Most city elections not needed in November

By DAVID RUPKALVIS
The World

Most cities in Coos County will not need an election to determine who will lead their cities for the next two years.

Coos Bay, Bandon and Coquille had only the minimum number of candidates file for the seats, although there will be new faces in some of the communities.

There will be no change in Coos Bay, where Mayor Joe Benetti was the only person to run for mayor, ensuring he will serve another two-year term in office.

On the council side, incumbents Carmen Matthews, Rob Miles and Sara Stephens were the only candidates to qualify for the ballot. Kamryn Stringfield announced earlier this year she was running for a council seat but withdrew after moving from the city.

In Bandon, Mayor Mary Schamehorn will get another term in office after being the only person to file. On the council side, two incumbents will be joined by a newcomer, but no election is needed after only three candidates filed for the three seats.

Incumbents Chris Powell and Madeline Seymour filed for re-election while port Administrator Josh Adamson was the lone candidate to file for Peter Braun's seat.

In Coquille, Mayor Sam Flaherty will get another term after being the lone candidate to file for mayor. On the council side, incumbents Jake Marshall and Dave Waddington will receive new terms while Janice Wheeler will take the seat being vacated by Ann Parker.

One exception in 2022 is in North Bend, where elections for both mayor and council are needed.

Incumbent Mayor Jessica Engelke filed for re-election, where she will be opposed by former Mayor John Briggs. Engelke was elected to the council in 2018 and became the city's first female mayor in 2020. Briggs was elected to the council in 1998 and elected as mayor in 2000. He served one term as mayor. The winner in November will receive a two-year term as mayor.

On the council side, incumbents Timm Slater and Bill Richardson announced they will not seek new terms. Councilor Larry Garboden is running for a new term.

Three candidates - Jenny Jones, John Scheirman and Barbara Schultz - are also running. The top three vote getters in the November election will earn four-year terms on the council.

Briggs: New leadership is needed in North Bend

By DAVID RUPKALVIS
The World

After he left the position as North Bend mayor in 2002, John Briggs never planned to run for office again. That was until he watched a city council meeting earlier this year

During that meeting, an employee of Rite Aid spoke to the council and talked about how a homeless man at the store made her fear for her life. Briggs said the response from incumbent Mayor Jessica Engelke infuriated him.

"Since this was the middle of public comment, unfortunately our mayor said this is public comment, your time is up and we don't have time to discuss it with you. I find that lacks in compassion. When do the citizens get to sit down with the council," Briggs asked. "I don't see it. That's why I'm running for mayor."

Briggs said he has other problems with Engelke's leadership and the direction the city is taking, but that moment was the one that pushed him to run for office again.

Another area Briggs shows concern about is Engelke's claim that the Main Street program is making a big difference in the community.

"I know Jessica Engelke really touts what she done. I know there's some good stuff that's come with that. But the Main Street Program is just down there," he said pointing toward downtown. "They've done nothing for the businesses down here all the way to Newmark."

Briggs said even with Main Street, he is disappointed when walking downtown.

"Twenty years ago when I was mayor, we had a lack of parking downtown, and we had all the storefronts open," he said. "It was not costing us $85,000 a year. These folks up there in the houses, they help pay. All funds belong to the citizens of North Bend. It is the job of the council and the city administrator to work with the funds available. To me, the most important part of the city is the residents."

Briggs, who served eight years on the airport board, said he was also dismayed when he learned the city of North Bend is considering cancelling a law enforcement agreement with the airport. If that were to happen, the airport could be forced to close.

"Many businesses would be affected as will our various medical facilities," Briggs said. "Why would the city even consider such an action. I believe this is evidence of poor leadership at city hall."

When Briggs was mayor from 2000 to 2002, he garnered some controversy when he supported a proposal to consolidate Coos Bay and North Bend. The voters in North Bend rejected that proposal, and Briggs said he has learned his lesson.

"I hereby state I heard their voice, and I will not support consolidation again," he said.

Briggs said he has three main objectives if elected.

First, would be to re-establish a sense of safety and security in the community.

"Right now, I don't feel that comfortable walking around," he said.

Second, Briggs wants a city government that is compassionate toward its residents.

School's back in session

Students returned to class around Coos County this week as schools in Coos Bay and North Bend opened their doors to students. In Coos Bay, Marshfield High School and Marshfield Junior High started classes Tuesday, while in North Bend, all students returned Wednesday. As Hillcrest School in North Bend, students began arriving 20 minutes before the doors opened, eager to get back into the classroom and to see their friends they missed over the summer. As parents brought their children to the school, many stopped to take first-day-of school photos. When the doors to Hillcrest finally opened, the students poured into the school, officially starting a new school year.

Walk aims to cut back on suicides

By DAVID RUPKALVIS
The World

It is the No. 1 cause of death for people ages 10 to 24 and in the top causes of death for all people in the United States, yet most people prefer to ignore it.

But this month, volunteers in Coos County are working to bring it into the light and to raise funds to slow it down in the future.

What is it? Suicide, the taking of one's own life. Suicide has been a problem forever, but it has grown into a plague in Oregon and Coos County in recent years. That's something Lance Nelson hopes to stop.

The Oregon chapter president of the American Foundation for Suicide Prevention, Nelson said September will be a busy month in the effort to slow down suicide. This week is Suicide Prevention Week and September is Suicide Prevention Month.

So how big of a problem is suicide in Coos County. It's worse than most would expect.

"What we know is Oregon is one of the worst states for suicide," Nelson said. "In Oregon, Coos County is one of the worst counties."

The question many try to answer is why?

"It's a very complicated scenario there," Nelson said. "We know that rural areas are typically worse. We know that areas that are lower economically are worse. We know areas with high firearm ownership are worse, and we now areas with lower mental health services all contribute."

Nelson was quick to reassure he was not opposed to gun ownership, but he said the use of guns during suicide attempts are almost always successful, which does play a role in the high numbers.

"We know if we can extend the timeframe from their suicidal

Anglers net cash prizes

The big-money bass are still waiting to be caught

Six lucky anglers collected cash during a Labor Day Weekend bass derby on the Coquille River. They took home prizes ranging from $50 to $500, while helping reduce the population of invasive, predatory smallmouth bass.

Prizes were awarded for bass that were tagged with microchips, redeemable for cash. But two bass worth $1,000 each are still at large. That means the cash is waiting for someone to reel it in, courtesy of the Port of Coquille River.

"It's really a good thing, because we can keep people fishing on them," said Port Commissioner Fred Fry.

Bass are ravenous enemies of native salmon, and the Coquille River's fall Chinook salmon run is in danger of extinction. Numerous agencies and community organizations, led by the Coquille Indian Tribe and the Oregon Department of Fish and Wildlife, are cooperating to save the salmon run.

Catching bass is one of their tactics. The port held its second bass derby Saturday and Sunday (Sept. 3 and 4), and anglers took 1,518 bass from the river. Also, the Salmon and Trout Enhancement Program gave away 68 fishing poles to young anglers.

"We are so grateful to the port and our other partners in this project," said Coquille Tribal Chair Brenda Meade.

"Saving the salmon run means addressing all the factors that affect salmon survival, and predation by these invasive bass species is a big one. These salmon derbies are a great opportunity for community members to help."

The port district plans to resume bass derbies next spring. In the meantime, Fry encourages local anglers to keep fishing for smallmouth bass.

Once caught, bass should be frozen until they can be scanned for microchips. The port will set up a scanning station at 5 p.m. each Sunday at the Myrtle Point boat launch, until the fishing season ends.

In addition to the two $1,000 fish, many smaller cash prizes remain to be claimed.

Many of the bass caught over the weekend were given away to local residents, who were happy to have some tasty fish. The rest will become fertilizer for a local farm.

Derby sponsors include the Oregon Department of Fish and Wildlife, the Coquille Indian Tribe, Roseburg Forest Products, Timberline Taxidermy, 3J Ranches and the Spruce Street Bar and Grill.

thought to the time they can act on it, that thought dissipates," Nelson said.

Nelson said one thing that surprises most people is those at greatest risk for suicide are older Americans, usually over the age 65.

"Physical illness is a huge factor for Coos County," he said. "We have an elderly population that has difficulty affording healthcare and difficulty accessing pain management. All of that leads to a perfect storm."

While those factors all play a role, there are other issues that impact those who consider taking their own lives.

"I'd be remiss not link our suicide issues to our substance abuse issue," Nelson said. "The vast majority of people who attempt suicide are under the influence of something that lowers their inhibition."

While suicide is a major concern in Coos County, there are things people can do to help.

