North Bend High School Band wins state championships

By BREE LAUGHLIN
The World

The North Bend High School Band competed against ten other bands to take home the Oregon State Championship in their division. The local high school won the event on May 10 at Oregon State University's LaSelle Stewart Center. North Bend High School Band Director Amber Yester admitted she was a bit surprised – and very proud of her students for their accomplishment. “There was some very good competition and some very strong bands,” Yester said. The North Bend band moved back to the 4A division this year after competing in the 5A division for the past few years. But their toughest rivals also made the same transition. “St. Helens was the 5A state champion last

The beauty of Bandon beaches brings awe to visitors as soon as they exit their vehicles and breathe in the fresh ocean air. But an element of that beauty could easily slip by unnoticed. Face Rock off of Bandon's Beach Loop Road is a habitat for puffins. But few who visit the Face Rock viewpoint can say they have seen one of these exemplary sea birds. “Everybody wants to see a puffin. It's all about the puffins, said Laura Paulson, a volunteer with Shoreline Education for Awareness. The SEA nonprofit is dedicated to promoting education and awareness of shoreline habitats and wildlife. As part of this mis-

BBQ, Blues & Brews on the Bay

By BREE LAUGHLIN
The World

One of the Mill Casino's most popular events is returning May 27 and 28 showcasing some of the best barbecue, blues and brews around. A $5 entry fee gets guests into the event each day. The Mill Casino's Brand & Advertising Manager Kevin Lee told The World news all the juicy details about their upcoming BBQ, Blues & Brews on the Bay.

Q: The event started more than a decade ago. Why do you think it's become so popular over the years?
A: The event has grown so much since 2012, when we started with 15 competitors.

Since then, there have been years when we had as many as 30 competitors. This is a KCBS [Kansas City Barbeque Society] sanctioned event, so you're looking at some of the best the Pacific Northwest has to offer. These are the teams looking to move on in the series of competition – the Grand Champion is invited to the American Royal in Kansas City, MO.

Q: What are the different kinds of BBQ items that will be available at the event? Are smaller samples available so guests can try different items?

on page 18

A longtime community favorite, BBQ, Blues & Brews, will be returning to The Mill Casino May 27 and 28, bringing some of the best barbecue in the region to North Bend.

year, so we knew they were going to be tough competition,” Yester said. But the North Bend High School students came away with the highest scores. “We were super proud of them. It’s a young band. We only have six seniors total and more than 20 freshman,” the band director said. The band, comprised mostly of underclassmen, had some nerves going into the competition – especially for the freshman who had never competed in a state championship before. “It was a switch for us because we are used to having more senior leadership,” Yester said. “I was super impressed with how our seniors led, our juniors stepped up and our freshman and sophomores rose to the challenge. It was really impressive.” The band members performed four numbers for the state competition all in different styles of music, in order to show their range to the judges. Their opening number was a piece called “Infinity” by composer Katahji Copley. They also performed, “Everything Beautiful” by Samuel Hazo, “The Clapping Song” by Randall Stan-dridge, and finished with “Industrial Loops” by Brian Balmages. This is the fifth state championship that the North Bend High School band has won in the 4A division since Yester began directing the students. “There is a history for sure. I think it’s a combination of a very supportive community, supportive administration, and having comprehensive music education all the way from the elementary level to the high school level,” she said. “I think that is really key to us being successful here. It’s the effort of many teachers teaching these guys from the time they are in kindergarten all the way up into the time they are high school seniors.” She also credited Assistant Band Director Sarah Massey. “She’s my assistant at the high school and I assist her at the middle school. She gives all of her time and passion to these kids, and I would not have been successful without her helping out. It’s a team effort with us in conjunction with the students,” Yester said. The band will be performing in an end of year concert happening May 30th at 7 p.m. in the North Bend High School gymnasium.

sion, SEA volunteers are also helping visitors spot puffins at the Face Rock Viewpoint and Coquille Point. “We have are having a puffin party here and at Coquille Point to start out the season, looking for birds and letting people know about the interpretive work that we do,” said Jacque Maldonado, a volunteer and new SEA board member. The nonprofit volunteers said they want to teach visitors how to identify and enjoy wildlife, while also being respectful of local wildlife. And, maybe, just maybe, they can also spot a puffin. On Saturday, May 13, the nonprofit groups had several binoculars and scopes set up focused on places upon Face Rock where puffins have been located. The technique was to keep as many pairs of eyes on the rock as possible. “I think the trick is just to keep looking,” said SEA volunteer Laura Paulson. “They could be there inside a burrow, so you have to be looking when they come out. Or they could be out to sea fishing,” she said. One puffin was spotted early in the day, but it hadn’t been spotted again later that afternoon. “That’s why we have all these folks with binoculars and scopes because it ups the chance of us being able to spot one. With the naked eye you probably couldn’t see one,” Paulson said. “But if you look at a puffin, it has the big orange bill and the bright orange legs – and it’s a stocky, showy bird,” she said. Volunteers Paulson and Maldonado said they were enjoying learning about puffins and other birds from longtime SEA members. “It’s a really good group of people. They are all nature lovers and being around them I am becoming a birder myself,” Maldonado said. “I enjoy learning more about the birds and how to identify them, and I never thought I would do that, but it’s a really fun thing to do,” she said. SEA is an all-volunteer nonprofit organization that reaches out to 15,000 to 20,000 visitors annually. During the summer months, SEA sets up wildlife interpretive stations at Coquille Point or Face Rock in Bandon, and at Simpson Reef near Charleston, to view islands which are part of the Oregon Islands National Wildlife Refuge. ### “The Tumultuous Travel Trunk Turmoil” or “Two Jewels in Jeopardy”

Extra! Extra! Read all about it! Daring robbery at the Marshfield museum! Priceless diamond stolen! A villain, wanted in five states, and unwanted in all the others, is hiding out in Coquille City on his way back to his lair in Powers. An innocent and beautiful orphan, taken in by her wise aunt, are on their way from Broadbent to the big city of Marshfield and are staying the night in Coquille City. A confounded confusion of two travel trunks sets events in motion and hilarity ensues. Will the villain make off with the diamond and the girl or will our brave young hero save the day?

Obituary

Verna Fay Whiting

August 20, 1933 – April 23, 2023

Verna Fay Whiting, née Conner, formerly of North Bend and Bandon, passed away after a short illness at her residence in Eugene on April 23, 2023. She was 89.

Fay was born in Julesberg, Colorado, on August 20, 1933, to Arlie and Violet Conner. Fay's mother nicknamed her "Faderbug" due to her overflowing energy. She was the third of four children, two boys and two girls. She was preceded in death by one of her brothers, Arlie Richard; and by her sister, Jessie Ann (Miller).

