Merkley, Kaine: No Funds for War Against Venezuela

Washington, D.C. – Oregon’s U.S. Senator Jeff Merkley and Virginia’s U.S. Senator Tim Kaine today teamed up to introduce the Prohibiting Unauthorized Military Action in Venezuela Act of 2025 to prohibit the use of federal funds for any use of military force in or against Venezuela without explicit Congressional authorization.

“Congress cannot stand by while Donald Trump wages war without authorization,” said Merkley. “Nicolás Maduro is a brutal dictator, but that does not provide justification for the Trump Administration to ignore U.S. law to carry out these unconstitutional military strikes. Donald Trump cannot be trusted, and we must say no to another endless war, reckless regime change, and lethal operations—which are essentially extrajudicial killings—and do nothing to make the American people safer.”

“We shouldn’t stumble into an unnecessary war with Venezuela—risking U.S. servicemembers’ lives—with no congressional authorization and incomplete information about the Administration’s objectives, its legal rationale, and the potential consequences of a long-term conflict that could drive migration and irreparably fracture Venezuela,” said Kaine. “This legislation would prevent us from doing that, and I urge my colleagues to support it and reclaim the solemn responsibilities on matters of war and peace assigned to Congress by the Constitution.”

Merkley and Kaine’s bill does not prevent the United States from acting to defend itself or its citizens from an armed attack or threat of an imminent armed attack, pursue lawful counternarcotics operations, or provide humanitarian assistance to the Venezuelan people.

The Prohibiting Unauthorized Military Action in Venezuela Act of 2025 is also co-sponsored by Senator Chris Van Hollen (D-MD).

“The Trump Administration has amassed the largest naval buildup in the Caribbean in decades and committed extrajudicial killings in international waters amounting either to murder or war crimes. Congress has not authorized this Administration to take these offensive actions, and with good reason – the American people do not want to start another war. We must put a stop to this by passing this simple measure to prevent U.S. taxpayer dollars from funding the Trump Administration’s manufactured conflict with Venezuela,” said Van Hollen.

During the first Trump Administration, Merkley introduced a Senate resolution prohibiting military action in Venezuela. Kaine has also been a leading voice in Congress raising concerns over presidents’ efforts to expand the use of military force without Congressional authorization.

Oregon Department of Education Releases 2025 Report Card: A Look at Coos County

STAFF REPORT

The Oregon Department of Education (ODE) recently released an online portal with great ease of access for any district’s statistics. Anyone can now sign on to see in depth indicators for how their community is doing in relation to state averages. Having access to these numbers is incredibly useful for both decision makers and community members concerned about local education. General stats like graduation rates and regular attendances are available alongside granular details like demographic breakdowns and subject-specific proficiency.

“These profiles are an important tool that help us understand how our students and schools are doing; where we’re making progress, where we can do better, and how we can continue refining the ways we serve communities across the state,” ODE Director Dr. Charlene Williams said. “Ultimately, this data is not just something to report—it’s an opportunity to respond. It’s a chance to continue implementing the strategies we know are effective and to adjust where needed, so every Oregon student can thrive. ODE will continue to focus on supporting programs that make a difference.

Looking across the board,

Coos County’s various districts tend to fall below state averages. Let’s focus in on some of Coos County’s stats and how they compare in the areas of regular attendance rates, 9th graders on track to finish, and actual graduation rates.

Regular attendance is a percentage of students who attend over 90% of their enrolled school days, 9th Grade on Track is a percentage of first year high school students receiving appropriate support for graduating on time, the Four-Year Graduation rate is calculated per year (this will be students who started in 20/21 and received a diploma in 23/24).

Coos Bay SD 9

CBSD enrolled 2,914 students in the 2024-2025 school year, with 48% of those students experiencing poverty according to ODE. There are 166 teachers, 5 counselors, 1 social worker, and 3 student psychologists.

PCIP Update: Port Holds First Monthly Meeting for Terminal Project

By NATE SCHWARTZ
Editor

In response to calls for further transparency, the first Tuesday of each month has been designated by the Port of Coos Bay for public board meetings specifically regarding the Pacific Coast Intermodal Port Project (PCIP). While this gives the public a recurring chance to sit in for information or lodge a public comment each month, the 8 AM start time will make it tricky for many community members to attend. There is a rather dedicated contingent of detractors, including representatives from the League of Women Voters Coos County (LWV), who still managed to be in attendance for the first of these meetings on December 2, alongside many local union leaders.