"Look for warning signs," Nelson said. "It's super important to start connecting with others, especially coming out of the pandemic. Take threats seriously and reach out for professional assistance. Typically, if someone says I'm going to end it, I don't want to wake up, it's a cry for help. Most people who are suicidal say something."

If you have a loved one who is threatening suicide, Nelson said you can always call for help. In Oregon, calling 988 goes directly to the Suicide Prevention Hotline. A call to any mental health provider, a hospital or even the police could also make a difference.

"Every mental health clinic I know of in Coos County deals with a suicidal person at that moment," Nelson said. "They don't say make an appointment."

Another way the community can help is through the Out of the Darkness Walk, which will be held in downtown Coos Bay at 10 a.m., Saturday, September 24. While the walk is a fundraiser for the AFSP, Nelson said it is free to participate in.

"We try to keep as much of the money we raise in Coos County in Coos County," he said. "We have 10 different educational programs we can present for free to anyone in Coos County."

The programs are made for age groups and other differences to showcase what individuals can do if they have suicidal thoughts and how loved ones can intervene.

"There's a huge effort on educating the public," Nelson said. "None of them are big, scary, hours-lone presentations. They take about 45 minutes."

Other programs the local chapter offers are loss and healing support groups to help those who lost a loved one to suicide. Nelson said it is not uncommon for someone who lost a loved to feel such guilt they turn to suicide themselves.

"It's a unique form of grieving," he said. "It carries the stigma, it carries the guilt. I should have seen something, I should have done something."

Participating in the Out of the Darkness Walk is powerful, Nelson said, because it shows people they aren't alone.

"I think the most powerful thing about the walk is you show up and there's hundreds of people impacted by suicide," Nelson said. "You instantly feel that connection when you thought to were alone."

And it is helping, although there is a lot of work to do.

'Coos County has done a lot over the last four to five years to work to stop suicide,' Nelson said. "We have done a lot across the community to increase our suicide prevention efforts."

Throughout Suicide Prevention Month there are opportunities to support the AFSP. Nelson said beginning today, there will be an online auction with items donated by more than 30 local businesses. Then on September 24, the Out of the Darkness Walk is scheduled.

September is National Suicide Prevention Awareness Month

Suicide is among the leading causes of death in Oregon and is a major public health concern. Coos County's 2019 death rate from suicides was equal to 39.5 deaths per 100,000 residents. This suicide death rate is nearly double Oregon's rate (21.4 per 100,000). Coos Health & Wellness encourages you to learn how you can support those who are in crisis.

Look for the warning signs:

1. Expressing feelings of hopelessness or helplessness, making suicidal gestures, exhibiting increasing
2. Someone is talking or writing about harming themselves. They have a plan and the means to follow through.

3. Giving away possessions or saying goodbye to friends and loved ones.
4. Frequent hopelessness, believes there is no way to cope or manage stressors, increased use of substances, withdrawing or dramatic and persistent mood and behavioral changes.

How you can help:

1. Communicate with care and empathy for the feelings of distress. Avoid criticism or blame.
2. Talk openly and honestly about emotional distress and suicide. Having open conversations may lead to a referral for help.
3. Listen to what is being said and take it seriously.
4. Encourage the person to call or text one of the crisis hotline numbers listed below.

Weed of the Month

Poison Hemlock

Conium maculatum
Truly a "Noxious" Weed

ID Tips:

- Parsley/carrot like flowers/ leaves
- Purple blotches on stem
- Can grow up to 6'+ tall!
- Bloom time: May - Aug

Poison Hemlock is Highly Toxic! All parts of this plants are lethal in small quantities if ingested. Even mowing the plant poses hazards: the sap is phytotoxic, reacting on skin to form a sunburn and a scar that can last months!

It is lethal to livestock in small quantities, but is only consumed if other forage is very scarce.

Poison Hemlock lives in sunny disturbed areas, like drainages, roadsides etc.

Characteristics of older forests can buffer effects of climate change for some bird species

By STEVE LUNDEBERG

Old-growth forests and managed forests with old-growth characteristics can provide relief from climate change for some bird species, research by the Oregon State University College of Forestry suggests.

The study led by former Oregon State doctoral student Hankyu Kim builds on earlier research led by co-author Matt Betts, a professor in the Department of Forest Ecosystems and Society, that showed that old forests with big trees and a diversity of tree sizes and species can offer refuge to some types of birds threatened by a warming climate.

The latest findings bear important implications on conservation decisions regarding mature forests, the scientists say, and have even greater relevance because of the new Inflation Reduction Act, which calls for increased resources to map and protect the United States’ remaining old-growth forests.

The research, published today in Global Change Biology, looked at forest “microclimates.” Microclimates are local atmospheric conditions, in areas ranging from a few square meters to many square kilometers, that differ from those of the surrounding area.

Microclimates tend to be most pronounced in areas of rugged and varied topography such as coastal areas, islands and mountains like Oregon’s Cascade Range, home to the HJ Andrews Experimental Forest where Kim and Betts did their research.

The OSU scientists and collaborators from Oregon State and the United States Forest Service analyzed eight years of breeding bird abundance information from an HJ Andrews watershed as well as subcanopy temperature readings and ground- and LiDAR-based vegetation data. They concluded that at locations with cooler microclimates, some bird species tended to do better – a phenomenon they describe as the “buffering effect.”

Some species also fared better in places where the forest had more compositional diversity, referred to as the “insurance effect” because diversity helps ensure the presence of the insects the birds feed on when they most need nutrition and energy – during breeding season.

“To my knowledge, this is the first empirical evidence of any microclimate effect on songbird populations, and of the insurance effect on free-ranging birds,” said Kim, now a postdoctoral researcher at the University of Wisconsin-Madison. “Each species may have a slightly different range of thermal optima – the range of thermal conditions they feel comfortable with – and it could be the same for the interaction between forest ecosystems and birds.”

Under the current warming regime, he explained, some birds interact with the forest ecosystem to their benefit, while others will find it hard to breed there because the availability of food has changed for the worse.

The scientists found that for five of the 20 bird species they analyzed, abundance trends tended to be either neutral or less negative in cooler microclimates, and the negative effects of warming on two species were reduced in locations with greater forest compositional diversity.

The five species benefiting from the buffering effect were the Swainson’s thrush, chestnut-backed chickadee, hermit warbler, varied thrush and Wilson’s warbler. The Wilson’s warbler and the red crossbill were the two with statistical evidence of benefiting from the insurance effect.

“If plants leaf out earlier in warm microclimates, causing arthropods to emerge earlier, there is a danger of migratory birds mistiming their breeding with peak food availability,” Betts said. “Since leaf-out timing varies by plant species, forests with more plant diversity often have a longer period of insect availability.”

The other 14 birds in the analyses were the dark-eyed junco, hermit thrush, McGillivray’s warbler, Pacific-slope flycatcher, brown creeper, black-throated gray warbler, golden-crowned kinglet, Hammond’s flycatcher, hairy woodpecker, Pacific wren, red-breasted nuthatch, red-breasted sapsucker, western tanager and yellow-rumped warbler.

Seven of the 20 species showed overall declines in abundance over the eight-year study, 2011-18. Nine showed increases and four did display a detectable trend.

“Trends of abundance of five species declined at greater rates in warmer locations than in cooler areas,” Kim said. “That suggests microclimates within forested landscapes do provide refugia for those species. Declining species that are sensitive to warm conditions, like the Wilson’s warbler, hermit warbler and chestnut-backed chickadee, seemed to benefit the most from refugia effects.”

Betts found it interesting that the study led by Kim – whose results Betts said were “collected independently and more rigorously” than those in the research he led in 2017 – showed the same species in decline and the same species benefiting from forests with old-growth characteristics.

“The earlier paper was less well done because we didn’t measure microclimate directly,” Betts said. “Our hypothesis was that microclimate buffering should work for a high proportion of the declining species. This current paper is the first time that’s been shown.”

Brenda McComb and Sarah Frey of the OSU College of Forestry and David Bell of the Forest Service’s Pacific Northwest Research Station also took part in this research, which was supported by the National Science Foundation.

OBITUARIES

Richard A. Nauert

February 03, 1942 – July 31, 2022

Richard was born in Oak Park, Illinois and grew up there and in Plainfield, New Jersey; St Louis Park, Minnesota; and Prairie Village, Kansas. He graduated from Shawnee Mission East High School and Kansas State University. He served in the US Army and was honorably discharged as a Captain. His name will be added to the Department of Defense Honor Roll in Washington, D.C. to commemorate his military service.

He worked for Metropolitan Life and Jim Palmer Trucking in Wichita, Kansas. He moved to Reedsport, Oregon in 2010. He was an avid woodworker and design carpenter; was a member of the NRA; and enjoyed target shooting, hunting, fishing, hot-air ballooning, and reading.