Fay's family moved to Oakridge in 1949. There she met and married Murile "Pete"

Peterson. Fay and Pete moved to Coos Bay in the mid-1950s, where they raised three children, Daniel Merle (deceased), Lee Ann (Weddle) and Laurel Fay (Smith). Fay obtained her LPN license and worked at Keizer Hospital in North Bend.

Following Fay and Pete's divorce Fay met and married Dr. Ralph Edward Whiting, a local physician, in 1975. With Ed's encouragement Fay obtained her private pilot's license, a SCUBA diving license, a cosmetology license, and a real estate license. Fay was always up for an adventure, and together she and Ed traveled extensively, both for pleasure and to fill medical positions throughout the United States.

Fay and Ed enjoyed hiking and working on their beloved property on the beach north of Bandon. Fay also loved to dress up and go dancing. She and Ed formed many lasting friendships and were a welcome fixture at dance venues up and down the Oregon Coast. After Ed's death in January of this year, Fay's dancing was interrupted temporarily until she could join him in heaven.

Fay is survived by her brother, David; daughters, Lee Ann and Laurel; grandson, Daniel Wayne Peterson; granddaughter, Lindsey Smith; stepsons, Michael, David and Jeff Whiting; stepdaughter, Carrie Goodfellow; many great grandchildren; a great-great granddaughter, Penelope Parry; and many dear friends.

At Fay's request no memorial service is planned.

North Bend School District's total 2023-24 budget decreased by approximately 7,383,718 compared to the 2022-23 budget. This decrease is mainly due to a decrease in state school fund and the decrease of debt incurred. The bond did not pass in May of 2022, therefore no debt was incurred during the 2022-23 fiscal year and is not included in the 2023-24 budget.

Blessing of the Fleet returning to Charleston

By BREE LAUGHLIN

The World

The annual Blessing of the Fleet and Memorial Service will be held at the Charleston Fisherman's Memorial Garden on Memorial Day.

The service honors the local men and women involved in commercial fishing and the fishing industry who have lost their lives since 1941. This year they will be honoring fishermen Stan Main and Chauncey Woodworth, and fishing industry professionals Kevin Roy Cameron and Fernando Sandez.

The 1954 Buoy Bell will be rung as each name is read, which is significant because fishermen rely on this sound to aid in safe navigation.

The annual event has become a staple for the locals in the fishing industry.

"Commercial fisherman have a challenging job out there so we are calling upon God to protect them and to give them a bountiful harvest and to help their families," said Margery Whitmer with the Charleston Fisherman's Memorial Committee.

"We also honor veterans on Memorial Day," Whitmer said.

As part of the event, local marine services firm owner, William Elderkin, will speak at the memorial. The U.S. Coast Guard will provide a color guard and advance and retire the colors.

"My family has been deeply entrenched with the fishing industry for 43 years," Elderkin said.

Elderkin has worked on fishing boats from Seattle to San Francisco including vessel monitoring systems. He also works with the Coast Guard, as well as the Army Corp of Engineers.

"You name it, I've probably done it," Elderkin said.

Elderkin has also been the Blessing of the Fleet master of ceremonies for 16 years now. The event is personal to him, as he has called out the names of his own family members.

Whitmer, who also has a longtime affiliation with the Charleston commercial fishing industry, calls Elderkin an integral member of the fishing community.

The Fisherman's Memorial Committee members said everyone in the community is invited to participate in the event.

"It's a matter of showing appreciation to the fisherman and to honor them, and it's a nice event that shows patriotism," Whitmer said.

The event will be held at the Charleston Fisherman's Memorial Garden near the launch ramp at the Charleston Marina at 10 a.m. on Memorial Day, Monday, May 29.

Following the service, a coffee and cake reception will be held for all who attend at the Charleston Fishing Families office across from the Coast Guard Station in Charleston, on Crossline Road.

On Memorial Day, the fishing industry will remember those who have died on the seas with the annual Blessing of the Fleet.

A Word, Please: Either or not

By JUNE CASAGRANDE

Every outfit I tried on was either too casual, too loud or too frumpy.

A funny thing about language: When you use it without thinking, you usually do just fine. It's only when you stop and question words, grammar and meaning that you realize you don't understand some element of the language as well as you thought you did.

I was reminded of this recently when someone asked me about "either" to introduce three things, as it does in the sentence about the outfits. Doesn't "either," by definition, refer to a choice between exactly two things? A statement is either true or false. A protagonist is either good or bad. Your car either runs or it doesn't.

So how can "either" set up three things?

Well, according to some people, it can't. Merriam Webster's Dictionary of English Usage lists 10 grammar experts who, in the early 1900s, started saying it's wrong to use "either" to refer to more than two things. Oddly, grammar experts in the mid- to late-1800s had no problem with it, but this new crop of scolds started a trend.

There's a flaw in their logic, as Merriam's points out: The experts who say "either" must refer to only two things don't take into account that it can be a pronoun, an adjective or a conjunction, and it works differently in each role.

In "Either road gets you there," it's modifying "road," so it's an adjective. In this role, "either" means there are just two things. So from "Either road gets you there," you can rightly infer that you have only two roads to choose from.

"Either" is a pronoun when it's the subject of a verb, as in "Either gets you there." And when it's a pronoun, "either" means you're talking about two things, in this case, two roads.

But in "Every outfit was either too casual, too loud or too frumpy," "either" is a conjunction because it's working as a "function word," as Merriam-Webster's Collegiate Dictionary puts it. Their definition shows that this form of "either" is different from the pronoun and adjective forms: "Used as a function word before two or more coordinate words, phrases, or clauses joined usually by 'or' to indicate that what immediately follows is the first of two or more alternatives."

See how "two or more" comes up twice in this definition? That's why our sentence about outfits is OK: because the possibility of three or more things is baked right into this meaning of "either."

A more common question about "either" is whether it can take a plural verb, as in "It was not a subject on which either of them were fond of dwelling." Some people would say "were" is wrong there because "either" is singular and that, therefore, singular "was" is the only correct option. That's a good policy. "Either" usually works best with a singular verb. But it can also take a plural verb when that fits your meaning best, as proven by the example above from "Sense and Sensibility" by Jane Austen.

The same question comes up a lot with "neither." Does it require a singular verb, "Neither is coming on Tuesday"? Or can you use a plural verb: "Neither are coming on Tuesday"? Experts seem to agree that the singular is usually better, but when the plural seems more natural, it's fine too.

Like "either," "neither" can refer to three or more things, but it usually works with "nor" instead of "or": This outfit is neither flattering nor comfortable.

But not always. Usage guides cite numerous examples of top writers using "or" with "neither," including Jane Austen, who wrote in "Mansfield Park": ... if a man is neither to take orders with a living or without ...