During the meeting’s normal agenda, the Board received an update on the early survey and report processes that have been commissioned by the Port to gauge the viability of the project and the full extent of the needed modification for the terminal’s three main stages: the channel modification, the railroad upgrades, and the building of the terminal.

The recent government shutdown put aspects of the project in a grey area, which PCIP Executive Director Melissa Cribbins cleared up in her management report. Some of the federal partners, the Federal Railroad Administration (FRA) and Army Corp of Engineers, continued their work throughout the shutdown. The latter reviews the Port’s permit requests and is responsible for conducting the engineering studies around the project’s stages. The federal Maritime Administration (MARAD) apparently stopped taking meetings during the shutdown but communications have since resumed, with the project hoping to have the administration help with contracting their $25 million in Infrastructure for Rebuilding America (INFRA) grants.

Rebel Consultants. The asset management consulting company is working to build and update the case for PCIP’s commercial viability in order to justify to lenders and granters that the project has legs.

“We anticipate that this project is going to need significant public and private investment. The case for making that investment is what we are really asking Rebel to do,” said Leavitt. “For example, we know that the rail improvements are going to require a major loan with the FRA. Rebel has a lot of good experience working directly with the underwriters for that kind of financing, to be able to make the case for a loan.”

“The market pitch that you make to ocean carriers, to investors, to bankers. There’s that part of it. The other part is to allow us to dig more deeply into where the cargo is going to come from.”

According to Leavitt, there is great opportunity in the Union Pacific’s rail route to the Midwest in terms of getting the containers themselves to cities that struggle to bring them in for export. These questions of the project’s business case were raised in our recent coverage of the LWV’s information meeting. Rebel’s report is expected to be finished by the end of the first quarter of 2026, and will hopefully provide robust answers to those questions.

Speaking on behalf of the LWV during public comment, Cristine Moffitt presented community questions from the audience in attendance at that recent presentation to the board. She requested that the board provide answers to those questions, in addition to imploring the board to watch the video of the presentation available through their YouTube channel. Port meetings are also available live on YouTube. and on demand after the fact, for anyone curious about engaging further.

The next PCIP focused meeting will be January 6, 2026 for anyone who wishes to get more information or have their voice heard about the project.

It started like any other Monday at Long Island’s Belmont Park outside New York City. The weather was warming up as the annual spring horse racing season was winding down, tempting many workers to sneak out of their sweltering Manhattan offices for an afternoon watching the ponies. With temperatures already in the upper 80s and air conditioning still decades away, it didn’t take much temptation.

Horse racing was big in those days, right up there with baseball and boxing.

However, the thousands of fans who filled Belmont’s massive grandstand on June 4, 1923, saw much more than the usual round of races.

HOLY COW! HISTORY: A Jockey’s Wild Finish

They witnessed something that had never happened before, and hasn’t happened since.

It was a ho-hum race card with largely lackluster entrants that day. Owners entered their best horses in marquee races or ran them on Saturdays, which meant bigger crowds and bigger cash prizes.

Monday races drew the B-Listers, good ponies, but not quite ready for the big time. Still, they did provide the potential for upsets, and you never knew when an unexpected burst of exhilaration might be lurking around the final curve. However, the folks in the stands weren’t expecting excitement; just a few hours of good entertainment.

And they wound up getting much more than they bargained for.

One attraction that afternoon was a steeplechase, an equine obstacle race in which horses jump over fences, shrubs and ditches. The field included an entrant named Sweet Kiss, described as “a bay mare of obscure background” owned by a Miss A.M. Frayling. A 20-to-1 long shot with a dicey track record, she was nothing to write home about.

Miss Frayling picked an unknown to ride her mare. Frank Hayes was a 22-year-old Irishman who had worked around horses for years as a trainer and stableman. It seems he had his heart set on becoming a jockey. Some accounts say the steeplechase that day was his first race; if he had ridden before, he’d never made it to the winner’s circle.

It also seems he’d been on a crash diet to qualify for the ride, too, dropping from 142 pounds to 130 in just days. Which may explain what soon followed.

At any rate, horse and rider were a perfect match: a long-shot mare saddled with a jockey nobody had heard of. It was a marriage made in “also ran” heaven.