He is survived by three brothers, Paul Nauert of Santa Barbara, CA, Peter Nauert of Overland Park, KS, and Robert Nauert of Rocklin, CA; one sister, Nancy Tubbs of Portland, OR; four nieces; six great nieces; and one great nephew.

He was cremated at Dunes Memorial Chapel. His ashes will be spread on Sandia Peak in Albuquerque, New Mexico. In his memory, donations may be made to the American Heart Association or the American Cancer Society.

DEAR ABBY

By Abigail Van Buren

WIFE FIGHTS LOSING BATTLE VERSUS HUSBAND AND HIS MOM

DEAR ABBY: My husband inherited a nasty habit from his mother. He calls people "crazy" to discredit them so he can win arguments and stifle discussion. I have told him it's lazy to pass judgment on someone that way. It also shows the world how ignorant he is, because he thinks he'll win every argument by playing the crazy card -- a personal attack.

I think it's immature and immoral to take advantage of others' bias against mental health issues. He has done it to me in front of people. I have said, "You wish!" right back at him. It has reached the point that I think he's character deficient.

His misogyny is exhausting to fight. His mother is even worse. She throws in her armchair diagnosis, which is always "schizophrenia." My husband's argument is an emotional one and too pervasive to enjoy time with him. Any idea how I can fight these below-the-belt punches? -- DEFINITELY NOT "CRAZY"

DEAR DEFINITELY NOT: That shouldn't be too hard. When your husband acts this way, don't engage with him. Ignore his comments, leave the room or the house. Spend less time with him and NO time with his mother. And while you're doing that, ask yourself why you tolerate the disrespect you're receiving from both of them.

DEAR ABBY: My brother is old enough to work on the farm, but he refuses. He goes to school, comes back angry and doesn't like to be told what to do. Everyone has to work except him. We have tried time and time again to get him to help out. We appease him, but he only gets worse. How can we get him to develop good work ethics? It hurts when we ask him to do something and he gets angry and starts swearing. All we want is for him to help out. -- GOOD WORKER IN MINNESOTA

DEAR WORKER: I wish you had been clearer about who "we" is. If it's you and your siblings, there isn't much you can do to teach your brother the lessons he needs to learn. However, if it's your parents you are referring to, there is plenty THEY can do to set rules and enforce them while their son lives under their roof. Hint: It involves rewards for good behavior and consequences if he is disrespectful and noncompliant.

DEAR ABBY: When my husband and I were dating, he introduced me to the sport of cycling. Before that, it had just been a means of transportation. A few years of training later, it turns out I'm actually pretty good at it. I have been on the podium three times this year, but he has not. He is definitely jealous. Should I stop competing? -- BICYCLE GAL IN MICHIGAN

DEAR BICYCLE GAL: A man who loves his wife wants to be the wind beneath her wings, not an anchor around her ankles. You should not have to give up something at which you excel in order to salve your husband's childish ego. Rather than give you heartburn for your success, he should be praising you for your progress. Shame on him.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Leave political signs alone

Political vandalism happens every election cycle. And some of our neighbors are busy stirring an undercurrent of political mischief. Is pulling an opponent’s campaign signs really a harmless prank?

Basic high school civics teaches kids that tampering with or removing political signs is inconsistent with our traditions in a constitutional republic. It’s not funny or cute. Everyone should know that mischief against a political opponent’s property is prohibited. Misdemeanor theft and trespassing are substantial crimes affecting one’s future prospects. Others can be implicated because abetting is also a crime.

But misdemeanors are just the tip of the criminal iceberg. Political signs are protected speech. Removing them violates a candidate’s federal constitutional rights and the right to free speech held by private property owners. Interference and dirty tricks are a tradition in some corners. But it’s not only detrimental to the public process, it’s illegal. Informed voters recognize what candidates represent. Some partisans act like they’re above the law, especially when they look the other way, and wink. Vote like law and order matters!

GUEST COLUMN

A Word, Please: Like or as if

By JUNE CASAGRANDE

“Grammar error — July 7 column” read the subject line of an email from a reader named Bill. The body text was concise:

“As written: ‘... Jovin said she feels like she’s the beneficiary.’ Should be: ‘... Jovin said she feels as if she’s the beneficiary.’”

In other words, Bill was saying I should get rid of “like” and use “as if” instead.

This isn’t the first time I’ve heard that “like” is wrong in a sentence like mine. And the people who take this position usually have good reason. Perhaps they read Eric Partridge’s “Usage and Abusage,” first published in 1942, which says: “‘Like’ for ‘as if’ is incorrect.” Partridge cites as an example of incorrect use this passage from “The Dagnet” by John G. Brandon: “Carted her out limp — looked like a chloroform-pad had been at work.”

Or maybe they read Theodore Bernstein’s influential 1965 book “The Careful Writer”: “‘Like’ cannot stand for ‘as if,’” Bernstein insisted, “except for a few idiomatic phrases such as ‘The car looks like new’ and ‘They cheered like crazy.’”

Other popular texts in the 20th century took the same position. Around that time, a far-reaching ad campaign created controversy about “like” by declaring “Winston tastes good, like a cigarette should.” That should be “as,” not “like,” sticklers argued.

All these objections center on the fact that “like” is a preposition. A preposition takes a noun or pronoun as its object, for example “chicken” in “tastes like chicken.”

Compare that to “as,” which is a conjunction. Conjunctions can introduce not just nouns but whole clauses, complete with subject and verb, for example, the “you know” in “as you know.”

The Winston ad used “like” to introduce the whole clause “a cigarette should.” My July column used “like” to introduce the whole clause “she’s” (which is just a short form of the clause “she is”). If you can’t use “like” to introduce a clause, then the ad copywriter and I were wrong. But we weren’t.

First of all, like so many other words, “like” is more than just one part of speech. Look it up in the dictionary and you’ll see that, yes, it’s a preposition, but it’s also a verb, an adjective, a noun and (here it comes) a conjunction. So you can use “like” to introduce a whole clause.

But dictionaries reveal yet another reason why these objections to “like” are misguided: “like” can literally mean “as if.”

Among its many definitions of “like,” Merriam-Webster’s Collegiate dictionary lists “as if.” So does American Heritage Dictionary. So does Webster’s New World College Dictionary. So does Dictionary.com, which adds: “‘Like’ as a conjunction meaning ... ‘as if’ (‘It looks like it will rain’) has been used for nearly 500 years and by many distinguished literary and intellectual figures. Since the mid-19th century there have been objections, often vehement, to these uses. Nevertheless, such uses are almost universal today in all but the most formal speech and writing.”

So on the one hand, you have widely respected authorities like Bernstein and Partridge saying you can’t use “like” to mean “as” or “as if.” On the other hand, you have dictionaries supplying two reasons why you can. Who’s right?

Picking sides in language disputes is easier than you might guess because no one has the power to prohibit a usage. So if some respected authorities say a usage is wrong and other respected authorities say it’s OK, the “wrong” camp is out of line.

Because dictionaries say you can use “like” to mean “as if,” and also because they say that “like” is sometimes a conjunction, you can use “like” like you like.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Can we live with electric mountain bikes on trails?

By MOLLY ABSOLON

The first time I saw an electric bike — better known as an ebike — I was struggling up a hill. Suddenly, a silver-haired man came whizzing by in regular city clothes. I felt a wave of envy as he left me in the dust.

That was probably five years ago, and since then ebike use has exploded. In 2020, ebike sales in the United States for just the month of June totaled roughly $90 million, up 190 percent from the previous June.

It’s hard to remember, but regular mountain bikes didn’t become commercially available until the 1980s, and when the early adopters hit trails previously used only by hikers and horseback riders, conflicts happened fast.

People claimed the bikes increased erosion. They worried about collisions and scaring horses. They theorized that mountain bikes would frighten wildlife. Today, those same arguments are being used against electric mountain bikes.

Once again, the controversy seems to stem from the fear of change, perhaps some arrogance and maybe a little jealousy. After all, since I suffered to get to the top of the climb on my own power, shouldn’t you?

In 2017, the International Mountain Bike Association, which had said that ebikes should be considered motorized vehicles, softened its stance. Instead, it proposed that local land managers and user groups should determine — on a case-by-case basis — whether to allow ebikes on naturally surfaced trails. Many members canceled their memberships. Some comments were harsh.

One wrote, “If you’re too old to still ride the trails you love, do as many beforehand, reminisce about the good old days and encourage the young. Don’t throw them and our public land under the bus.” That kind of attitude does not bode well for land managers to find an easy compromise.