HOLY COW! HISTORY:

Ready, Set, Surrender! History's Shortest War

J. Mark Powell

"commence bombardment." At exactly 9:02, the firing began. When the guns fell silent at 9:40, the palace and adjoining harem were piles of rubble.

As for the new Sultan, he and his closest advisers took off when the first shells hit, running to the nearby German consulate. They were smuggled to German East Africa and granted asylum. British troops later captured the ex-sultan during World War I and exiled him to St. Helena, the same barren island where the deposed Napoleon Bonaparte had spent his last days.

And so the Anglo-Zanzibar War was over almost as soon as it began. A British sailor was slightly injured; his side's only casualty.

But if this farce sounds like something out of a Gilbert and Sullivan operetta, think again. Some 3,000 defenders, servants and slaves were barricaded inside the palace. More than 500 of them, one of six, were killed or seriously wounded.

Thus ended history's shortest war. It may not be the most bizarre conflict in the annals of warfare, but it sure comes close.

Wars can drag on forever. History tells of the Hundred Years' War, the Eighty Years' War, and the Thirty Years' War. The 2001-2014 Afghanistan War is considered America's longest conflict.

Yet sometimes, wars wrap up with surprising swiftness. Take history's shortest war. How long do you think it lasted? A year? A month? A week?

Not even close.

Get ready to learn what took place during all 38 minutes of the Anglo-Zanzibar War — the briefest conflict ever.

It was fought on a single Thursday morning (from 9:02 to 9:40, to be precise) on August 27, 1896. Here's how it happened.

Africa was a colonial grab bag in the closing days of the 19th century. Britain, France, Germany, Italy, Spain, and even little Belgium were snatching up big chunks of that continent. The Brits especially had grand plans. They dreamed of an unbroken string of colonies on the eastern side of the continent stretching from Egypt down to South Africa.

However, the Germans (always the Germans!) were blocking their way. They wanted to make sure the British dream never came true. So they decided to make things interesting.

The Sultanate of Zanzibar was an island nation in the Indian Ocean near modern Tanzania. The British recognized its sovereignty in 1886, and for 10 years, everyone played well together. Then the Germans started meddling, hoping to turn Zanzibar against the Brits.

Sheikh Hamad bin Thuwaini ruled the country as Sultan for four years. He liked the British. But some members of his inner circle didn't. And wouldn't you know it, the Sheik died suddenly at age 39 on August 25. It's widely believed he was poisoned by his cousin, Sheikh Khalid bin Barghash, who immediately proclaimed himself the new Sultan.

Then the fun started.

The Brits hauled out a 30-year-old treaty that said a sultan could only take power with British approval, and the Brits very much disapproved of the new guy, who was pro-German. (Surprise, surprise.)

All day on the 26th, diplomats talked back and forth. It was rapidly becoming obvious negotiations wouldn't settle the mounting crisis.

British officials decided to snuff the new royal regime in its cradle and began planning accordingly. The Sultan responded by barricading himself inside his palace and turning it into a fortress.

Say what you will about the British, but they don't fool around when you make them mad. And the new Sultan had royally ticked them off.

So, four heavily armed British warships steamed into Zanzibar Harbor and pointed their powerful guns at the palace.

By the morning of the 27th, Brits' patience had run out. They sent the traditional demand that the palace surrender. The Sultan replied, "We have no intention of hauling down our flag, and we do not believe you would open fire on us." The British quickly answered, "We do not want to open fire, but unless you do as you are told, we shall certainly do so."

They waited 30 minutes and heard nothing. Rear Adm. Harry Rawson raised the signal flag instructing the warships, "Prepare for action."

Five minutes later, the order was changed to insofar as they are willing to reciprocate our respect.

A few months ago, I was on my lunch break, sitting outside of a fast-food joint, when a man approached me, his ragged clothing marking him homeless. I greeted him, and he awkwardly asked if I would buy him lunch. I said I would, igniting a light of thanks in his eyes. We hardly made it into line before someone behind the counter noted the man's appearance and demanded that he leave. I assured her I was paying for his food, but she ignored me, ordering him to leave and threatening to call the police. I don't know whether she was upholding store policies or recognized him from previous encounters.

But the moment of happiness that had lit his eyes at my promise instantly faded, and he began to yell at the worker, hurling obscenities at her. The store employees called the police as he fled.

I had tried to help him because of my compassion for his plight. My compassion was built on a respect for his status as a fellow citizen, whose shoes I might imagine myself in and from whom I might expect reciprocated decency and respect. Though I understood his anger at a society that had rejected him, his behavior showed they were right to do so and betrayed my expectations. If he begged me for food again, I would not assist him. Only when we maintain such expectations do we have a standard that allows us to set aside our aversions and recognize the homeless, separating the decent from the indecent.

Too often, citizens place the duty to act upon institutions, which ultimately leads to our abdication of the productive role that we can play in helping the homeless directly. Part of what makes homelessness so miserable is the sub-human self-image created when people ignore you. By recognizing the homeless and showing them the basic respect that we extend to others, we can do our part in mitigating their misery. We will often find decent people underneath the rags.

Genuine respect for a person entails more than compassion and no-strings-attached assistance — it requires that we have expectations of them, as we do for all adults. This respect can have a real effect in helping the homeless improve their self-image and moving them toward self-sufficiency. It isn't a grand way to show your morality, and it won't always fix things, but taking a small risk could make the difference in turning someone's life around.

Opinion: What My Experience Being Homeless Taught Me About Compassion

By JEREMIAH LUDWIG

InsideSources.com

As the National Park Service continues to break up homeless encampments, pushing them from one neighborhood to another, it's clear our unsheltered homelessness problem isn't going away anytime soon.

In 2022 Washington had an estimated homeless population of 4,400, about 690 were unsheltered. Though the total homeless population has decreased recently, the number of unsheltered homeless has remained stubbornly high.

Uncomfortable as we are with the unsheltered, we citizens largely abdicate our role in helping the homeless directly and leave the job to our government, which consistently struggles to fix the problem. While our government infantilizes them with paternalistic policies and vague rhetoric of compassion, citizens have learned the dehumanizing art of ignoring them altogether. By failing to engage with the homeless as fellow citizens and holding them to our own standards of acceptable behavior, we inadvertently perpetuate their disruption and neglect our role in fixing the problem.

