Your Guide to the Readers' Choice
Winners for Outstanding Community Businesses

We're all winners in Tillamook County

Joe Warren
Publisher

Welcome to our Best of Tillamook County Readers' Choice Awards. Businesses highlighted in this section are the best of the best of Tillamook County voted by our readers.

Readers of the Headlight Herald and the North Coast Citizen voted on their favorite food, attractions, best local businesses and more.

We captured thousands of votes online and with our official print ballots, compiled the results and are presenting them in this keepsake edition.

Inside you will find what our readers believe to be the best bakery, where to find the best breakfast, the best brewery, who has the best clam chowder, or the best happy hour.

You will see who has the best ice cream, a fun place to take a date, where to listen to music, where to get your car fixed, where to go for a cultural experience, who has the best customer service and many more categories.

We have so many hard working people who own businesses and so many who work or volunteer at some important entities that make

Tillamook County the best place on the Oregon Coast. This section highlights those committed people who provide day to day services we all need and enjoy.

It's no secret we live in one of the best places in the world, with some of the best people on the planet. Our readers have really stepped up to cast their ballot and show our business community that they, like us, appreciate all of the people, places and things that makes Tillamook County home.

Enjoy reading through this special section, and while you are at it, congratulate those who were included.

Thanks to all our readers who cast ballots and thanks to all our local businesses and entities who make Tillamook County so great. I hope you enjoy reading through the various categories, seeing who our readers chose as their favorite. When you think about it, we're all winners here in Tillamook County.

How consumers can help small businesses thrive

Small businesses continue to be the backbone of the North American business community. According to the career resource Zippia, there are 33.2 million small businesses in the United States. Those organizations employ around 62 million people.

Maintaining a small business through economic highs and lows and other issues often comes down to customer involvement. Consumers are the driving forces behind the success of small businesses.

Here are some effective ways for consumers to help small businesses grow.

• Shop local. The "Shop Local" movement has been around for awhile but remains as relevant as ever. Shopping local means becoming repeat patrons at the independent businesses that comprise Main Street as opposed to the chain stores that dominate strip malls.

• Share on social. Social media can be a great way to spread the word about businesses you like and point out particular examples why you shop there. Utilizing social media platforms to highlight the positive attributes of a business can help that business grow.

• Call direct for take-out orders. Those ubiquitous third-party food delivery services may be convenient, but businesses have to share the profit from your purchase with the delivery service, cutting into their bottom lines. Pick up your order or rely on the restaurants' own delivery teams.

• Engage with the business online. Complicated algorithms and other factors determine how a business' website or social media page gets seen by the public. You can help things along by liking pages, visiting the website frequently and sharing any posts.

• Speak about a business in person. When out and about, whether you're dining with friends or chatting with a stranger, try to push and recommend businesses you support. If someone compliments your lawn, shoes or haircut, mention the businesses that did the work or sold you the products.

• Suggest opportunities for exposure. If you know about a school or organization looking for vendors, make the suggestion to a small business you use frequently. They may get new customers from participating in the event.

Small businesses are driving forces in the economy. Consumers can do their part to keep them thriving and profitable.

Pay it forward: Local businesses can help each other

The power of small businesses is immense. However, starting a small business is no easy venture. The financial resource Fortunly states that roughly 22 percent of small businesses will fail in their first year of operation. Thirty percent fail because they run out of cash. One of the ways a small business can do better is to utilize the support of other local businesses.

Business owners often conduct market research to identify who their competition is and to determine if there is room in the market for their products or services. It's just as important for established business owners to keep up with the who's who in the business community, as doing so can pave the way for collaborative efforts that benefit all local businesses. Here are some ways small business owners can support one another.

discovers a resource or an opportunity that worked for him or her, or even one that didn't work but may for another, can pass on the information to another small business owner. It's not about driving others down, but lifting them up.

• Cross-promotion:

Business owners can show support by promoting other businesses in their communities. Make a bulletin board (either in-person or online) of other local business cards to recommend. This exhibits your community spirit and builds camaraderie. Use every opportunity to refer complementary businesses. For example, a local pet shop may recommend a pet groomer or veterinarian.

• Organize networking events: Whether it's done through a local Chamber of Commerce or individual efforts, small business owners can spearhead events that get other business owners together to network and share ideas. These meetings can be informal to help others let off steam at the same time.