So, what are the impacts of electric mountain bikes. Do they harm trails, or cause more accidents?

In 2015, the International Mountain Bike Association studied the environmental impacts of mountain bikes, both electric and self-propelled, and found no appreciable differences between the two in terms of soil displacement on trails. Overall, bike impacts were similar to the impacts of hikers.

MOLLY ABSOLON

Horses, motorcycles and off-road vehicles do much more damage to trails.

As for problems caused by speed, traffic studies show that accidents and their severity escalate as differences in speed increase. But do electrified bikes go that much faster than traditional bikes?

To find out, Tahoe National Forest measured the top speeds reached by intermediate and advanced riders using both kinds of bikes. Differences on the downhills were small. On uphills, traditional bikers averaged 5-8 mph, while electric mountain bikes traveled 8-13 mph. This was a difference, but not enough of a difference to cause more accidents, especially if bikers alert others to their presence and ride in control.

Rachel Fussell, program manager of the nonprofit PeopleForBikes, says that more than a battery boost, speed on trails reflects rider skill as well as trail design. She believes that all users observing proper trail etiquette would avert most potential conflicts.

Celeste Young has been a biker all her life and now coaches mountain biking. Her fleet of bicycles has recently grown to include an electric mountain bike.

“The most negative thing I’ve heard is, ‘Oh, you’re cheating,’” she says. “But it’s just another way to be out there. You get an extra boost going up these really hard trails, so it makes a challenging trail fun, rather than demoralizing.”

It’s a puzzling notion that someone accused her of cheating. It would be one thing if you secretly put a motor in your bike during a race, but when it’s an amateur rider going out for fun and exercise, how is having an electronic boost cheating?

The whole thing reminds me — a skier — of the controversy that erupted after snowboards appeared at ski resorts. They were new and fast, and their rhythm on the slope was different than the rhythm of people on skis.

We didn’t like them, and I doubt they liked us. But we’ve worked it out. Now, public land managers face the knotty problem of how much access to allow ebikes, and where, or whether to segregate them to their own trails. Welcome to the crowded West.

Invitation to Bid for Marina
Redevelopment Project

The Port of Bandon ("Port") requests proposals from qualified design-build professionals for design and construction of its Marina Redevelopment Project ("the Project"), located in Bandon, Oregon. The Port intends that any contract awarded pursuant to this RFP will be a Design-Build contract, an alternative form of public improvement, as defined under Oregon law. The facility is 30% designed and holds state and federal permits. The Project consists of completing the design and constructing a new facility to replace the existing Bandon marina. The new facility is expected to better respond to the needs of boaters and meet modern safety and environmental specifications. The Project may also include dredging up to 39,000 cubic yards of sediment from the marina basin and sport basin combined. Dredging will be separately proposed as an added alternative to the design and construction components. Dredging permits are pending. The Port is a public entity subject to Oregon's public contracting laws, specifically ORS subchapters 279A, 279B, and 279C. This solicitation and any resulting contract will be subject to these laws. Any contract awarded pursuant to this RFP is subject to Oregon's requirements for the payment of prevailing wages [ORS 279C.800, et seq.]. Qualification- Based Selection (QBS) requirements do not apply. Because the Project will be partially funded using federal funds, federal requirements may also apply. Proposals must be received by 5 p.m., on October 17, 2022, at the Port office, 390 First Street SW, Bandon Oregon, 97411, or by email at portmanager@portofbandon.com (link sends e-mail). A mandatory pre-offer site visit will be held at 1 p.m. on September 16, 2022, at the project site. Proposals will be considered only from individuals or firms represented at the site visit. The full Request for Proposals description with supporting documents are available on the Port website at https:// www.portofbandon.com/rfps. NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING

In the Matter of an Ordinance Amending the Coos County Code to Create a New Article Thirteen Governing Community Development, Land Use, and Buildings and Construction. Notice is hereby given that the Coos County Board of Commissioners will hold a public hearing on September 20, 2022 at 9:30 a.m. in the large conference room of the Owen Building, located at 201 N. Adams St., Coquille, Oregon. The purpose of this hearing is to consider Coos County Ordinance 22- 08-007PL, amending the Coos County Code by creating a new Coos County Community Development Department to administer the County's land use and building programs. The County is assuming the building program from the State of Oregon Building Codes Division on October 1, 2022, and the Ordinance would combine the building program with the County's existing land use program. The Ordinance also authorizes fees for the Coos County building and construction program and adopts rules for the operation of the building and construction program. Copies of the proposed ordinance are available at the office of the Coos County Board of Commissioners, located in the Owen Building at 225 N. Adams St., Coquille, Oregon.

Both the beneficiary and the trustee have elected to sell the said real property to satisfy the obligations secured by said trust deed and notice has been recorded pursuant to Section 86.752(3) of Oregon Revised Statutes. There is a default by grantor or other person owing an obligation, performance of which is secured by the trust deed, or by the successor in interest, with respect to provisions therein which authorize sale in the event of such provision. The default for which foreclosure is made is grantor's failure to pay when due the following sum: TOTAL REQUIRED TO REINSTATE: $44,057.44 TOTAL REQUIRED TO PAYOFF: $226,788.97 Because of interest, late charges, and other charges that may vary from day-to- day, the amount due on the day you pay may be greater. It will be necessary for you to contact the Trustee before the time you tender reinstatement or the payoff amount so that you may be advised of the exact amount you will be required to pay. By reason of the default, the beneficiary has declared all sums owing on the obligation secured by the trust deed immediately due and payable, those sums being the following, to-wit: The installments of principal and interest which became due on 5/1/- 2019, and all subsequent installments of principal and interest through the date of this Notice, plus amounts that are due for late charges, delinquent property taxes, insurance premiums, advances made on senior liens, taxes and/or insurance, trustee's fees, and any attorney fees and court costs arising from or associated with the beneficiaries efforts to protect and preserve its security, all of which must be paid as a condition of reinstatement, including all sums that shall accrue through reinstatement or pay-off. Nothing in this notice shall be construed as a waiver of any fees owing to the Beneficiary under the Deed of Trust pursuant to the terms of the loan documents. Whereof, notice hereby is given that QUALITY LOAN SERVICE CORPORATION OF WASHINGTON, the undersigned trustee will on 12/6/2022 at the hour of 11:00 AM, Standard of Time, as established by section 187.110, Oregon Revised Statutes, At the Main Entrance to the Coos County Courthouse, located at 250 North Baxter Street, Coquille, OR 97423 County of COOS, State of Oregon, sell at public auction to the highest bidder for cash the interest in the said described real property which the grantor had or had power to convey at the time of the execution by him of the said trust deed, together with any interest which the grantor or his successors in interest acquired after the execution of said trust deed, to satisfy the foregoing obligations thereby secured and the costs and expenses of sale, including a reasonable charge by the trustee. Notice is further given that any person named in Section 86.778 of Oregon Revised Statutes has the right to have the foreclosure proceeding dismissed and the trust deed reinstated by payment to the beneficiary of the entire amount then due (other than such portion of said principal as would not then be due had no default occurred), together with the costs, trustee's and attorney's fees and curing any other default complained of in the Notice of Default by tendering the performance required under the

McGarigal is fastest in Sunset Bay Trail Run

After more than 13 miles on difficult trails, the top finishers in the longest race of last week-end's Sunset Bay Trail Run were separated by just a second.

The popular Labor Day Week-end event of the South Coast Running Club included the cliff-side trails linking Sunset Bay, Shore Acres and Cape Arago state parks.

Derek McGarigal edged Alex Garcia-Silver in the half-marathon, which included running both sides of challenging pack trails linking the back side of Cape Arago State Park with trails beyond the gardens at Shore Acres. The runners got to the bottom of the pack trail and turned around and went back over it in the other direction, doubling the challenge.

McGarigal finished in 1 hour, 46 minutes and 52 seconds, one second faster than Garcia-Silver. Jough Goudelock was third in 1:55:26 and two others also finished in under two hours — Brian Schofield (1:56:31) and Moises Garcia (1:58:23).

Brooklyn Perry was fastest among women in 2:17:54. She was followed by Elisabeth Boersma (2:19:52) and Taelor Lang (2:39:42).

Female runners made up most of the competitors in the 15-kilometer race, which also included the pack trail from Cape Arago to Shore Acres, but only in one direction

Keefe Burcher was the first finisher overall, in 1:32:09. He was followed by female winner

Simmie Muth, who finished in 1:33:40.

The next three finishers also were women — Aimee Averett (1:36:22), Amber Yester (1:40:41) and Sara Buskerud (1:48:19) and women were nine of the first 11 overall.

