the long jump pit.

“It didn’t matter if it was cold, windy, rainy,” Neal said. “He wasn’t going to go home (after practice) unless the pit was spotless. He would sweep it until it was flat as a board and he would cover it.”

Walker also took to making sure the pits were prepared for every jumper at meets the Lakers competed in.

He is renowned for the phrase: “Every jumper deserves a perfect pit.”

Last December, the college named SWOCC’s long jump and triple jump pit after Walker.

“This man is a role model for all of us,” former SWOCC athletic director John Speasl said at the time. “The college, students, coaches and the community are all better for having Kermit Walker touch our lives.”

In announcing the honor for Walker, college officials said “The athletic department believes this small gesture will be a testament to his many years of service and his passion for helping student-athletes.”

Local gymnasts advance to regional championships

Aliyah White, Drew Hood, Ali Kirby and Kianna Thomas compete at big meet for first time

THE WORLD

Four athletes from Gymnastics Plus competed this weekend in Helena, Mont., against athletes from five other states in the Regional 2 Gymnastics Championships.

Level 8 gymnasts Aliyah White, Kianna Thomas and Ali Kirby and Level 7 athlete Drew Hood traveled to regionals along with coaches Roy Lans and Myndee Brown.

In a normal year, the athletes would have to qualify through the state championships, but in the COVID year, the state tournament was canceled and the girls qualified through their scores

Praises local cheese plants
Department specialties inspect the factories
Says those in Coos and Curry counties are in splendid condition and are clean

H.R. Lochry, dairy manufacturing specialist of the U.S. Department of Agriculture, has just completed an inspection of the Coos and Curry cheese factories and is profuse in his praise of the progress that has been made since his last visit to Coos and Curry counties during August of last year.

“You wouldn’t know these factories,” he said. “Last year only one plant was painted on the inside. Now all but one or two are painted and are models of cleanliness.

“You can’t expect a dairyman to make much progress by way of clean production if he faces each morning a ragged looking cheese factory. Now they are spick and span and the dairymen are trying to keep pace with them.”

Marathon is run today

New Jersey man captures American event
Establishes a new record for the twenty-five mile road race of this country

BOSTON — The American Marathon, carrying virtually the road racing championship of the country at twenty-five miles, was won today by Frank Zuna of Newark, N.J., making a new record of two hours, eighteen minutes and fifty-seven and three-fifths seconds.

The previous record was two hours, 21 minutes and 18 1/2 seconds, made in 1920 by Mike Ryan of New York.

Charles Mellor of Chicago was second, and Peter Trivoulidas of New York, winner of last year’s race, was third.

Clean-up week is declared

Will come the first part of May, council decides

Ordinance is passed requiring the keeping up of parkings and making of lawns

The first week in May is to be Clean-up Week in Marshfield. This was decided last night by the city council at the regular meeting. The matter was presented by W.A. Reid, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, who stated that he appeared in behalf of the city beautiful committee of the chamber, the Marshfield Improvement club and the Business Women’s club.

Mr. Reid said that these organizations wanted the city to declare the clean-up week and go into it rather thoroughly. The idea was to get the city nicely cleaned up once and then keep it that way. It was part of the movement of the new Marshfield Improvement club. Mr. Reid said that the organization would do everything they could to see that everyone cleared up their premises if the city would help to haul away the rubbish. Mayor Ferguson suggested to Mr. Reid that he get each of the truck operators to furnish services half a day or a day free of charge so that the expense to the city would not be so great. Mayor Ferguson and Councilman Mulloy both agreed to donate such services with one of their trucks.

North Bend’s Ralph Davis takes Greco-Roman title

EUGENE — Ralph Davis added another wrestling laurel to his collection Saturday by winning the United States Wrestling Federation junior division Greco-Roman title at 105.5 pounds.

Two weeks ago, Davis, a senior at North Bend, finished second in the USWF junior division Freestyle Championships in Stillwater, Okla. He is a triple-crown titlist for high school wrestling in Oregon.

North Bend’s Robin Richards ran afoul of a pair of top-rated open division matmen in the black-mark tournament at the 160.5-pound bracket. Former North Bend and University of Oregon star Gary West, who finished second in the weight class, scored a 14-2 decision over Richards and Jim Crumley of Oregon State beat him 5-2. Richards is a member of the U.S. Junior World Greco-Roman team that is headed for Japan the first week of May.