So, imagine the immense surprise when Sweet Kiss pulled off an upset, besting the field and winning by a head. The stunned crowd leapt to its feet in thunderous applause. Officials hurried over to congratulate the winning jockey. Sweet Kiss cantered a hundred yards beyond the finish line.

And then it happened.

Hayes “slipped slowly over his mount’s side, fell face downward, and lay still.” He was dead as a doornail.

At some point during the final quarter mile, he had suffered a fatal heart attack, yet had somehow managed to remain seated.

A horrified silence fell over the crowd. Racing stewards, the final authority who declare the winner of each race, reviewed the situation. They found that since Hayes was still in the saddle when Sweet Kiss had finished, she was the official winner. (Though they did dispense with the traditional post-race jockey weighing, for obvious reasons.)

Hayes finally had his win. He was buried three days later in his racing silks in a Brooklyn cemetery. The horse racing world also had a new record. No race, before or since, was ever won by a dead jockey.

And what about the mare? The racing community is notoriously superstitious. She quickly acquired the nickname, “The Sweet Kiss of Death.” No jockey was willing to climb aboard her after that, and she never raced again.

Behind the Bars: Female Deputy Insights

OPINION COLUMN
By CCSO DEPUTY VIERCK

Eight years, two months, and twenty-five days. In a jail, everyone counts time. Adults in Custody mark the days and “wake-ups” until release. Deputies count the hours until the weekend or the years until retirement. I could recount every shift I worked at the Coos County Jail—the triumphs and the traumas—but no single page could hold them all.

My first and best lesson came before I ever put on the uniform. My aunt, a long-time correctional officer in California, told me, “Your words and your time cost you nothing. They’re still people. It never hurts to listen or to offer a kind word.” I have carried that advice like a compass through every corridor and crisis of my career. It is the greatest gift I was ever given.

Both deputies and those we supervise will admit that the job can breed an “us versus them” mindset; it’s practically baked into the design of the place. Yet treating every person with basic respect is the only way to keep our own humanity intact in an environment that can be hazardous, stressful, and, at times, deeply traumatic. We work among individuals society has labeled the worst of the worst. We read the charging instruments, hear the details of unimaginable crimes, and sometimes witness people at their lowest. Still, I have used my aunt’s advice to build genuine rapport across the bars. More than once, an Adult in Custody has stepped in to protect me—from physical attacks, verbal threats, even insults from their peers. We never count on that kind of loyalty, but when it happens, it is a quiet reminder that respect can travel in both directions.

Being a woman in a male-dominated profession brings its own challenges. Society—and sometimes the people we supervise—assumes I am smaller, weaker, less capable. Those assumptions are not universally true or false; they simply miss the point. Women are indispensable in corrections. Some of us are exceptional firearms instructors or defensive-tactics trainers. Others excel at jail inspections, ensuring compliance with Oregon Jail Standards. Some are fierce fighters. I see myself as a strategist and a de-escalator—skills rooted in an upbringing where violence was absent, and words were the first line of defense. That background left me unprepared for the raw aggression I would eventually face, but it also gave me tools many of my male colleagues do not possess: the ability to calm an enraged man with the steady tone of an exasperated mother, or to search a female inmate with the dignity the law and basic decency require.

People are always surprised when they learn where I work. “Wait—you work with men, too?” Yes. Murderers, rapists, people arrested for DUII—everyone who comes through the sally port. The shocked look on their faces used to bother me. Now it fills me with a strange pride. I don’t look like their mental image of a jail deputy, and I have learned to be proud of that mismatch.

I have served as Watch Commander, running an entire shift of four to seven deputies when the sergeant is off. For the last three years, I have been a Field Training Officer, shaping new hires and praying they carry forward the same empathy my aunt gave me.

When George Floyd was killed, I posted publicly about my disappointment in bad policing. Someone replied, “You only care because bad cops make you look bad.” That remark missed the mark by a mile. No one lasts long in this profession for ego or glory. I have missed holidays, birthdays, and anniversaries. I have been cursed at, spit on, and assaulted. Some mornings, it takes everything I have just to walk through the staff door.

There have been days I nearly turned in my badge for something safer, softer, saner. Yet I stay—because I believe I am here for a reason. I mentor rookies. I talk people down from the edge of suicide. I have knelt in someone else’s blood, applying pressure and praying the ambulance hurries.