Mike Westlake was second among men (1:49:32) and Jeremie Latonio third (2:10:39).

Female runners also had a strong showing in the 4-mile race, which included nearly 35 runners and walkers, with six of the top 10 finishers overall.

Todd Sanders was the winner in 34:31, followed by the first woman, Lexie Jones-Ortega, in 34:58.

Jonathan Cutlip was third (35:09), followed by the second and third female runners — 14-year-old Riley Mullinax (35:27) and Alyson Barker (37:00) — and the third male finisher, Caleb Taylor (37:01).

Whiskey Run Trail Run

Runners don't have to wait long for another shot at trail running, this time in a brand new event.

On Oct. 1, the South Coast Running Club will hold its first event on the renowned mountain bike system near Whiskey Run.

The system is open year-round to mountain bikers, but will be reserved exclusively for participants in the trail run on race day, with all events starting and ending at the main Whiskey Run trailhead on Whiskey Run Road.

There will be three races. The roughly 5-mile Whiskey Ginger race includes one full loop on premium trails.

The Double Shot, which will be about 10 miles, includes two times around the loop.

The Shirley Temple, roughly 1.5 miles, will be a shorter loop, but still challenging, and is described as "great for walkers and adventurous families wishing to wet their whistles (in trail running)."

The 10-mile run starts first, at 9 a.m., followed by the 5-mile run at 9:30 and the 1.5-mile event at 9:45.

Maps of the three courses are available on the running club website, which also is where people can register early.

The fee for early registration is $15 for club members and $25 for non-members. It increases by $5 on race day.

The fee for students is $5.

Prefontaine Memorial Run is next weekend

The annual Prefontaine Memorial Run is next weekend, and it has a national flavor this year after the two previous events were canceled due to the ongoing COVID-19 pandemic.

The event that honors the late Marshfield graduate and running legend Steve Prefontaine starts at 10 a.m. on Saturday, Sept. 16. It is the 42nd year for the race, which begins in downtown Coos Bay and finishes on Steve Prefontaine Track at Marshfield High School's Pete Susick Stadium.

Pre set his last American record on that track and 50 years ago competed in the summer Olympics, finishing fourth in an epic 5,000-meter final.

For the third time, the run has been named the national championship 10-kilometer race for the Road Runners Club of America.

The race previously was designated the championship 10K in both 2020 and 2021 and subsequently canceled each year because of the ongoing COVID-19 pandemic.

The RRCA Championship Event Series is one of the oldest distance running traditions in the United States, dating back to 1958, race organizers said. The goal of the series is to shine a spotlight on well-run community-based events, and to promote the sport by recognizing the top performing runners in the open, 40+, 50+ and 60+ age group categories for both men and women.

The Prefontaine Memorial Run begins with a stand-alone high school 5-kilometer cross country race followed by the 10-kilometer community run and a 2-mile fun run/walk. Entrants can register online

The Prefontaine Memorial Run will return to Coos Bay next weekend and will serve as a national championship 10K run.

by logging on to the Prefontaine website at www.prefointainerun.com.

Proceeds from the run help the Prefontaine Foundation accomplish its mission of supporting track and field and cross country athletes through grants to local high schools and scholarships to deserving athletes. The Foundation also sponsors and provides financial support to the Prefontaine Track Club. Several club members competed at the recent Junior Olympics national meet in California.

The Prefontaine Memorial Run is held under the direction of the Prefontaine Foundation with community-based support provided by sponsorships from Tower Ford, Pacific Properties, Banner Bank, Advanced Health, Farr's Hardware, North Bend Medical Center, Wild Coast Running Company, Vend West Services, Nasburg Huggins Insurance and Nike.

SCHHC offers free PSA tests during Prostate Cancer Awareness Month

In 2021, over 248,500 Americans were diagnosed with prostate cancer. Even as tremendous advancements are made in cancer research and treatment, prostate cancer is the second most commonly diagnosed cancer and the second-leading cause of cancer deaths among our nation's fathers, sons, husbands and brothers.

Today, one in eight men in the United States will be diagnosed with prostate cancer in his lifetime — often without any previous signs or symptoms.

During National Prostate Cancer Awareness Month, Southern Coos Hospital & Health Center rededicates its efforts to support those diagnosed with prostate cancer through research, education and access to prevention, treatment and follow-up care and support.

During the month of September, Southern Coos Hospital & Health Center wants to help people take charge of their health and is offering free PSA testing with an order from a primary care provider. Get same day results.

Everyone is welcome to pick up a free Prostate Cancer Awareness pin in the Southern Coos Hospital & Health Center Gift Shop to support the cause!

While prostate cancer is a very serious disease, it has also become very survivable. In fact, over 3.1 million men in the United States who have been diagnosed at some points in their lives are still alive today. The key is early detection.

For those over the age of 50 (earlier if you have a family history) it is time to start discussing routine prostate cancer screenings as well as establishing baseline PSA levels with your primary care provider.

For more information and to make an appointment for a PSA test, call Southern Coos Hospital at 541-347-2426.

All men and their families can learn the latest information on prostate cancer at www.cancer.gov/types/prostate and www.cdc.gov/cancer/prostate.

Together, we can increase awareness of this cancer, and improve the care and well-being of those impacted by this disease.

Community invited to meet with SCHHC CEO Raymond Hino

The Bandon Chamber of Commerce invites the Bandon-area community to join them at the September Business After Hours featuring a Meet & Greet with Southern Coos Hospital & Health Center CEO Raymond Hino.

The event will be held from 5:30-7 p.m. Wednesday, Sept. 14, at the Bandon Fisheries Warehouse Club at Farm & Sea, 250 First St. SW on the waterfront. Everyone is welcome; you do not have to be a chamber member to attend.

Hino will share his experiences of his first few months here in Bandon and what the future holds for Southern Coos Hospital & Health Center.

"I am so thankful to the Chamber of Commerce for giving me this opportunity to meet community residents, business owners and anyone interested in the future of health care in Bandon and Southern Coos County," Hino said. "I can't wait to share my vision for the future of our hospital with the community."

There will be live music, complimentary appetizers, coffee and iced tea, along with a cash bar offering wine and beer.

"We are looking forward to enjoying our community members, meeting new faces and seeing our friends and business associates after a long summer season," said Chamber Executive Director Margaret Pounder.

Please RSVP to the Bandon Chamber at 541-347-9616 so they can get an accurate count of attendees.

Bowman Chosen as Clinical Employee of the Month Southern Coos Hospital

Erin Bowman's helpful attitude has been recognized by her peers at Southern Coos Hospital & Health Center, where she was chosen as clinical Employee of the Month for July.

Erin joined SCHHC on Sept. 22, 2021, as an Ultrasound Technologist II in the hospital's Medical Imaging Department. She was nominated for Employee of the Month because "she is a great team player and never hesitates to help her co-workers when needed," the nomination stated.

"She takes pride in her work and it shows with the high quality of patient care she provides. Erin always has a positive attitude and treats everyone with respect and kindness. She is a great technologist and goes above and beyond with her patients.

"Erin goes the extra mile for everyone — patients and co-workers — and we appreciate her for all she does for our team," the nomination concluded.

As part of the Employee of the Month award, Erin was awarded a certificate and eight hours of paid time off. Her name will also be placed on a ballot for the Employee of the Year award in December.

Asher named Non-Clinical Employee of the Month at Southern Coos Hospital

Bringing new and old recipes to life for Southern Coos Hospital & Health Center's Dietary Department is something Nick Asher does well.

That's one reason Nick was chosen as non-clinical Employee of the Month for July.

Nick has been a cook in the Dietary Department since October 2021. He was nominated because "he really shines every day in his role and is a valuable member and a real team player of the Dietary Department," the nomination stated.

"He is always offering to help his dietary team co-workers and his manager as well as any other employee who asks for his assistance. His culinary talents and cooking creations produce aromas which emanate through the hallways.

"He jumps in to help by taking on extra shifts to cover any staff shortage situation. Nick has a wonderful, happy personality and he gets along with everyone and is a real superstar on the Dietary staff," the nomination concluded.

As part of the Employee of the Month award, Nick was awarded a certificate and eight hours of paid time off. His name will also be placed on a ballot for the Employee of the Year award in December.

As I See It: The Fire of 1936

By MARY SCHAMEHORN

The first picture is a grim reminder of what the bay looked like after the Fire of 1936. As you can see in the background, people had started to rebuild on Second Street, and side streets like Baltimore, but the debris in the harbor told the story, and it wasn't a pretty picture. The building at left was built by Ernie Panter and today is the Big Wheel.

An editorial, written by my grandfather in February of 1938, is titled "Should Remove the Debris."