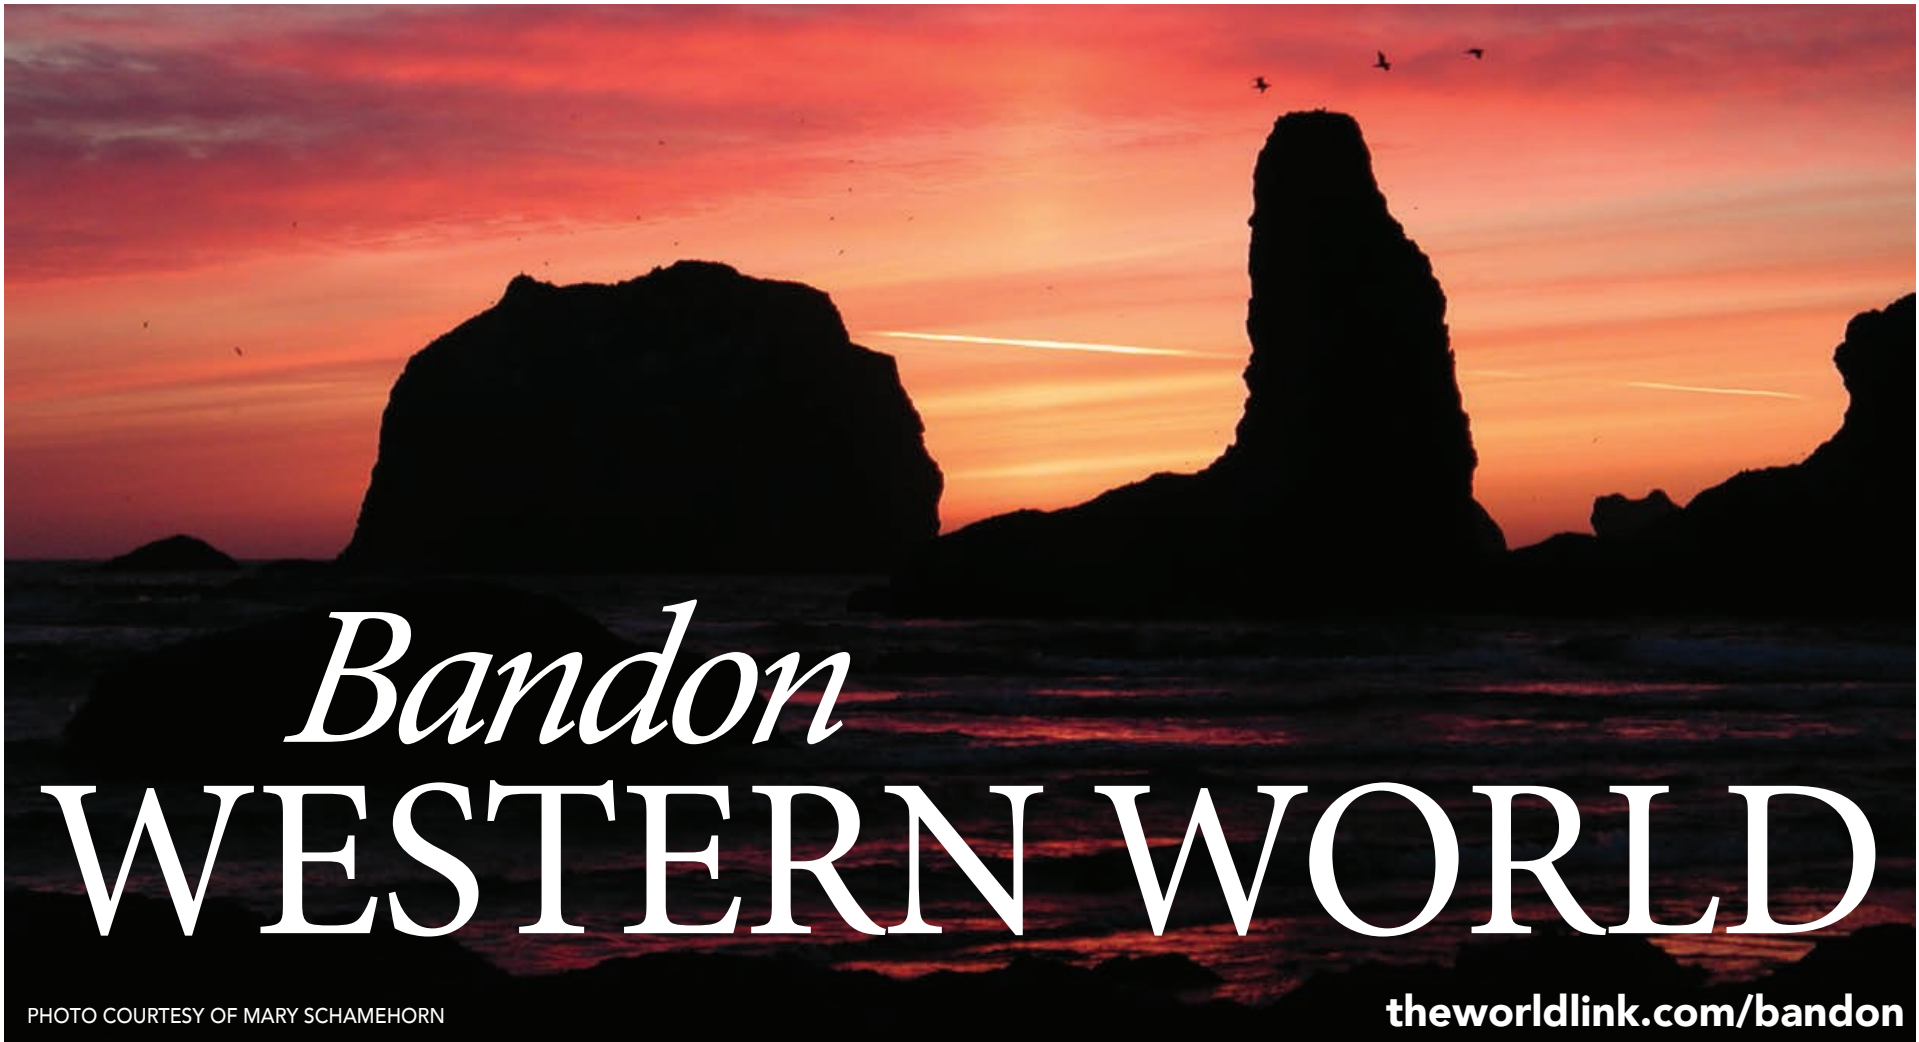

I don't say that without compassion: I see myself in all the wretchedness, mental illness and anger reflected in the eyes of the homeless.

When I was 20, a spat of severe depression cost me my job. Unable to make rent, I wound up homeless, and for a month, I wandered the streets feeling isolated and bitter. I needed help and was starving for even an ounce of compassion. Yet, many who might claim to have compassion for the homeless would walk right by me without offering even a glance. In ignoring me, it felt as though they denied my humanity.

But I don't blame them. Years later, once again employed and housed, I find myself grappling with the same aversion that caused others to avoid me when I was on the street. Even though I know firsthand how harmful it is to be denied recognition from the other side of the street, it's clear to me that in helping others, we put our goodwill on the line: Without some assurance of mutual respect and decency from those on the receiving end of that goodwill, few of us will take any chances. To do our part in helping our homeless neighbors, we must also hold them to a higher standard.