Coquille man dies in action

COQUILLE — Specialist Fourth Class John Lanning Wilson Jr., 19, son of Mr. and Mrs. John L. Wilson Sr., 925 N. Elliott St., Coquille, was killed as a result of hostile enemy fire while on a combat operation April 15 in Vietnam.

Born April 19, 1952 in Coquille, Wilson was a member of the 1st Battalion, 502d Infantry, 101st Airborne Division. He was a medical corpsman who took his basic training at Fort Sam Houston, Texas. He had been in Vietnam since last October and he had been in the Army two years.

Job prospects for Oregon college graduates ‘bleak’

PORTLAND — Job prospects for 1971 Oregon college graduates area about as bleak as they were for the class of 1970 — maybe even a little bit worse.

University placement directors and others queried on the spring job picture said a second consecutive class is having a tough time finding its niche in the workaday world. Two directors indicated better times for new job hunters appear to be coming — but aren’t here yet.

Some said jobs are even harder to find for the advanced degree candidates than for those with mere bachelor’s degrees.

Those who do find jobs are finding the pay only slightly above last year’s levels. There have been no big increases such as graduates came to accept as normal in the early and mid 1960s.

Sixes land purchased by state

Oregon State Parks Division of the State Highway Department has purchased 1,880 acres of Sixes River and Pacific Ocean frontage from Hughes Estate, according to Dave Talbot, state parks director, and Jack Hudson of Hudson Realtors, Coos Bay, who negotiated the sale for the Hughes family.

Development of the site will start this summer and river and ocean access will be open by 1972, Talbot said.

The new state park has been owned by the Hughes family for over 100 years, Hudson said. There are four heirs, Mary Farrier, a resident on the property; Sharon Heim, Margaret Heim and Joe Heim, all of Portland, according to Hudson.

There is a state highway, Cape Blanco Road through the property to Cape Blanco Lighthouse, which is operated by the U.S. Coast Guard and is excluded from the sale.

Talbot said it is one of the largest sale, both in size of property and in price, ever negotiated by the State Parks Division. The purchase price was rounded out to $850,000 by Talbot in making the announcement.

The property has been operated as a sheep and cattle ranch with Glenn Hensley as manager.

Commercial anglers seek market in traditional recreational fishing grounds

Fishers move toward selling live fish for high-class, high-paying clients

A growing number of South Coast commercial fishermen are taking after a bevy of rock- and reef-dwelling fish with colorful names in search of a green lifeline.

Groundfish species such as lingcod, cabezon, greenling, yellowtail, china, black, grass and quillback are hard to catch and don’t fetch much when sent to market dead, so commercial anglers are wading into the lucrative business of selling live fish bound for glass tanks in chic California restaurants. Sport fishermen also target many of the same species found within a few miles of the coast and worry the growing commercial interest in groundfish will lead to a depleted fishery.

Thus, the stage is set for new battles over government management and fishing legacies as the Port of Bandon prepares to host a near-shore fisheries forum at the Bandon Community Barn on April 26.

Forum organizers and panel members representing nearly every facet of the near-shore fisheries debate say they are hopeful the symposium can be a productive, civil start toward achieving successful management of a fishery cloaked in uncertainty.

But lively discussions about live fishing are inevitable, as commercial and recreational fishermen, bureaucrats and environmentalists have already begun haggling over the abundance of groundfish stocks and who should have access to the near-shore reefs. Despite their differences, all sides agree on at least one thing: A coveted live rockfish sold to a swank San Francisco restaurant can fetch up to 10 times the price of a dead one headed to a local ice chest.

NB coach search begins again

Football: Ty Gregg takes head coaching position at La Pine

A year after hiring a new head football coach, North Bend High School’s search is on again.

Ty Gregg, who was hired in late May, informed the school on Wednesday that he will accept a head coaching job and full-time teaching position at La Pine High School next academic year.

Gregg told the returning Bulldog football players of his decision on Thursday.

North Bend athletic director Boyd Bjorkquist said the school is losing a good coach.