"Bandon's fire-razed area is littered with debris. Business and residence lots alike are a mass of twisted iron, brick, and concrete. The iron is bright with rust, a constant reminder of the flames that wrought havoc in September 1936.

"It is time that this debris is cleared away; that the lots that once were occupied by busy mercantile establishments and by happy homes be at least permitted to enjoy the wholesome covering provided by Mother Nature."

The editorial goes on to explain that the City is hoping to have a WPA crew come to Bandon and help with the clean up.

"It may not be generally understood, but it is a fact that the reason Bandon beach did not attract the tourists and the weekend visitors during the past season, as it did before the fire, is because of the unsightly view that nauseated visitors upon their arrival to the city. The depressive reaction of the debris-littered landscape has been more than visitors could stand, especially those who knew Bandon as it was before the fire; those who looked forward each year to spending their vacation at the local beach."

The second picture, of cranberry harvest equipment, illustrates a response by a leading cranberry grower to another editorial by my grandfather, Oct. 29, 1953, which talked about the Cranberry Festival (the seventh year for the event) and asked "Why don't the cranberry people take more active part in the Festival?"

And in a subsequent Western World, grower Ethel (Mrs. Leslie) Kranick answered the question.

"In 1941 a war broke out, the men went to war. The women were called to industrial and war occupations. In this particular locality the lumber industry boomed because of the need for lumber -- and cranberry growers were left without labor to harvest their crops. "Cranberry growers are not easily discouraged so they invented machines so they could harvest the berries themselves. They had to compete with wages paid lumber workers to get any help at all and that help is still very scarce. So, when festival time rolls around cranberry growers and their families are out struggling against time and weather to get their crops harvested and when night comes they are too darn tired to get enthusiastic about festivals, much as they would like to help.

"The festival idea was originated by the National Cranberry Association (later Ocean Spray) as an advertising stunt while over-coming a huge surplus that had depressed the market. Nearly all cranberry growers help to pay for this advertising found in many national magazines -- so the advertising gained for the home town is not of monetary value to the grower.

"Do the rose growers run the Rose Festival?" asked

Mrs. Kranick (who married Walter Reichenbach after Leslie died) in closing her letter.

I love this third photo, probably taken during the cranberry festival in 1956 of Mrs. Nellie Biggar's first grade. I can only identify four of the students, but hopefully some of my readers will recognize the others. The boy third from left is Reg Pullen; next to him is Rich Gorman. The boy in front of the power pole is Tim McCue, and the little boy leaning over the edge is Rick Howard.

In the early days, the festival was held in October or late September, which gave each class time to build a float for the parade ... or actually gave the parents and the teachers time to come up with a float, and some of them were absolutely grand.

There is a lot going on this weekend with the annual Bandon Cranberry Festival, Cranberry Country Jamboree, opening Thursday night, with the coronation of the queen at the Sprague Theater beginning at 7. Tickets are $15 and can be purchased at the door. Princesses are Hollie Minkler, KayDence Augsburg and Rhiannon Green. Most of the events are being held at City Park.

I am only going to highlight what for years have been the main events, but there are lots of other things going on this weekend, as well. You can find the information at bandon.com or coosevents.com.

The Tigers will host Colton in the annual Cranberry Bowl Game on Friday night, beginning at 6 p.m. The queen and her court will be presented at halftime, and the top three Cranberry Kitchen winners will be announced. This will be Bandon's first football as the game scheduled for last Friday with Sheridan was cancelled because Sheridan did not have enough players to field a team.

Named grand marshals of the Grand Festival Parade, slated for 10 a.m. Saturday (gathering on Ninth near the high school), will be Patricia Seidler and Cathy Underdown, both being honored for their long years of volunteerism.

Seidler, who recently celebrated her 98th birthday, moved to Bandon in 2014 to be near her daughter, Madeline Seymour, who is president of the City Council.

Cathy Underdown and her late husband, Steve, moved to Bandon in January 1999 with their infant twins, Darby and Max.

The first picture is a grim reminder of what the bay looked like after the Fire of 1936. As you can see in the background, people had started to rebuild on Second Street, and side streets like Baltimore, but the debris in the harbor told the story, and it wasn't a pretty picture. The building at left was built by Ernie Panter and today is the Big Wheel.

The parade will travel north down Highway 101, and through Old Town.

There will be live music throughout the day in the park, and people are urged to bring their lawn chairs and blankets to sit on the grass.

Bands slated to play on the north stage are Tiller of the Moon (11 a.m.-1 p.m.); Paul Bernadon (1:30-3); Sly & Co. (3:30-5:30); and on the main stage, South Fork Four (11-1); Rogue Strings (1:30-3); Hecktic Week (3:30 to 5:30) and The High Ductibles, 6:30 to 9:30 for the evening dance. Live music will also take place on Sunday on both stages beginning at 11 a.m.

The cranberry car show will be in the park from noon to 5 p.m.

There will be plenty of opportunity to shop, as the Old Town Marketplace will be open Friday and Saturday, 11 to 3; the Festival Vendors Market will be in City Park Saturday (11-5) and Sunday (10-4); and some of the Bandon merchants will be participating in Cranberry City, with special sales. Look for signs in participating merchants' windows. The Festival Food Court will be open from 11-9 on Saturday and from 10-4 on Sunday.

Cranberry festival memorabilia will be on display at the Bandon Historical Museum Friday, Saturday and Sunday, with free admission. On Sunday, the Bandon Lions Cranberry Run will take place at 4 p.m.

I was sorry to learn of the passing of Lupe Converse, 78, who has lived in Bandon for many years with her husband Allen and their family, who are very active in Holy Trinity Catholic Church. She is survived by her husband; sons, Steve, Kevin, Kenneth and Michael and daughter Sarah. Their son Brian died in November of 2020 at his home in Colorado Springs.

Now that the deadline to file for city offices has passed, it is safe to announce that all of us will be running unopposed. I will be running for the two-year term for mayor; incumbents Madeline Seymour and Chris Powell have filed for re-election, and Josh Adamson, a port executive, has filed for the seat now held by Peter Braun, who is not running again. Council seats are for four years.

Fred Gernandt posted this week that the sale of his gravel lot on First Street has closed. Gernandt said the new owner plans to build a hotel on the property, and we understand it is Marriott that will be coming to Bandon.

I don't know the details, but I do know that it will be a big boost to the Old Town merchants who will have a built-in market of potential customers virtually at their doorstep. And they won't have to find a place to park.

Speaking of parking, the city has completed the paving and striping of the lot which is between First and Second Street (101) at Fillmore Avenue. It became necessary to purchase land for parking once the Gernandt lot was no longer available for lease.

The VFW Flag Committee is hoping the public will assist them in purchasing a 10x20' building in which to store all of their cemetery flags. To date, the 152 flags have been stored in a person's garage, and he needs to reclaim the space.

The Flag Committee is seeking donations, which are tax deductible, to assist with the cost of the project, expected to be about $8,500. People can send their donations to Bandon VFW Post 3440, 55352 Bates Road, Bandon, or call Harry Stephens at 541-294-1048 (leave a message if he's not home).

As expected, August was pretty dry with only 0.12 inches of rain reported, but that was still over twice the 0.05 recorded last August.

conservative, Briggs said his third objective is to spend the city's money wisely.

"I want you to feel that your city's resources are spent wisely and on that which matter most to all the citizens," Briggs said.

Briggs said he is confident that North Bend is ready for change, and he is the person to lead the way.

"I've talked to a lot of people the last three weeks, and they all agree it's time to have a change," he said. "I'm 77 year full of vim and vigor, and I have more left in me."

As he begins the campaign, Briggs said he is eager to hear from the voters about what they want in the community.

"I don't know all the answers and I know I need to draw from the wisdom of the people," he said.

"There's a lot of wisdom."

Umpqua harbor prospects good

People pleased after visit of army engineers

Officials look over the harbor and give encouragement as to the prospects

The people of Reedsport and Gardiner were pleased with the result of the recent visit of the army engineers, Col. Schultz and Major Mayo.

"This is the first time that the army engineers who are newly appointed have had an opportunity to visit this section of the state and view the conditions of the Lower Umpqua river and the feasibility of making this one of the best harbors on the coast.

The gentlemen were surprised at the volume of water and the tidal area of the Lower Umpqua river and appeared to be very much interested in the proposed development of the harbor and the completion of the north jetty.

The question of locating and dredging a channel through the shoals that to a great degree obstructs the navigation of vessels which draw over sixteen feet of water between this point and the bar were to some extent discussed. This will be solely a matter for the engineers themselves to be decided upon in the future. At the present the government engineers are interested only in the finishing of the construction of the north jetty.