The only people who deserve unearned decency, kindness and assistance are young children: Pretending that every homeless person deserves such help only infantilizes them. The homeless must conduct themselves appropriately to expect recognition or help; individuals should comply only

As I See It:

A sad goodbye

By MARY SCHAMEHORN

While going through a new batch of negatives recently, I found a great photo of Wolf Daniel Braun's Cobbler's Bench shop, (first photo) when it opened on Second Street in 1982, and I planned to do a feature on him this week. Sadly, however, I learned late last week that Daniel (second photo) had died suddenly at his home in Hawaii, where he has lived for some years since retiring and moving from Bandon.

It was his son, Stephen, a twin to Peter Braun of Bandon, who apparently found his father, who had fallen and hit his head. I talked this week with his ex-wife, Joanne Drapkin, who has remained good friends with Daniel. She and their daughter, Julia, were planning to travel to Hawaii in July for his 80th birthday celebration. Instead, Joanne said they are planning a Celebration of Life for Daniel in Hawaii near the date of his birthday, July 11. His surviving children include Elizabeth Braun Speelman of Kentucky, Stephen Braun of Hawaii, Peter Braun of Bandon, Gabrielle Wolf Rocco of Sacramento and Julia Miriam Braun of Bandon.

In November of 1976, Daniel moved to Marcola and began gathering the equipment necessary for a leather shop. It wasn't as successful as he'd hoped so he decided to follow some friends who had moved to Bandon the previous year.

"I had been to visit Bandon but had never lived by the ocean before. Now I've found I really like it here," he told the reporter.

A feature article in the May 24, 1979, Western World described the new leathersmith, who was opening his first Bandon shop in the building occupied at that time by Bandon Candle and Gift Shop (owned by Chuck and Lynn Markham).

And so began, many years in business for The Cobbler's Bench, which is now owned and operated by Peter Braun in the Masonic building, where Daniel first opened in August of 1983, after a short time operating out of the Bandon Theater, after his shop burned.

A number of businesses had occupied the small building featured in this article, which was located on Second Street adjacent to the Bandon Theater, including Fred Tuttle's Confectionary, the Bandon Shoe Repair Shop (third photo taken during festival parade in 1971) and the 'Hi Neighbors' Wood shop.

The rainfall totals for April showed 7.31 inches, compared to 11.18 inches in March and 5.51 in February. Last April, Bandon recorded 7.60 inches, compared to 1.54 in April of 2021.

Now is a good time to talk about the heat wave that hit Sunday, when local residents reported temperatures reaching nearly 100 degrees. A statewide map of the hottest places in Oregon showed North Bend was officially the hottest at 95 degrees. I certainly sympathize with people who live where temperatures like this are the norm, but of course they have air conditioning, which most of us do not have. I sat out under the trees to eat my dinner as it was 80 degrees inside my house, and in spite of open doors and windows, it still registered nearly 80 at 8:30 in the evening. So please forgive me if you find more than the usual number of mistakes. My office is stifling and the windows won't open.

I learned this week that The Dalles Athletic Hall of Fame is inducting The Dalles 1947 state championship football team into their ranks on Saturday, May 20. Dick Sutherland was the 30-year-old head coach. Gene Morrow, who coached football at Newport for 45 years before retiring in 1999, was the fullback. In the single wing offense, the fullback was the passer and the quarterback became the blocking back, according to Ron Sutherland, Bandon High School Class of 1962, who will be the presenter at Saturday's program honoring his father and the team.

Photos contributed by the Mary Schamehorn collection
Wolf Daniel Braun's Cobbler Bench Shop opened on Main Street in 1982. Unfortunately, Daniel died recently at his home in Hawaii.

An item I found said Gene Morrow was the second winningest football coach in the history of Oregon high school sports, and the only person in the nation to dedicate a 45-year coaching career to the same high school.

As we hear more and more about how hard it is to find a rental in Bandon -- at any price -- it is good to see that a new five-unit apartment complex is going up along 11th street east, between Chicago and Baltimore, on the south side of 11th. I am not sure who the builder/owner is, but it's good news.

Deanna Hurley Hockema posted recently that a memorial service will be held for her father, Mickey Hurley, Saturday, June 24, at 3 p.m. at the VFW Hall.

I have also learned that a Celebration of Life will be held for Edith Winters on Oct. 28, which would have been her 100th birthday.

I've known for several months that Maria Stadelman Merriam and her husband, Robert, were planning to move to Spokane, Wash., to be near their children and grandchildren, but until I saw it in print, I did not feel it my place to announce it.

The announcement was in the program for Alice in Wonderland, the marvelous show produced by MarLo Dance Studio last weekend, and continuing this weekend, Friday, Saturday and Sunday (May 19-21) at the Sprague Theater.

This is the 24th season for MarLo Dance, founded by Maria Merriam and the late Lois Henry, and the shows just keep getting better ... if that is possible. I attended the sold out opening night performance where each number was greeted enthusiastically by the audience, particularly those that featured the youngest dancers, who captured the hearts of everyone who saw them perform. Not sure there are tickets left, but if there are and you haven't seen Alice in Wonderland, you need to get a ticket for this weekend's shows. Alice is beautifully performed by Nena Minkler, while her sister, Hallie Minkler, was the Queen of Hearts and Nameer El-Kadi was the King of Hearts.

Maria explained that she will continue to work with the on-site manager Faith Slater, who started her dance education at MarLo Dance Studio at the age of three, mentored by "Miss Lois (Henry), Miss Trish (Shropshire) and Maria before continuing her education at Ballet Fantastique, Eugene, and State Street Ballet, Professional Track, Santa Barbara."

Faith Slater and her sister Gracie Slater choreographed many of the numbers, and their siblings, Hadassah, Sarah and Alexa Slater, also performed. The multi-talented Slater family lives in Arago.

The Nutcracker will be presented in December on the Sprague stage.

On a not so pleasant note, I saw a post on Monday, May 8, indicating that a home at 55662 Prosper Junction Road was broken into, robbed and ransacked the previous weekend. The door was locked and apparently kicked open. The poster urged people to be aware of what is happening in their neighborhood.

Another post suggested that "we really need to address the homeless situation in Bandon." Posted by Big Mike from Douglas FastNet, he said: "I went to do my laundry at the local laundromat (in the Bandon Shopping Center) before sun up and found one homeless man lying on an outside bench ... sleeping. Found another asleep on the bench on the inside. Another was washing his face in the back tub. A fourth came in the back door with a machete forked up through his back pack. This is fine and I wasn't scared but maybe we could have shower stations or sleeping areas or even give them a gym membership so they can shave, wash and possibly workout. I work in all of the coastal towns and cities and the I-5 corridor and see it getting way worse than it ever was. When the sun came up they all disappeared and my laundry was done," said the man.