The job is brutal on bodies, minds, and relationships. But it has also given me a second family unlike any other. You hear it said that it’s not where you work, it’s who you work with. In law enforcement, that cliché is gospel. I know deputies who will drive across the county at 3 a.m. to check on a struggling coworker. I know others who crochet blankets and stuffed animals for every baby born into our extended family. I know men and women who have run into danger to save a life—sometimes the life of the very person they arrested the week before.

We are protectors. We are human beings capable of profound empathy. My greatest hope is that one day the public will look past the uniform, past the headlines, and see us clearly for who we are.

Officials urge public to avoid contact with sick or dead birds as avian flu persists across Oregon

FROM ODFW

SALEM, Ore. – People across Oregon are being urged to avoid contact with sick or dead birds as highly pathogenic avian influenza (HPAI) continues to impact wild and domestic bird populations across the state. There is currently no effective treatment for wild and domestic birds, and the virus can spread rapidly among bird populations and potentially to other wildlife.

ODFW is currently receiving reports of HPAI-related bird deaths across Oregon, with most cases occurring in the Willamette Valley among migrating cackling geese and some raptors. Additional detections have been reported in eastern Oregon, where early-season duck and raptor mortalities and snow goose deaths have occurred. Sporadic reports along the Oregon Coast also include cases in gulls and other waterbirds.

Since 2022, Oregon has experienced widespread outbreaks of HPAI in wild birds and domestic poultry. This virus has been detected in nearly every Oregon county. It has caused the deaths of more than 15,000 wild birds and the euthanasia of more than 183 million domestic poultry in North America.

Other non-avian wildlife confirmed with HPAI in Oregon include raccoons, skunks, foxes, marten and bobcats. However, nearly any mammalian species that feed on affected animals or is in a heavily contaminated environment may be susceptible to disease.

Nationwide, affected wildlife also includes coyotes, wild cats, and bears that have likely fed on infected birds.

Marine mammals have also been impacted in North and South America. Domestic animals affected by HPAI include poultry, waterfowl, cattle, pigs, goats, alpacas, and cats.

What to do if you encounter groups of sick or dead wild birds

- Report groups of sick or dead wild birds to the Wildlife Health lab at 866-968-2600 or wildlife.health@odfw.oregon.gov. ODFW staff are monitoring and tracking continued mortalities. Samples may be collected in cases involving large numbers of dead birds or multiple species. Single dead bird reports are useful for tracking suspicious cases; however, due to limited staff, and resources ODFW will not be able to respond to all such reports.
- Do not handle wildlife that is sick or found dead. If it is necessary to dispose of a carcass, use a shovel or wear impermeable gloves, wash hands with soap and water, and change clothing before having contact with domestic poultry or pet birds.
- Keep dogs away from sick or dead birds. There are no known cases of domestic dogs becoming sickened by contact with sick birds. But hunters should not feed dogs any raw meat, organs, or other tissues from harvested waterfowl, and they should not allow retrieving dogs to interact with sick or dead birds.

Typical symptoms in wild waterfowl include lethargy, inability to fly, erratic behavior, loss of coordination, cloudy eyes, swimming in circles, and head shaking. However, some dabbling ducks may carry the virus without symptoms, spreading it through their feces to other birds and wetlands. Infected wild mammals may appear sick or neurologically abnormal, or be found dead after consuming infected birds, and should also be reported.

Birds typically die within 72 hours of showing clinical signs. Currently, rehabilitators in Oregon are advised not to accept waterfowl with bird flu symptoms due to the risk of the disease spreading to other birds in their facilities.

How to report illness in domestic animals

Death or illness among domestic birds (chickens, turkeys, Guinea fowl) should be reported immediately to ODA. Please report by calling 503-986-4711 (alt. phone 1-800-347-7028). Find more information on avian influenza in domestic birds and tips on protecting backyard flocks from ODA.

Risk to humans

The risk to people from this strain of avian influenza is low. Since 2024, there have been 71 human cases of avian influenza in the United States, including two deaths. Most of these cases were exposed to infected dairy herds or domestic poultry farms. The U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) provides updated information on human cases of HPAI.

OSAA committee releases final recommendation for leagues for next four years

JOHN GUNTHER
For The World

All the high school leagues that include South Coast schools would see some changes for the next four-year time block under the final recommendation of the Oregon School Activities Association’s Classification and Districting Committee.

The committee released its recommendation following its last regular meeting Monday. The OSAA Executive Board will consider the proposal at its Dec. 15 meeting and will take testimony from schools and the public before making its decision.