Bandon team is county champion

Bandon wins all the final games from Marshfield

Local players make a bad showing and Bandon men simply outclass them

The Bandon baseball team is the champion of Coos county. Bandon and Marshfield played off for three games to decide the championship. Marshfield went to pieces and did not make a good showing at all. The game at Bandon Sunday resulted in a victory for Bandon with a score of 8 to 1. Willis pitched for Marshfield, and Hayes and Keene both made home runs off of him.

In the two games at North Bend Sunday, there was nothing to it. Bandon won the second game with a score of 10 to 1. This game gave them the championship but another game was played to entertain the spectators, but Marshfield could not pick up any. Bandon simply outplayed them.

In the two games, about $750 was taken in. This is to be divided between the players, 60 per cent going to Bandon and 40 per cent to Marshfield.

There was not much money changing hands on the games as the betting was light.

Big increase in the city schools

Enrollment greater by 96 than last year

The enrollment in the Marshfield schools on the opening day of the fall term yesterday shows a big increase which indicated that many new families have taken up their residence in the city.

The total enrollment in both the high school and grades this year is 910 as compared to 814 at the end of the first week last year, showing an increase of 96 in the city.

The total in the high school this year is 269 while last year the total at the end of the first month was 220.

Superintendent Howard says that likely 50 will enter the high school during the midyear term so that the total enrollment will likely be 300.

The increase this year is probably greater than shown in Marshfield at any previous time. There was a big increase at the opening of school in 1920 compared to 1919 but this was true all over the country. This year the increase seems to be entirely due to local conditions.

Mass arrest in Coos, 22 held on drug charges

COQUILLE — Twenty-two persons were being held today in the Coos County jail following their arrest Labor Day on separate charges of criminal activity in drugs.

A total of 60 law enforcement officers and police reserves staged an early morning raid at Elkhorn Ranch on the Millicoma River about 20 miles northwest of Allegany.

A Coos County Sheriff's report released early today said more than 10 carloads of police descended on the Elkhorn Ranch encampment about 6:40 a.m. Monday. Reports of a massive "party" at the ranch alerted police.

An estimated 150 persons were surrounded by police. All were found sleeping in bedrolls or sleeping bags, according to the sheriff's report. The 60 law enforcement personnel staging the raid included uniformed city police from the Bay Area, members of the Coos Interagency Narcotic Team and members of a shore patrol unit from the destroyer USS McKenzie.

Prefontaine qualifies in 5,000

MUNICH (UPI) — Steve Prefontaine, America's hope for a gold medal in the 5,000 meters, ran a good race today but was content to settle for second in a trial heat behind Emiel Puttemans of Belgium, who set an Olympic record.

Puttemans overtook Prefontaine on the final lap and set a new Olympic record of 13:31.9 for the distance.

Prefontaine, a communications student at the University of Oregon, was timed in 13:32.6 to also qualify for the final Sunday.

Local lifters qualify for world meet

Three Bay Area men placed well at the recent North American Bench Press and Deadlift Championships in Portland.

Knute Matthews, competing in Class 1 at 174 pounds, finished second in the bench press. Matthews lifted 285 pounds in the event.

Garrette Langmead, competing in Class 1 at 144 pounds, won both the bench press (254.5 pounds) and dead lift (430 pounds) and set a state record in the latter competition. He also was named best lifter for the light weights in the deadlift (lifters under 200 pounds).

Cheek took first place in the dead lift in the 210-pound division of the Master III Class with a best of 450 pounds.

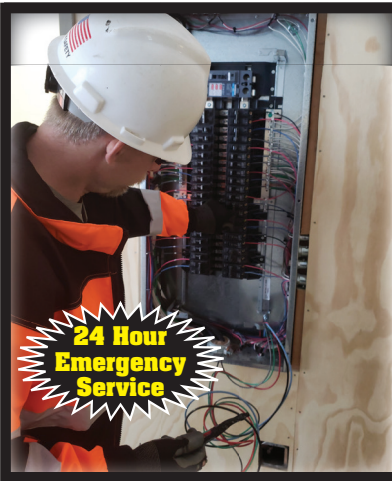

Close to 400 people competed in the three-day event.

All three men qualified for the WABDL (World Association Bench Deadlift) World Bench Press and Deadlift Championship, which will be Nov. 14-18 at Reno, Nev.

Sing for Christmas with Sea Breeze Harmony Chorus

Love to sing? Want to sing traditional holiday songs, learn new songs and have fun?

All women ages 16 and older who enjoy singing are welcome to explore the joy of a cappella singing with Sea Breeze Harmony Chorus during their annual Christmas Chorus beginning Tuesday, Sept. 13 and running for 13 consecutive Tuesdays from 6:15-8 p.m. at the Bay Area Senior Center, 886 S. 4th St. Coos Bay.

Learn Christmas and other seasonal music together and perform with Sea Breeze Harmony at a holiday concert at the Coos Art Museum on Saturday, Dec. 10. Other performance opportunities will be available in December.

Music reading is admired but not required. Audio learning tracks are available. Fees are $30 and include the use of sheet music, audio learning tracks, and six weeks of vocal instruction. The fee can be applied to dues for those who decide to join the chorus.

Sea Breeze Harmony Chorus is an active group that sings for festivals, parties, fundraisers, dinners, holiday events – you name it. The group competes at the regional level, which helps to focus on refining singing and performing abilities. They also sing for enjoyment, emphasizing fun, friendship and four-part harmony.

Sea Breeze Harmony Chorus is a nonprofit organization and an affiliated chapter of Sweet Adelines International.

Come join in the fun! For more information about the Christmas Chorus or Sea Breeze Harmony Chorus, contact director Gail Elber at 541-808-1773.

The Sea Breeze Harmony Chorus is inviting all women ages 16 who enjoy singing to join them as they prepare for their Christmas Chorus.

Western states workgroup recommendation makes way for updated boosters to be available in Oregon

The new updated bivalent COVID-19 boosters can be administered in Oregon now that the final step in the review and approval process has occurred, according to the state’s top health officer.

“With much appreciation to the Western States Scientific Safety Review Workgroup for its ongoing commitment, I am pleased to say the group met last night and reaffirmed the authorization of the new updated bivalent booster by the Food and Drug Administration (FDA) and the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention,” said Dean Sidelinger, M.D. MSEd, health officer and state epidemiologist at Oregon Health Authority.

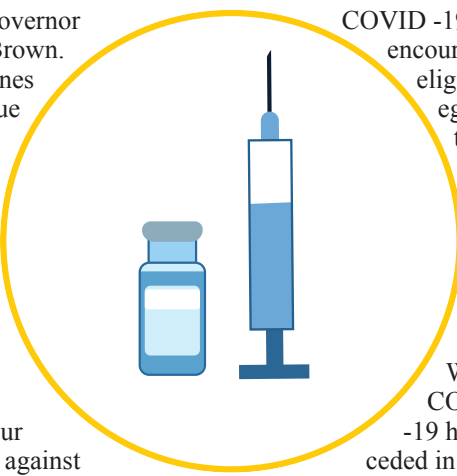

“With that agreement, we can begin to offer the booster. We expect a full statement from the workgroup in the coming days.”

The updated boosters are a single dose that can be administered at least two months after completion of an initial two-dose series of the Pfizer or Moderna vaccine, or a single dose of the Johnson & Johnson vaccine, or two months after a monovalent booster of the Pfizer or Moderna vaccine.

“With recommendations from the FDA, CDC and the Western States Scientific Safety Review Workgroup, Oregonians can rest assured that the latest Pfizer-BioNTech and Moderna booster shots are safe and effective at fighting both infections and severe illness caused by the Omicron variant,” said Governor Kate Brown. “Vaccines continue to be a critical tool in protecting yourself and your family against COVID -19, and I encourage all eligible Oregonians to get their booster as soon as possible. While COVID -19 has receded in recent months, it remains the third leading cause of death in the United States, and vaccines are the most effective tool for preventing severe illness and death.”

The boosters can be administered regardless of which vaccine series a person received. The Moderna bivalent booster is authorized only for persons 18 years of age and older; the Pfizer booster can be given to persons at least 12 years or older.

The new boosters began arriving in Oregon on Thursday and continued with more shipments. Additional shipments are anticipated next week.

OHA recommends everyone interested in receiving the new booster check with their provider first, to see when the booster is available, or check the OHA COVID-19 blog or the Get Vaccinated Oregon site for locations around the state.

Workshop offered for small farmers and horticulturalists interested in succulent propagation

The Oregon State University Extension Service welcomes small farmers and horticulturalists to the Introduction to succulent propagation workshop

The introduction to succulent propagation workshop will take place from on October 22 from 10 a.m. – noon at the Discovery Garden in Roseburg.