The shopping center area is, of course, private property, and it does not appear that the men in this post actually caused problems for anyone. I am more concerned about families with children who may be living in their vehicles, and may need assistance.

The issue of homelessness and the Ninth Circuit Court ruling Martin v Boise will be the subject of a city council workshop Monday (May 15) as we determine how we will handle the ruling, which says we cannot cite people for sleeping on public property if there is nowhere else for them to go. It is way too complicated to talk about in my column, but I can tell you that we will be addressing the issue as required by state and court mandates.

DOCTOR ADVISES SPRING CLEANING

HEALTH OFFICER OF COUNTY MAKES A STATEMENT

DR. IRWIN TELLS WHAT THE PEOPLE SHOULD DO TO BEST PRESERVE HEALTH OF COMMUNITY

Dr. Henry D. Irwin, the county health officer, makes the following statement in which he appeals to the people to clean up their premises:

"Several of our Coos county towns are returning their attention to cleaning up and painting up. This movement is excellent and should be extended to the whole county. There is no better way to promote general healthfulness than by sunshine, fresh air and cleanliness. After the winter indoors everything within the house needs to be gotten out into the fresh air and sunshine. Dusty accumulations need to be removed and fresh paint or hot water and soap suds should be used on the inside woodwork. There is no place for germs in a spotless town. "Not only indoors, but out of doors in the yard it is necessary for the health of the family that every accumulation or waste be removed and that the sunshine be given full opportunity to search out the corners. Ground where moisture and decay have been needs to be freshly spaded in order that fresh air may get at the waste and oxidize it, thus destroying both the decay and the foul odors which arise from it.

"Having cleaned indoors and out it is next necessary to decide how to prevent further accumulations of waste from forming. Before doing so let us review how such accumulations are injurious: First, even though they contain no disease or germs, we know that it is unhealthful to be obliged to live over waste water or decaying matter and breathe its foul gases. Second, waste forms a source of food for flies, rats and mice which do carry disease germs and it attracts them to the locality. Third, the waste about the yard, itself the evidence of careless sanitation, may actually be a source of disease because of infected matter having been destroyed by the air and sunshine within two days; however, in damp, dark places they may live indefinitely.

FRAN SIGHTING GETS CHANCE AT WORLD UNIVERSITY GAMES

It appears now that the good guys have finally won one and Fran Sighting will get her shot at running in the World University Games this summer in Moscow.

Due to some soft talking on the part of SWOCC officials, namely, Jack Brookins, the president, Dale Bates, the athletic director and head track coach, Mike Hodges, it seems there is a very good chance that when the team is assembled. Fran will be on it. Hodges talked by phone with the head coach of the girls' team Tuesday and was told that she would be considered for the team upon receipt of "certified times," from any meet.

Dr. Ken Foreman of Seattle Pacific University, the head coach of the team, told Hodges, "I can't remember when an American woman has run a 10.2 second 100, wind-aided or not."

Several weeks ago, Fran ran the 100-yard dash in 10.2 in a girls track meet held at Lane Community College.

Now that that has been settled, all Fran has to do is go to the OCCAA meet this weekend in Oregon City and perform reasonably well to at least be considered for the team. She has, in previous meets this season run considerably better than the qualifying standards here. The qualifying standards for consideration for the squad are: in the 100-yard dash, 11.0 seconds; in the 220-yard dash, 24.4 seconds; in the 440-yard dash 56.5 seconds and in the long jump 19 feet.

FIRE DANGER SERIOUS IN NORTHEAST OREGON

PORTLAND (UPI) — Oregon State forestry crews are laying battle lines for what they think will be one of the worst years for fire in Northeast Oregon.

The fire danger, officials claim, is being made worse by an exceedingly dry winter and dead or heavily defoliated fir trees. The trees have been hit by the tussock moth.

"We've got a real mess out here," said John McGhehey, district forest ranger for the Oregon Department of Forestry. "We're going to have fires here, no doubt." He said that the area hit by the moth usually has about 10 fires each year.

McGhehey said the state, federal crews and private firms are preparing battle plans to meet the fire crisis. State forestry personnel has been shifted into the area to keep campers away from the worst areas and additional fire-fighting equipment has been moved in from other parts of Oregon."

STATE JOBLESS RATE SHOOTS UP TO 8 PERCENT

PORTLAND — Rainy weather that slowed housing starts and financial uncertainty during the war in Iraq were partly to blame for boosting the Oregon unemployment rate to 8 percent in April, just short of the peak reached more than a year ago when the recession appeared to be at its worst, officials said Friday.

The jump from 7.6 percent in March was double the monthly increase in the national unemployment rate, which rose from 5.8 percent in march to 6 percent in April to return to an eight-year high in an economy that has lost a half million jobs in three months.

"The news was generally grim in April," said Art Ayre, state labor economist. The state unemployment rate peaked at 8.4 percent in January 2002 before it began a slight decline that had settled in the 7 percent range as the economic recovery stalled, according to Oregon Employment Department figures.

Oregon has led the nation in unemployment levels for nearly two years, and the latest numbers were likely to keep the state at the top, Ayre said.

The labor force —the total number of workers — has expanded with the state population and the number of younger workers entering the job market has increased despite a recession, he said.

SCHERER WINS SPRING PRE FOR KIDS RUN

Cole Scherer sped to victory in the annual spring Pre for Kids run in downtown Coos Bay last weekend.

Scherer, a sixth-grader from Bandon, covered the 3-mile course in 17 minutes, 57 seconds. He finished 16 seconds in front of North Bend fifth-grader Sam Lynass.

Kelly Coolen, a North Bend sixth-grader, was the first girl to cross the line and finished ninth overall in 22:48.

Grade winners included first-graders Luke Luce-ro (26:30) and Lindsay Devereux (30:04), second-graders Connor Devereux (21:12) and Zenora Burris (25:40), third-graders Logan Lucero (22:36) and Courtney Greif (30:18), fourth-graders Alex Meichsner (21:14) and Nicole Medford (27:12), fifth-graders Sam Lynass (18:13) and Melissa Childs (27:12), sixth-graders Cole Scherer (17:57) and Kelly Coolen (22:24), seventh-grader Raymond Cheser (21:52) and eighth-grader Stephen Stys (25:06).

Alzheimer's Disease and Dementia - ARE YOU AT RISK?

According to a new study by Johns Hopkins University School of Medicine and the National Institute on Aging, men and women with hearing loss are much more likely to develop dementia and Alzheimer's disease. # Dear Abby

By

Abigail Van Buren

Dear Abby:

I'm a 45-year-old woman who has been dating "Ben" (53) for two years. We have known each other for more than 20. He treats me like a queen. Prior to our dating, he had a girlfriend he used to confide in me about. I was very jealous of her. She knew we were friends, so she made a point of posting lots of pictures of their PDAs on his social media, since we did not follow each other.

