Work progressing on new TPUD transmission line to Oceanside

WILL CHAPPELL
Headlight Editor

A long-envisioned project to add a transmission line and substation to serve Tillamook Peoples' Utility District customers in Oceanside is nearing completion, with pole placement complete and work well underway on the substation.

The project will shorten the length of power outages in the community, as the existing distribution line that follows Highway 131 will no longer be the sole source of power, increase the quality of electricity reaching users and decrease power loss during transmission.

"Eventually, just running long distribution lines and having that voltage loss is not the way to go," said Tillamook Peoples' Utility District General Manager Todd Simmons. "You build up the transmission line, you get no voltage loss, you have the substation, then you've got the backup feeds and that's the way you build the system."

The need for eventual system expansion to supplement Oceanside's service was identified by TPUD staff as early as the 1960s, but the project moved to the front burner in 2015.

Currently, Netarts and Oceanside are served by a distribution line, meaning that when an issue occurs at any point, all customers beyond that point are without power until TPUD crews can repair the problem. Additionally, Simmons said that the length of the line meant that three to four households' worth of power are lost during transmission and that power arriving for users near the end of the line might be suboptimal, comparing it to attaching a power tool to a long extension cord.

The new, 115-kilovolt transmission line will address both those problems, by providing no-loss transmission to the Oceanside substation and giving users a secondary route for power delivery in cases where one of the lines goes down.

Work on the new transmission line began earlier this year, and 70 poles have been installed along its course, starting at the substa-

ODOT officials discuss Hwy 6 issues

Stitched together in the 1930s from a series of logging roads and paths to give fire crews access to the forest during the Tillamook Burn, Oregon Highway 6 uses a far from ideal alignment.

Every year, maintenance workers from the Oregon Department of Transportation battle against at least five different areas that slide between mileposts 33 and 36, spending upward of $100,000 in a Sisyphean struggle to keep the road open.

"It's really because of the underlying geology," said Rory "Tony" Robinson, a senior geotechnical designer with the Oregon Department of Transportation. "The rock is weak, and we have these just tremendously large, unstable areas that we don't have any control over. The road is where the road is, and unfortunately, we inherited it this way, so we just have to deal with it."

Robinson and ODOT Region 2 Public Information Officer Mindy McCart recently sat down with the Headlight Herald to discuss the underlying geologic situation in the area impacted by slides and possible solutions.

Robinson is part of a team that monitors more than 1,200 slides in ODOT's region two, which comprises western Oregon counties from the border with Washington south to Lane County. The team uses satellite images and aerial radar, as well as in-ground instruments to monitor movement at the sites.

In the section of road on Highway 6 just on the east side of the crest of the coast range in Washington County, McCart said that geotechnical problems emerged as soon as the road was built in the 1930s. Through the years, multiple projects have been undertaken to try to improve the issue, including the installation of a drainage tunnel in the 1960s and two soldier walls in the 2010s.

But still, the slope moves. A map of the slides in the area shared by Robinson showed five distinct areas that experience sliding on the hill, including one mega-slide with two lobes, one of which is causing the issues at milepost 34.8.

Planning progressing on Dorymen's Heritage Center

WILL CHAPPELL
Headlight Editor

Since 2017, a group of committed citizens in Pacific City have been working on a plan to preserve the unique history of the city's dory fleet with the construction of a heritage center.

A nonprofit entity to support the project has been formed with a board selected, land for the center was secured in 2022 and at a recent town hall meeting, project leaders said that they were shifting focus to fundraising.

"This is an important part of history for the state of Oregon, the county and beyond and locally," said Dorymen's Heritage Association Board President Dave Larkins, "it can't get lost, it can't."

At the town hall meeting, Larkins's wife Linda, treasurer of the board, project engineer Bob Grummel and project manager Brook Olsen updated interested citizens on the project's progress.

Linda spoke first, giving a brief history of the work that has already occurred. Linda said that the project had been the brainchild of Paul Hammond, who spent more than 50 years collecting information and writing about the dory fleet. In 2017, when work on the project started in earnest, Linda said that the first step was setting forward a one-page narrative with the vision for the heritage center. That was followed by a feasibility study, completed in 2021, which determined that the project was worth pursuing.

The group then created a master interpretative plan for the museum including how it would look and what would be in its collections with assistance from Alchemy Design from Portland and crafted a mission statement.

Early work was supported by and done under the auspices of the Pacific City Dorymen's Association, with additional support coming from a $75,000 grant from Tillamook County in 2020, but the group has since formed a separate, registered nonprofit to manage the project.

A major step forward came in 2022, when Tillamook County's board of commissioners reached out to project leaders and offered a potential home for the center on a property adjacent to the Kiawanda Community Center. The county had purchased the property, known as the Jensen property, in 2021 for $2.875 million in transient lodging tax dollars, with an eye towards creating a park to encourage visitors to the area to spread beyond Cape Kiwanda. Details on a land lease with the county are still being finalized, but the Larkins and Olsen said they expect it to have a 100-year term and nominal annual payment.