During this outdoor workshop, participants will learn about the propagation of plant material from starts, focusing on succulent propagation. This workshop will be focused on propagation for market, sustainably maximizing the amount of starts from a mother plant while maintaining the longevity of the plant. Participants will have several succulents to choose from and will get to take a propagated plant home. Participants are asked to bring their own gardening gloves and dress in layers.

This field-based workshop is $10; registration is required by October 17.

To register for the Introduction to succulent propagation workshop, visit <https://beav.es/iHt> or call OSU Extension in Douglas County at 541-672-4461.

Accommodation requests related to a disability should be made by October 10 to Logan Bennett, 541 236-3015 or logan.bennett@oregonstate.edu

Supplying Success: Coos-Curry Electric Cooperative collects school supplies for local students

Hundreds of youths in the Coos-Curry Electric Cooperative service territory will have many of their school supply needs met for the coming school year thanks to a drive held by CCEC and Beacon Broadband.

The cooperative hosted a school supply drive throughout August, where members dropped off donations at their local CCEC offices.

Supplies were divided into reusable bags for youth to pick up in Brookings, Gold Beach, Port Orford and the Coquille CCEC offices.

"We are impressed by the generosity of our members. As a cooperative, one of our principles is "Concern for Community," and a drive like this one allows us to help families in our community to offset some of the costs associated with a new school year," said Keith Buchhalter, CCEC's marketing and member services manager.

A big thank you goes to the Dollar Tree in Brookings for donating thousands of dollars' worth of supplies.

The electric cooperative also wants to thank the members who contributed to this incredible school supplies drive and the CCEC Community Involvement Committee for coordinating the event.

Free fishing poles, derby work to help salmon in Coquille River

By NANCY KELLER
For The World

This last weekend, 120 free fishing poles were handed out to kids 16 and younger at Sturdivant Park near the boat ramp. STEP (Salmon and Trout Enhancement Program) was using this event to educate and promote fish health of the Coquille River. A derby was also held with a $20 entrance fee where fishermen were given the opportunity to fish for specially electronic chipped fish that when scanned gave prizes of $50, $100, $500 and $1000. As of Saturday evening, the $1,000 chipped fish were still swimming in the river. Nearly 400 tickets for the derby were sold Saturday.

The invasive smallmouth bass were probably introduced in the 1980s and outcompete the salmon for food and habitat. When the smallmouth bass arrived, the Salmon population plummeted from 32,000 returning to spawn in the Coquille River to only 108 this year. This is a near extinction event. STEP is a legislatively appointed group of volunteers to enhance fish health. They are 100 volunteers strong. They are working with the Coquille Tribes and ODF&W to try and make the Coquille River once again be "the" salmon river which would support the fishing industry, the local restaurants and tourism.

Joshua Bettesworth say STEP is "making a concerted effort to use hatch boxes and are strongly working to renew hatchery growth as well as education programs. The derby is a small snapshot of our work as a group. We have a strong group of STEP volunteers and wonderful local community partners. We do have many regulations to abide by through ODFW; however, we are seeing success."

With the derby, 1,700 smallmouth bass were collected and given to people who asked for them and the rest will be turned into crab bait. Right now, the salmon are in the low river and the bay so fishing the upper rivers mostly result in hooking the nuisance fish. By reducing the smallmouth bass population, population of salmon can thrive better and hopefully dominate the river again. This is only a small "step" to helping bring back the salmon.

A 5-year-old named Cameron receive a free fishing rod, immediately headed to the docks after his grandfather paid his derby fee and later excitedly raced back to the STEP table with his smallmouth bass. It had a $100 prize electronic chip and when asked what he planned to do with his money, he exclaimed he planned to take his mom on a "hot date."

STEP welcomes volunteers who would like to invest time and energy to save the Coquille River.

Meetings are held every second Tuesday of each month at 6 p.m. at the Coquille firehall.

The Chamber Minute: Where are we headed?

Every year, about this time, I conduct a one on one conversation with each of the 21 elected members of the Chamber Board which we call Director Chats.

The purpose is to get their sense of where the organization is at and where it's headed. Let me share some of those insights with you through their own comments.

Board Relationships and Expectations

Like being part of an organization that makes a difference in the community. It provides networking opportunities and activities.

Involvement, or rather lack of involvement, by some directors needs to change

I like the Chamber overall, as we have an active board who don't work a personal agenda.

One of the real values of the Chamber is building relationships with folks I wouldn't normally interact with.

The Chamber Executive committee is a great place to grow in responsibility and effective work.

Likes the mix of generations on the Board.

The Board is like a community within itself. They are a group of amazing individuals which I'm glad to be part of.

Chamber Committees & Events

Really enjoy serving on the Leadership Coos Board.

After hours is a real benefit for new members

The Chamber stands for small business and addressing legislative issues and need. It's nice to have a solid voice in government .

WBC is real opportunity for the Chamber and Community.

I enjoy the people of the Board. Going to social events like Business after Hours, grand openings, etc.

Especially like the LAT helping pass the Charleston area TLT measure

WBC is a real value, especially to new businesses. I like the present format

Chamber Operations & Communication

Continue to develop the use of the Community App. Through it we have more to offer them.

Like the open friendly discussions with the Board and Committees. We are working with the website structure to enable even more of that with our members.

It's important to look at our major directions for each year.

Looking forward to the Chamber 101 program and videos

Still like the way the Chamber unites the community and keeps people informed on what's going on.

Appreciates the Chamber doing something for others, and highlighting those type of opportunities to us.

The new Community app is excellent

I don't see any changes to do in our organization. As things or opportunities come up, we make adjustments as needed.

Main improvement I can see is the quality of our website

LAT is the Legislative Action Team of your Chamber. WBC is the Wednesday Business Connection

Oops, it looks like I'm out of space, so we will continue this report next week.

Remember our business is helping your business. And like us on Facebook.

Florence Chamber features sea gypsy artist this month

Regina “Reggie” Oflock was born in Southern California spent her free time in the waters of Ventura, kayaking, sailing, jet skiing, fishing, and enjoying beach bonfires. She moved to Oregon in 1995 and said “I fell in love with all its beauty, the forest, rivers, lakes, and the great people.”

Oflock is also the owner/operator of Sea Gypsy Cottage Gallery, 83419 Highway 101, just south of Florence. The phone number is 541-646-4359 and the website is Sea-Gypsy-Cottage-Gallery.business.site

“I worked in the investment and real estate industries for years and am now retired in Florence,” she said. “I have just completed building my home, gallery, and Airbnb on Woahink lake. I am now able to devote my time to my art, friends, family, and travel—all which inspire my work.”

“I will be exhibiting my paintings at the Florence Area Chamber of Commerce Visitor Center and Gallery throughout September. All 18 to 20 of the works are an eclectic mix of my paintings, with no particular theme. All of the pieces are for sale.

“We are excited to have Reggie’s work on display for the first time in our gallery,” said Bettina Hannigan, president/CEO of the Chamber. “This is different from what we usually have in our exhibit. I think visitors—local and from out of town—are going to love this unique and unusual display.”

The Florence Area Chamber of Commerce is rapidly becoming one of the area’s favorite art galleries with its every-changing exhibits by local artisans, photographers, painters, and craftspeople.

The Chamber’s Visitors Center, 290 Highway 101, is open Monday through Friday from 9:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m., Saturdays from 10:00 a.m. to 3:00 p.m., and Sundays from 11:00 a.m. to 3:00 p.m. through summer. For more information about the Florence Area Chamber of Commerce, and how to join or volunteer, visit FlorenceChamber.com or call 541-997-3128.

The artwork of Regina “Reggie” Oflock will be on display throughout the month of September at the Florence Chamber of Commerce.

WHAT DO I NEED TO DO TO EARN A TOP PERFORMANCE REVIEW?

YOU WOULD NEED TO EXCEED EXPECTATIONS.

OKAY, GREAT. WHAT DO YOU EXPECT?

THAT'S A MOVING TARGET BASED ON HOW MUCH YOU DISAPPOINT ME AT ANY GIVEN MOMENT.

IF YOU'RE DOING GREAT, I'LL RAISE MY EXPECTATIONS FOR THE FUTURE.

SO... YOU WILL KEEP ADJUSTING YOUR EXPECTATIONS UNTIL IT IS LOGICALLY IMPOSSIBLE FOR ME TO EXCEED THEM?

HAHA! I SUPPOSE THAT'S ONE WAY TO LOOK AT IT.

WHY IS THAT FUNNY?

BECAUSE I'M NOT YOU RIGHT NOW.