Fast-forward two years: Abby, I cannot stop obsessing over her! I think about her constantly and compare myself to her. I stalk her social media page. Ben has never given me a reason not to trust him, so why am I still bothered by her?

She has moved on and is in another relationship. How can I finally quit obsessing about her and move forward? I don't feel this way about his other exes, but for some reason, this one gets under my skin. I don't want him to find out what I have been doing. I really need help. Any advice?

—INSECURE IN PENNSYLVANIA

Dear Abby:

We have three grandchildren, and we feel strongly about the importance of a college education. When the first one graduated from high school, we gave him $500 for graduation, plus an additional $1,500 to be used for college-related expenses. He had already indicated that he was enrolling in college.

When the second one graduated, we gave him a $500 graduation gift. Because he had committed to joining the Navy, we assured him that he would also receive $1,500 if and when he enrolled in college. Since then, we have been accused of not respecting his career choice, showing favoritism and other accusations too numerous to list here.

Are we ogres for wanting and encouraging our grandchildren to attend college? We'd like your opinion.

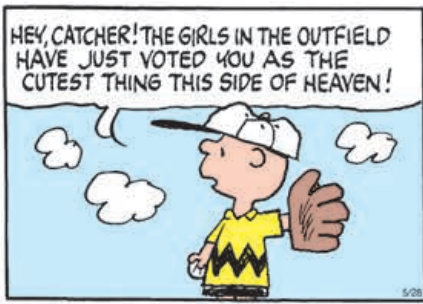

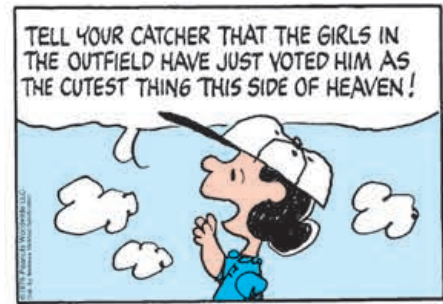

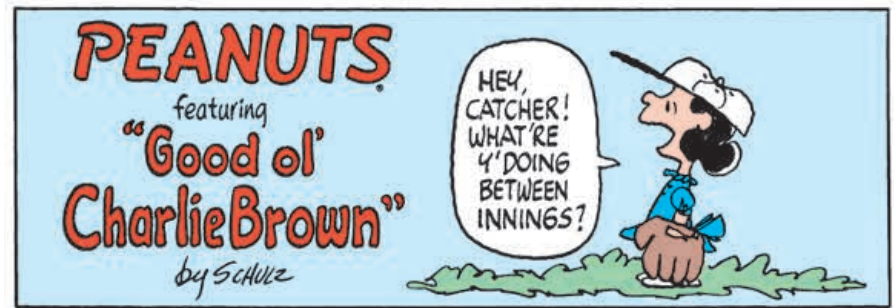

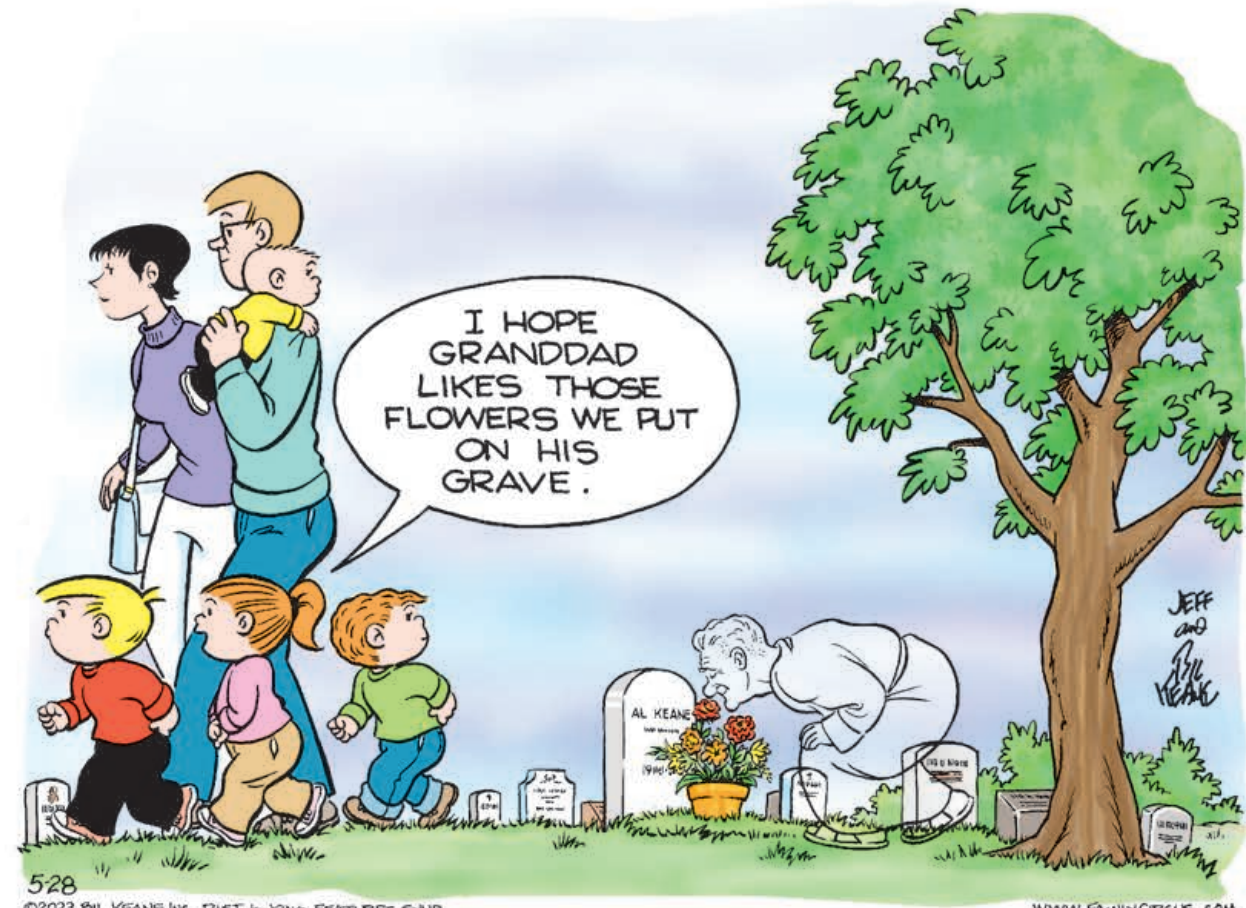

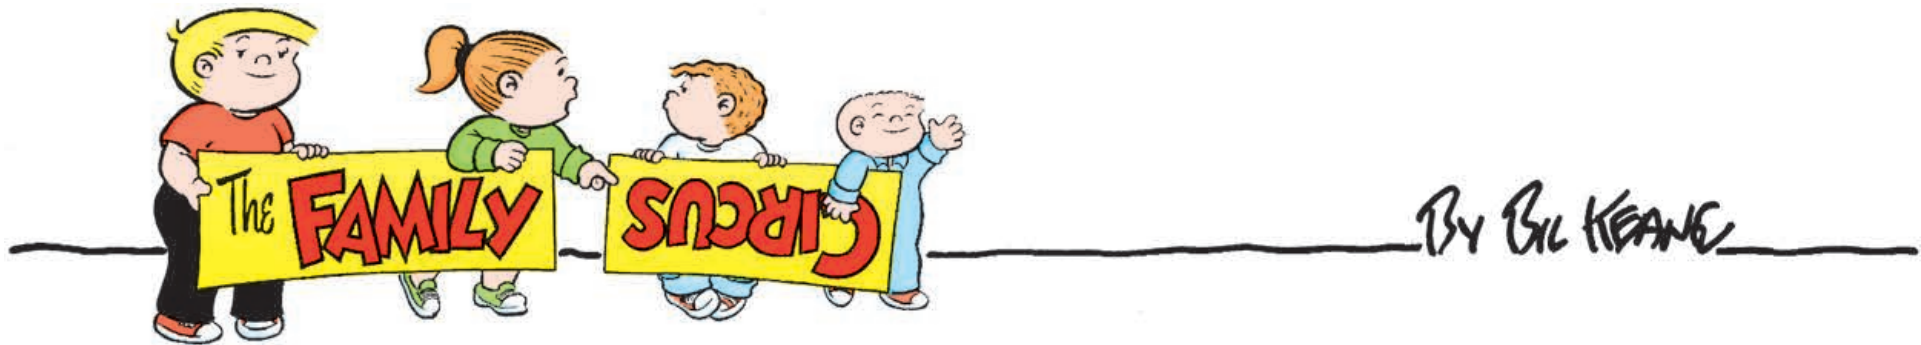

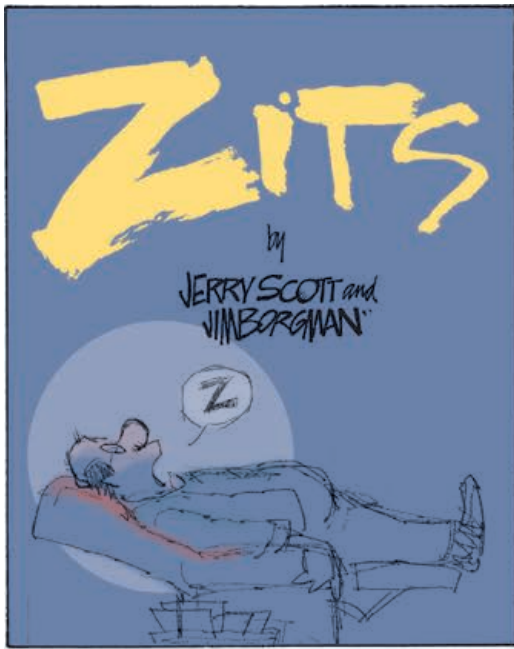

—WELL-MEANING IN THE WEST

DEAR WELL-MEANING:

Your mistake has been not taking into consideration that your grandchildren are individuals. Your second grandson is likely to find his career path as part of his military service. One could argue that you are favoring the grandchild who is following the career path you are biased toward, and from that perspective, it does appear you are playing favorites. You may want to rethink what you are doing. Your Navy-bound grandson may have a need for that money at some point.

You'd be surprised how many forms mac n' cheese can come in!

Q: What is the Kansas City Barbecue Society? How do they judge the competition?

A: There are two judges from the KCBS who are present to ensure the cooks follow all rules, regulations and to oversee the judging process. Judging itself is made up of several certified judges looking at each category for taste, appearance and texture. There are strict rules and requirements, including competitors turning in competition-ready food at specific times.

Q: The beer portion of the event is being described new and improved. How so?

A: Prior years we had one beer tent, where all patrons would have to go to sample from vendors. This year we have three stations where patrons can visit for larger samples of their choice. The highlight is being able to roam the event at your leisure with your beverage, and the public gets to vote on the best brew!