No South Coast schools will change their classifications under the final recommendation but changes to the classification size limits for Class 4A, 3A and 1A will alter somewhat the various leagues.

In Class 4A, the new enrollment range, used computing the number of students in the lowest three grades and other factors including the percentage of students receiving free or reduced lunches, is 281 to 560 students.

That change pushes the two teams that just played for the state football title, champion Cascade and runner-up Henley, up to Class 5A for the next four years. They are the only two schools moving up to 5A.

Meanwhile, current Class 3A schools Elmira, North Valley, South Umpqua, Taft and Valley Catholic will move up to Class 4A, along with Banks and Cascade Christian, which earlier requested moving up to the classification.

For the South Coast schools, that means the new Sky-Em League will include current members Marshfield, North Bend, Marist Catholic, Junction City and Cottage Grove and new members Elmira and South Umpqua. Elmira has been in the league in the past and school officials made a case to the committee at several meetings that the Falcons do not belong in Class 4A and the move will badly harm the school’s sports teams, which have not been overly successful in Class 3A and could see numerous students transfer to nearby districts where they have a chance to be successful.

Taft and North Valley made similar cases, but are being moved into the Oregon West and Skyline leagues, respectively.

In Class 3A, the decision of Cascade Christian to move up, North Valley moving up to Class 4A, the growth of Illinois Valley (in Cave Junction) and the approval for Rogue River to play down from Class 3A to Class 2A left both Illinois Valley and St. Mary’s of Medford without any nearby neighbors in the same classification. They both now will be part of the Far West League, along with current members Coquille, Siuslaw, Douglas, Sutherlin and Glide. Brookings-Harbor, which had been part of the Southern Oregon Conference with St. Mary’s, Rogue River, Cascade Christian and North Valley, also will move back into the Far West League. It was one of the league’s charter members back in the 1970s along with Coquille and Siuslaw and has been part of the league over most of the past four decades.

In Class 2A, the Sunset Conference will see two changes. The league includes Bandon, Myrtle Point, Reedsport, Gold Beach and Oakland and will lose Illinois Valley to Class 3A but gain North Douglas in Drain, which moves up from Class 1A to Class 2A.

A number of current Class 1A schools will move up to 2A because the upper limit for 1A has been lowered to 65 students, but the only change for the Skyline League is the removal of North Douglas. Powers and Pacific are the two South Coast schools in the Skyline League.

The Executive Board will meet at 9 a.m. on Dec. 15 at the Holiday Inn in Wilsonville and will consider written and in-person testimony before acting on the final recommendation. Following that decision the OSAA Delegate Assembly will meet at 1 p.m. to act on cut-off points for the various classifications and the number of leagues for the new time block which starts next fall.

The entire final recommendation can be seen at www.osaa.org. The Classification and Districting Committee can be found under the Governance tab on the home page.

North Bend football coach Prince retires

Longtime North Bend football coach Gary Prince has announced he is stepping away from the position after 28 years coaching, including 25 at North Bend.

“I want to sincerely thank all of the amazing student-athletes that I have had the privilege to coach, the parents who have always supported us, my amazing coaching staff, and the community that I have served,” Prince wrote in announcing his retirement. “It has been an incredible journey.”

Prince also thanked his wife, Sarah, and daughters Jordyn and Kenzie for their support and help for the team through the years.

Jordyn Prince is now on the support staff for football at Southern Oregon University, where she is a freshman this fall.

Prince became head coach in North Bend in 2011 and amassed a record of 105-48. He was North Bend’s first head coach to reach 100 wins and led the Bulldogs to their only state title, in 2016, and two other state finals. The Bulldogs made the playoffs 10 times in Prince’s tenure.

“From all of us, thank you Coach for all of your years of dedication and sacrifice to our students and community,” read a message to Prince from the school’s athletic department. “Your impact will be felt on our campus for a long time.”

Prince also is the girls golf coach for the Bulldogs.

As I See It

By Mary Schamehorn

“The steamer Brooklyn, for many years one of the fleet of wooden lumber carriers that plied between Bandon and San Francisco, capsized on the Humboldt bar while crossing out with a cargo of lumber Saturday and so far only one of the crew of 18 has been found alive.

“Jargen M. Grove, first mate on the Brooklyn, was picked up at sea five miles off the Humboldt bar Tuesday after he had spent three days and nights clinging to a piece of wreckage. The body of one of the sailors has since been found.