• Volunteer and donate: Small businesses can meet other business owners, but also become more involved in their communities through volunteer events. Partner with charities or other local businesses to promote philanthropic efforts. School supply giveaways, beach sweeps, community park refurbishments, or even supporting efforts to clean trash from Main Street are great ways to get involved.

Small business owners willing to work together can collectively improve their communities, which should benefit everyone's bottom line.

Five reasons to shop small and shop local

The importance of small businesses to the economy can not be overstated. Though national chains are well loved and often garner publicity, local businesses are also worthy of attention.

What defines a small business as "small" varies significantly, but these businesses are generally privately owned and generate far less revenue than big corporations. General consensus also defines small businesses as companies with fewer than 500 paid employees, according to the U.S. Small Business Administration.

Here's a deep look at why small businesses are so vital, and why consumers should direct more of their purchasing power to smaller companies rather than the big box retailers and other national chains.

1. Autonomy and diversity

The layout and offerings at national chains will be identical whether you live in the mountains or at the beach. Big box stores follow a consistent marketing strategy and look the same regardless of where they are located. That familiarity can come at the cost of variety. On the other hand, an independent business offers the products and services that are reflective of the customers and the community they serve.

2. Local hiring strategy

Certain big box retailers will hire local residents, but hiring policies may push for promoting from within the organization. This could mean relocating an employee rather than bringing in someone from the community who may be more in tune with local sensibilities. Small businesses may be more inclined to hire residents they know and keep hiring centralized to the local area — something that keeps more resources and money in the community.

3. Adaptability and change

Local businesses can move more quickly to respond to economic factors that require change. Since they are focused more on the needs of their customers rather than stockholders, changes can be implemented rapidly without having to go through red tape, meetings and updates to corporate policies. Changes also can be customized to the local community at large.

4. Investing in the town

According to the financial resource Financial Slot, shopping at locally owned businesses rather than big box retailers keeps more money in the community. Local property taxes and other taxes paid by the businesses go right back into the community. This helps raise overall value for homeowners and can even reduce their taxes. The funding helps keep police, fire and school departments functioning properly.

5. Turnover is greater

While no one wants to see a small business fail, that fate is sometimes unavoidable. However, that turnover helps teach communities what was done poorly and helps others learn from those mistakes. It also means fresh businesses will come in and replace the old, driving new growth, opportunity and competition that keeps prices competitive.

The benefits of a thriving small business sector are numerous. Consumers can do their part by patronizing these firms more frequently.

5 tips to consider before starting a start-up

Building a small business from scratch can be an exciting endeavor that poses some significant challenges. With the right resources and support, entrepreneurs can turn their dreams into successful businesses.

There are roughly 33 million small businesses in the United States, and it's clear to see how small businesses dominate the economic landscape.

The Small Business Administration identifies small businesses as those having fewer than 500 employees.

The process of starting a small business varies depending on the industry, location and other factors, but here's a generalized look at the steps to be expected early on.

1. Figure out your idea and research it

Coming up with a successful idea is one of the first steps to take when starting a business. It's possible to take an existing type of business and customize it for a given community, or to create something new and innovative.

After the idea is put on paper, it's important to research the potential competition and decide if the business will have a competitive advantage to survive. Market research is crucial.

2. Write a business plan

A business plan helps formalize the ideas of the business and lists the necessary steps to take. By thinking through the process methodically, a potential business owner can figure out where problems may turn up and where to devote the most attention to help make the business profitable. It also helps if one thinks through how he or she will secure the capital for starting the company.

3. Choose the right time

Prospective business owners need to assess whether the time is right for starting a business. While there may never be a perfect time, it's best to engage when there are fewer obstacles in the way. You want to devote full attention to the business. If that's not possible, then it's likely best to delay. Times when starting a business may not be ideal include when battling an illness, during a family move or right after the death of a loved one. Economic factors beyond your control, such as a downturn or recession, also may affect the potential success of a business venture.

4. Pick a business structure

Involving a business attorney in this process would be in a person's best interests. A business can be legally structured in certain ways, and how it is structured will affect registration requirements as well as how much a business owner pays in taxes. The structure also can affect personal liability. Speaking with a lawyer will highlight the pros and cons of structuring and help a person make the best decision possible.

5. Speak to other business owners

A potential entrepreneur can pick the brains of small business owners to figure out what worked and what didn't when they were first starting out. This can help entrepreneurs avoid certain pitfalls and uncover proven paths to success.

Starting a business can be a worthwhile undertaking, especially when entrepreneurs consider a variety of factors before getting started.