“I don’t think we’d be here if it wasn’t for that,” Linda said, “it was an anchor, it gave us legitimacy.”

Grummel then discussed the vision for the museum, saying that the next step in the process was to raise the money to fully design the facility.

Early plans, including schematic designs and renderings, have been worked up and a strong vision for the collection has emerged. Grummel said that the facility would not just be a place to store boats, but one where stories were told and work occurred on craft in an active workshop with learning opportunities.

Planned exhibit topics include the history of the dory fleet and Oregon’s maritime industry, the future of the dory, the catch of the dory fleet, indigenous people in the area and Paul Hanneman, a state legislator heavily involved in passing Oregon’s beach and bottle bills who also built dory boats.

Grummel said the center will feature historic dory boats, the last gill boat to ply the Nestucca River, a trove of photographs and film archives, fishing gear, interpretative talks, and boat building and restoration.

Finally, Olsen discussed the team’s vision for the center and next steps. Olsen said that as one of just three off-beach fishing fleets in the world, the uniqueness of the dory fleet to Pacific City deserved celebration and preservation, and that the team believed it would be an important addition to the community. “It’s going to be another piece of the puzzle to what makes Pacific City pretty amazing,” Olsen said.

Olsen said that numbers from the feasibility study showed that the museum would be economically viable and that she believed there was a path forward to finance the museum, which has an estimated budget of around $10 million.

The project recently received a grant from the Oregon Cultural Trust and joined the organization, and the team is now focused on increasing public awareness, recently launching a website for the project at dorycenter.org, as well as social media pages. Olsen said that as part of that push, the team will also be approaching potential funders to raise $500,000, which would unlock a matching grant and allow for an architect to be hired.

Olsen said that in the long run, the nonprofit would probably set up an endowment for the museum and that the team has already met with Senator Suzanne Weber and representatives of Congresswoman Suzanne Bonamici and Senator Ron Wyden.

This summer, ODOT crews overlaid new asphalt at the spot as well as in other areas on the slope that needed it and they will continue to monitor the roadway daily as winter weather begins.

As part of his job, Robinson also works up potential solutions to the problems, and for the slide at 34.8 he has put forward three possibilities. One is a soldier wall tied in to rock beneath that would buttress the road's current alignment, with a projected cost around $20 million, another is moving the road slightly upslope, so it does not sit on the edge of the slide, estimated to cost between $6 and $10 million, and the third is to excavate the highway to remove sawdust fill used in its construction and replace it with upgraded fill material, projected to cost $9 to $15 million.

Several problems attend any potential repairs, including the fact that any solution could be rendered moot by increased movement in the underlying slide and that there are at least four other spots in the three-mile stretch facing similar issues.

Fixing the problems at all the sites would cost upwards of $100 million, Robinson estimated, raising the prospect that rebuilding the road with a new alignment avoiding the problematic slope altogether, which Robinson estimated would carry a similar nine-figure price tag, might be a more cost-effective solution.

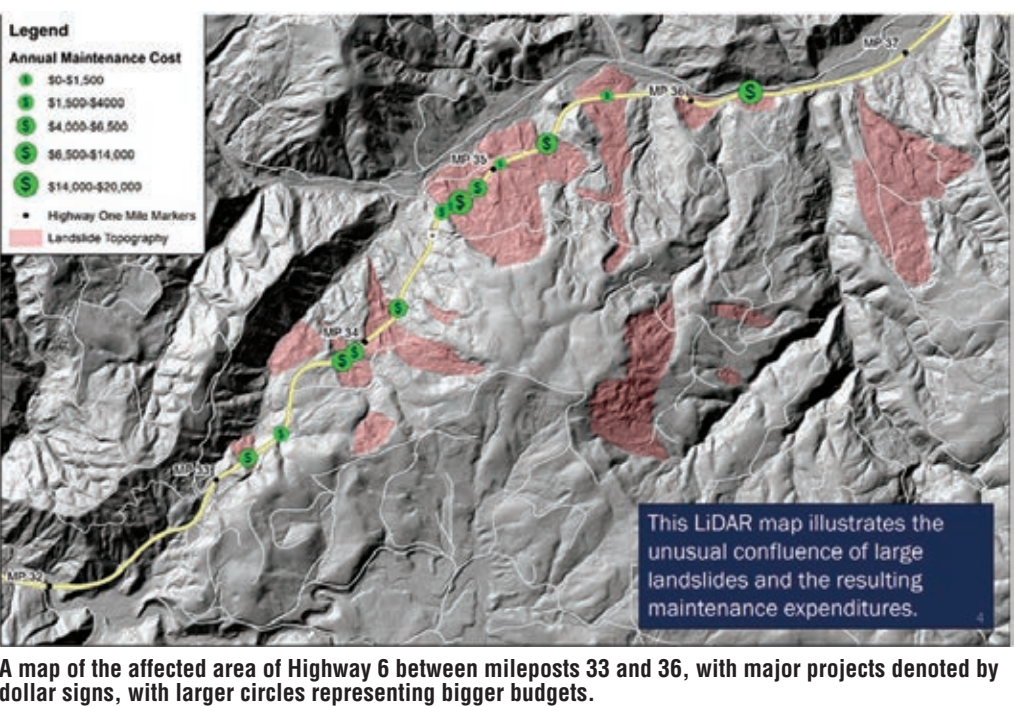

"It's a balancing point, because at some point, the maintenance costs to keep the road open become a drain," Robinson said, "but at some point, when you're looking at hundreds of millions of dollars to realign a road, well actually, the maintenance costs aren't that bad, unless there's a political will to do it."