“Grove was picked up by a fishing trawler and immediately taken to Eureka. When taken to the hospital he was too weak from hunger and exposure to talk.

“Immediately upon receipt of word that a survivor was found, government cutters, tugs and airplanes resumed search of the waters in the faint hope that others might be adrift.

“The loss of the Brooklyn with its crew is the second tragedy of its kind along the northern California coast this winter, the first being the loss of the West Coast with its entire crew while en route to Coos Bay from Crescent City a month ago.”

A headline from October 1922 says that a lack of accommodations makes it impossible for Bandon to take students from the Dew Valley district.

“In spite of recent changes giving additional room and better conditions for pupils in local schools, Bandon is faced with a shortage of seating capacity in the high school (second photo) and is actually turning away students who want to come here from neighboring districts.

“It is considered unfortunate as Bandon really needs more students in high school. It is pointed out that larger enrollment would warrant sufficient teaching force to better systematize the work, thus making possible greater results; increased enrollment has also increased interest in school activities generally thus attracting more grade pupils to the higher courses.

“The situation has brought about considerable discussion on the part of the school board and others who take a more active interest in educational matters. The steady increase in enrollment during the past few years has brought forth many difficult problems and judging from the present outlook the difficulties will increase materially during the coming years.

“It is hoped that some plan may be devised to give Bandon larger school facilities without adding to the burden of taxation.”

The school in the photo was built in 1912 and was known as the East Side School. It survived the fire of 1936 and was torn down after it was replaced by the high school on Ninth Street in 1950. That high school was destroyed by an arsonist in January of 1974, and replaced by the present-day high school.

“Christmas at the Grand Theatre” is a headline on the Dec. 20, 1910, Bandon Recorder.

“All patrons of the Grand (third photo) who will attend the picture plays Friday night, Dec. 23, will be presented with a souvenir that will please the old folks as well as the children.

“I am not going to tell you what this souvenir is, come to the Grand Friday night and get one; bring the children, for they will be wild about it.”

Not sure who the “I” is, but it must have been the editor, who wasn’t strong on punctuation either. This was three years before my grandfather, L.D Felsheim, arrived in Bandon from Idaho and soon took over the competing paper, the Western World, where I later worked for nearly 40 years.

Old Town was packed with people late Saturday afternoon for the annual nog and cider walk, visit by Santa and Mrs. Claus and the celebratory lighting of the beautifully decorated tree on the visitor center lot. The event is sponsored annually by the Greater Bandon Association, with the city’s new planning director Jeff Mitchem flipping the switch to light the tree.

Unlike past years when it was either cold or rainy, the weather definitely cooperated with moderate temperatures and no wind. This was also Small Business Saturday, with the nog/wine walk drawing big crowds into the local businesses in the hope that people will shop while they enjoy their beverage.

The annual lighted vehicle parade is set for Saturday, Dec. 13, with entries to gather at the lot across from Bandon Fisheries Warehouse at 5 for the parade to start at 5:30 through Second Street. There is no registration requirement or fee to enter.

I am becoming increasingly more positive that the person, who keeps trying to scam people who are connected with the City of Bandon or Holy Trinity Catholic Church, is local. This week I received an email from my fellow councilor, Madeline Seymour, with the subject line KEY TASK, preceded by the word “scam.”

“Hi, confirm if you are available for a quick chat? please respond via email as I’m leaving for a meeting. Thanks, Madeline Seymour.” The email used by the sender was “executive committee8934@gmail.com.

I knew instantly it was a scam, as this has happened repeatedly to me and others on the council, or who work for the city.

I responded, “Yes, I am available. What do you want to talk about? Mary”

They responded: “GREAT. Here’s what I want you to do for me because I’m a little busy right now. I have been working on incentives and I aimed at surprising some of our diligent staff with gift cards this week. This should be confidential until they all have the gift cards as it’s a surprise and you will keep one for yourself too. I want you to pick the gift cards for me and I will refund you once I am done.”

I answered: “How many gift cards do you want me to buy, and how will I get them to you?”

They responded: “I need 5 quantities of Sephora gift cards. $1000 ($200 denomination) that is 5 card at $200 each. You should get them at a store around you. After you get them, kindly open the pack to reveal the pins then take a clear picture of each card, receipt and send it to me here. I will handle the disbursement. Please keep the physical cards and receipt for reference purposes. You will be reimbursed.”