Q: What kind of music will be playing?

A: To keep with the BBQ, Blues and Brews theme we have two different blues artists, Lisa Mann and the Ben Rice Band. Both are well-known acts in the Pacific Northwest.

Q: What do you hope people who come get out of the event?

A: This event was created to bring the public together and to give this beautiful community another reason to put us on the map. This area is like no other, and to help create a reason for travelers to visit is one of our favorite parts about hosting the event.

A $5 entry fee gets you into the BBQ, Blues & Brews on the Bay. It's being held from noon to 6 p.m. on Saturday, May 27, and noon to 4 p.m. on Sunday, May 28, at The Mill Casino in Coos Bay. For more information visit, www.themillcasino.com and click on upcoming events.

South Coast Cooperative Weed Management Area Presents:

Weed of the Month

English Ivy - Hedera helix

ID Tips:

-Leaves are waxy, somewhat leathery, and can vary from dark green to light green
-Juvenile leaves can have 3 to 5 lobes, while mature leaves have no lobes, so two ivy plants can look very different!
-Berries form umbrella-like clusters and are purple/black

Juvenile*Mature

Don't let Ivy topple your trees!

Ivy is an evergreen vine that can grow on many surfaces, including up to the tops of trees, where it blocks needed sunlight. It also weighs trees down and weakens them, making it easier for storms to knock them over.
Treatment: Small plants can be pulled or dug. If it's growing up a tree, cut vines a few feet up the trunk, all the way around, the top parts will eventually die. To stop regrowth, dig up the stumps, or apply herbicide to the freshly cut stumps, following the label, which is the law.

Ivy growing up tree
Ivy spreads primarily by birds transporting seeds, but vine segments that have been cut can also grow roots. It is widespread west of the Cascades.

Located at the heart of Coos Bay Oregon, the Blue Heron Bistro is a small-town German restaurant serving traditional German food, local seafood, and now Memphis style BBQ (yeah it's that good).

Here at the Blue Heron, we believe in serving homemade, well-prepared meals to our customers. We shop as local as possible when possible using farmers markets and farm to table products. We make our very own desserts, French bread, and dark German sourdough rye and buttermilk bread right here in the restaurant. In addition, our German bratwurst and Kasseler Rippchen are made and smoked right here in house. We have also started smoking our very own meats Memphis BBQ style. By using drippings from our meat dishes, we make our own gravies from scratch. Our restaurant has been serving these authentic, wholesome meals since 1976.