“I think given time he would have been very successful on the field and I think he did a great job with the kids,” Bjorkquist said. “I think the kids enjoyed playing for him.”

It will be a bittersweet move for Gregg, who had to make a move for the security of his family and teaching profession.

“That is basically what it came down to ... having a full-time teaching job and taking care of my family,” he said.

Bandon not interested in growth, industry

BANDON — This town has big potential, if it can stay small.

A mixed crowd of about 20 residents, visitors, business people and community leaders gathered in Bandon Tuesday for the second installment of the South Coast Development Council’s round of community brainstorming forums and most agreed that a small Bandon can be an economically healthy Bandon.

Small town charm, a little imagination and a lot of entrepreneurial spirit will make this scenic hamlet a great place to visit and a better place to live, they decided.

“Our group’s theme was keep it small,” said SCDC Board member Guy Williams, as he presented visions for Bandon’s future and some prospective business ideas that will be used by the SCDC to draft a strategic and marketing plan. “We would like to see Bandon in 2006 exactly like it was in 2000.”

Williams, who represents Security Bank, qualified his statement by explaining the members of his break-out group desire to see Bandon continue to be a community of retirees, full of culture, shops and scenic beauty, but devoid of heavy industry and traffic.

“We would like to see some minor improvements, such as paved streets and bike paths,” he added. “But no large family-wage jobs, no large industry. We moved here for a reason.”

Participants did not confine their ideas to Bandon. They suggested only clean industries be brought to the Bay Area, so as to avoid a negative impact on the Bandon area.

Bulldogs bomb Pirates in Civil War

Baseball: North Bend hits five homers in 18-2 win over Marshfield

North Bend brought the lumber and supplied plenty of thunder in the season’s first segment of Civil War baseball.

Five different Bulldogs hit home runs and Jeff Kent pitched a complete game to lead North Bend to an 18-2 romp over Marshfield in Coos Bay on Tuesday.

The Midwestern League win improved North Bend to 3-3 in league and tied for fourth place with South Eugene. The two schools play today in Eugene. Marshfield dropped to 0-6 in league play.

The game, played at Marshfield, was originally scheduled to be at Clyde Allen Field in North Bend on Monday but was canceled because of rain.

Siuslaw may jump to Sky-Em

Reclassification: New proposal by committee will include big changes in Far West League

Coquille and Brookings-Harbor would be the only two original members remaining in the Far West League beginning in 2002 under the newest proposal from the Oregon School Activities Association’s Classification and Districting Committee.

As expected, the newest proposal, which will be released later this week, drops Myrtle Point, Reedsport and Bandon down to the Class 2A Big Fir League and North Bend down from the Class 4A Midwestern League into the Far West League.

The proposal also moves both Glide and Sutherlin, which had requested to enter the Far West League, over from the Sky-Em League, and in a new twist, moves Siuslaw into the Sky-Em.

As with the previous proposals, or “worksheets” as the committee calls them, the new proposal is a suggestion to get comments from schools before the committee makes its final recommendations to the OSAA Executive Board in December, said Peter Weber, a liaison to the committee for OSAA.

“Again, none of this is set in stone,” Weber said. “We are moving closer.”

Bulldogs top Marshfield in Civil War softball

Rally: Four-run fifth inning sets up North Bend win over Pirates

For the first time in their high school careers, North Bend’s softball players can say they beat Marshfield.

Jennie Macpherson pitched a four-hitter and the Bulldogs came up with several key hits in a four-run fifth inning that broke open a 2-2 game on the way to a 7-2 win over the Pirates Thursday at Ferry Road Park.

It was North Bend’s second straight Midwestern League win and kept the Pirates winless in league play.

“especially since we played so well tonight, I know we’ll do well the rest of the season,” said Bulldogs second baseman Robin Hoffmeister, who drove in her team’s first two runs.

The Bulldogs, a mix of freshmen, sophomores, juniors and seniors, celebrated the school’s first win over the Pirates in more than four years.

“I haven’t beat Marshfield yet in any sport,” said junior shortstop Colby Bowman, who came up with the biggest hit for the Bulldogs Wednesday.

Her two-out single up the middle in the fifth inning put North Bend ahead for good.