I then responded: “Even if I were to fall for this obvious scam (it’s getting old), I would never reveal the pin numbers to you. I believe this is originating in Bandon, just like the Catholic church scam that cost an elderly councilor $1200. You people should be in prison.”

I did not hear back

A person on Facebook monitors the scanner every day, and there was an interesting post on Friday evening (Nov. 28). It said the Bandon Police Department was on scene with a vehicle on its side by the Community Center. Occupant was stuck in the vehicle. The poster said it sounded like the officer wanted an ambulance to respond although dispatcher reportedly believed it was a non-injury accident. I don’t know the details, but several posters questioned how anyone could turn a vehicle on its side in a 15 or 20-mile-an-hour city park? That’s a good question.

Last week I wrote about the man, I often refer to as the “seagull man,” who was fined $5,000 in municipal court for repeated violations involving feeding the seagulls. His parting shot (I was in the audience) was that he knew about the city’s “gender secret society.” Those of us in the room had no idea what he was talking about.

But a friend shed some light on it for me, by sending me a link to an article about a “feminished workplace” which was said “to mask the real crisis in male identity.”

The writer says, “First it was mechanisation threatening our jobs, then AI and now this: the Great Feminisation is taking over the workplace.”

My guess is that he is referring to the three City employees, all gals, who assist Judge Milliman with court, and the fact that I often attend court.

Obituaries

Harold “Kelly” Arthur Hoy

February 9, 1936 – November 23, 2025

Kelly lived a life he loved. He grew up in Garibaldi, OR where his family was involved in the fishing industry. He was a talented high school athlete and went on to play sports at OCE and earn a degree in Education. He married his high school sweetheart Sue, had four children, and was lucky enough to have a career he loved. He taught and coached in the Coos Bay School District for 34 years. Many people may remember Kelly from the Pied Piper, the Eastside restaurant that the Hoy's owned for 11 years.

When cancer took Sue, he remained active, golfing, traveling, woodworking, and spending time with his family. Then one day while having lunch with his grandson, Barb walked into the restaurant and that was the start of 27 happy years.

Kelly volunteered many hours for ODFW and would take on any wood-working project no matter how big or small. He was part of the original group that started Seabreeze Basketball Camp and helped develop many young basketball players in the area. He did some volunteering in both his daughters' classrooms and loved donating Turkeys to local Elementary school Turkey Trots. We were lucky to have him in our lives.

Kelly was preceded in death by his wife Sue Hoy and wife Barb Hoy, his parents Mark and Veda Hoy, brother Bill Hoy and sister Jane Fiddler.

Kelly is survived by his children, Allan and Debbie Hoy, David and Anne Hoy, Lorallan Hoy, Cindy and Mike George, April Hoy, 9 grandchildren, and 9 great grandchildren.

DuWayne Lionel Osborne

December 7, 1934 - November 21, 2025

DuWayne Lionel Osborne was born Dec. 7, 1934, in Tumwater, Washington, and passed away peacefully at age 90 on Nov. 21, 2025, in North Bend, Oregon, from congestive heart failure.

He was the second of seven children born to Virginia and Walter In Loving Memory Osborne. After their divorce, Virginia remarried and had four more children. When DuWayne was 6, his mother began a new family and left him and his six siblings in the care of their grandmother in Adna, Washington. The youngest soon passed at two months old.

Living on a farm during WWII with no indoor plumbing or electricity, the children received nurturing and learned important life lessons. DuWayne often shared stories of his grandmother's no-nonsense approach. After her passing, the original six children rejoined their mother, stepfather, and four half siblings. DuWayne left school after seventh grade to work and help support the family, even traveling through Oregon and Washington with the carnival as a teenager.

He married Annice L. Applegate on March 25, 1955, a marriage that lasted 62 years until her passing in 2017. Shortly after their wedding, he enlisted in the Army, serving from 1955 to 1958 as a trained tank mechanic, spending most of his service in France. Ann spent several months with him there before returning to Oregon to give birth to their daughter Valerie in 1957. Son Jim followed 19 months later.

After his discharge, the family settled in Hillsboro, where DuWayne worked various jobs before moving to Coos Bay in 1962. He worked for Weyerhaeuser as a choker setter, later completing the millwright apprenticeship and earning his journeyman card. He retired from Weyco's CBX mill in 2000.

DuWayne loved family time—camping, fishing, hunting, gardening, building, and creating his own tools and toys. He adored children.

He was preceded in death by Ann and all ten siblings. He is survived by daughter Valerie (Cleve) Pickett, son Jimmy (Kristi) Osborne, two grandchildren, eleven great grandchildren, and one great-great grandson. Services will be held after the first of the year.

December SNAP Update: Benefits Issued Like Normal, Compromised Cards Turned Off and Replaced

Oregon Department of Human Services

is issuing Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program (SNAP) benefits on its normal monthly schedule in December, following disruptions in November due to the federal government shutdown. SNAP plays a major role in Oregon’s food security and economy. Every $1 in SNAP benefits generates $1.50 to $1.80 in local economic activity, contributing an estimated $1.6 billion to Oregon’s economy each year.

FROM OREGON DEPT. OF HUMAN SERVICES

SALEM, Ore. — The Oregon Department of Human Services (ODHS)

“Every month hundreds of thousands of children, older adults and hard-working families and individuals depend on getting their SNAP food benefits on time to get enough food,” said ODHS Director Liesl Wendt. “After last month’s uncertainty and disruptions, we are grateful to be able to return to issuing SNAP food benefits when and how people expect us to. We also recommend that people take simple steps today to protect their EBT cards. By changing your PIN, locking your cards and blocking online and out-of-state purchases you can keep your benefits safe.” SNAP is entirely federally funded and helps more than 1 in 6 people in Oregon, about 18 percent of households, buy groceries, including children, working families, older adults and people with disabilities.

At the same time, with a significant amount of theft by skimming of EBT (Electronic Benefit Transfer) cards in Oregon and nationwide, ODHS is doing everything it can to protect people. This week, ODHS turned off and replaced more than 1,300 EBT cards after detecting card-skimming activity in the Coos Bay and North Bend area.

Most theft occurs in the beginning of the month immediately after SNAP and Temporary Assistance for Needy Families (TANF) benefits are issued to EBT cards. Criminals use methods like skimming devices, internet scams and fake websites to steal card numbers and personal identification numbers (PIN). Once they have this information, they use online or out-of-state purchases to drain SNAP food and TANF cash benefits from a person’s card.

the closest ODHS benefits office.
• Keep your PIN secret: Never share your PIN or write it on your card. Cover the keypad whenever entering your PIN in a public setting. Thieves may use small cameras to capture your PIN entry.
• Inspect card readers carefully: Before swiping your card at an ATM or other card reader, check for anything unusual. Skimming devices are often placed on top of existing card readers. If you see anything that looks out of place or tampered with, avoid using it and let the business know.
• Monitor your EBT account activity: Make it a habit to check your account regularly for any unusual charges. If you see a charge you didn’t make, report it immediately, cancel your card and request a replacement.

DHS recommends that everyone with an EBT card take these steps to keep their benefits safe:

- Only use the official ebtEDGE website and mobile app for Apple or Android. ODHS does not guarantee the safety of any other EBT management apps or websites.
- Freeze your card between uses: When you’re not using your EBT card, consider freezing it as an extra layer of protection. Simply unfreeze it when you’re ready to make a purchase. To do this, visit the ebtEDGE website or use the mobile app and look for “Freeze Card” under “Account Services.”
- Block out-of-state and online purchases: You have the option to block transactions made outside of Oregon and online purchases to safeguard your card from unauthorized use. To do this, visit the ebtEDGE website or use the mobile app and look for “Protect My Account” under “Account Services.” You can remove the blocks later.
- Change your PIN regularly: Get into the habit of updating your PIN often. This can help protect your account if someone does gain access to your card number. Here are the ways you can change your PIN:
 - Call 888-997-4447;
 - Log into the ebtEDGE website;
 - Take your EBT card to

Here are the ways you can get a new card:

- Call the EBT Replacement Line at 1-855-328-6715;
 - Go to an ODHS benefits office.
 - Don’t respond to suspicious texts: If you receive a text message asking for your EBT card number or PIN, ignore it. ODHS will never ask for your information this way.
 - Avoid social media scams: Only trust posts and messages about your benefits from official ODHS accounts. ODHS will never ask for your benefits case number, PIN or other card information on social media.
- More information is available on the Protect Your EBT Card and Benefits webpage. There is a brochure, flyer and wallet card available in many languages. There are also short videos about using an EBT card, how to replace an EBT card and all the ways to protect your EBT benefits. These are posted in the How-to Videos section of benefits.oregon.gov.