There, the discussion leaves the purview of ODOT officials and moves to state legislators, who would have to instruct the agency to investigate an alternate alignment.

As Tillamook County leaders and residents hope for that next step, they will have to contend with the fact that other situations where slides endanger highways abound up and down the coast range, though Robinson said that Highway 6's problem is particularly bad.

"The coast range in Oregon has very, very bad rock, and different spots suffer from this problem," Robinson said. "This one is tion on First Street east of Highway 101 in downtown Tillamook. From there, the line follows the Port of Tillamook Bay's railroad tracks north to Goodspeed Road, where it turns west to cross Highway 101, continuing along Goodspeed before turning south briefly and west again across the Southern Flow Corridor before crossing Mount Maxwell to the substation near Oceanside's water treatment plant.

Along the route, TPUD had to coordinate with 30 landowners, ranging from timber companies to dairy farmers, to secure easements for property and determine the most convenient route for landowners, before going through the complex permitting process for a project passing through ecologically sensitive habitats in different land-use zones.

Originally estimated at $10 million, the project's budget came in at $22 million after inflation and material cost increases in the intervening years. The project is being financed by a low-interest loan from the Rural Electric Service, part of the United States Department of Agriculture, which will be repaid over 30 years and will be accounted for by a 2% increase in rates, already factored into planned annual increases.

Rope to pull conductive line between the poles has been strung along the entire route, and Simmons said that crews should finish stringing conductive line in the next couple weeks. Installation of equipment at the substation is expected to be complete by February.

At that point, all that will remain to complete the project is connecting it to the Tillamook substation, a job that will take three days, but which must first receive approval from PacifiCorp. The company owns one of the two transmission lines that bring power to the substation and while it currently arrives at the westerly most bay, TPUD hopes to relocate it to the middle bay to allow the new Oceanside transmission line to use its current bay.

In addition to allowing a smoother routing for the Oceanside transmission line, this would also facilitate easier switching between the Bonneville Power Administration line in the easterly most bay and the PacifiCorp line, which services north Tillamook County and experiences frequent outages.

Simmons said he is hopeful that PacifiCorp's leaders will approve the project, for which TPUD is covering half the cost while Bonneville and PacifiCorp foot 25% apiece, but that if they do not by next summer, TPUD will move forward with connecting the Oceanside line to the central bay.

Once the project is complete, outages in Oceanside and Netarts will no longer be communitywide, as TPUD will be able to isolate problems between switches along distribution lines, shut off power between those affected and restore power to the rest of the area by the alternate line while repairs progress.

"It's not going to eliminate outages, there's still going to be trees on lines," said Simmons, "but their outages are going to be shorter because we can reroute power."

Commissioners strategize on budget at work session

WILL CHAPPELL
Headlight Editor

Tillamook county commissioners discussed strategies to address gaps in the county’s budget at a work session on October 6, based on a report evaluating ideas advanced by the county’s budget committee last year. Discussion largely centered on ways to increase the impact of restricted transient lodging tax (TLT) dollars, by awarding them to various departments, allowing a commensurate reduction in their reliance on general fund dollars. Commissioners also discussed trimming costs by continuing to delay hiring new positions and several other potential strategies, while signaling their lack of interest in pursuing tax or fee increases that would impact county residents, except as a last resort.

Background

Conversations around the county’s tenuous budget situation kicked in to high gear last summer after the spring approval of a habitat conservation plan for western Oregon state forests cut the county’s timber revenues substantially. Along with statutorily limited increases to property taxes, that revenue cut created a projected deficit of to $2 million to

$3.6 million in each of the five fiscal years starting in 2025, which began in July 2024. In special meetings of the budget committee last summer and fall, suggestions for cutting expenses and generating new revenues were brainstormed, including raising the county’s TLT, instituting utility fees on electric bills and shortening employee work weeks. Consultants from Tiberius Solutions have since been working to evaluate the feasibility and impact of those ideas, generating a report on which the commissioners’ discussion was based. The meeting began with Debra Jacob from the Tillamook County Treasurer’s Office giving a detailed update on the county’s current financial position. Jacob detailed how commissioners and the budget committee had plugged the hole in last year’s budget, which came in closer to $2.5 million after timber revenues came in lower than projected, by using American Rescue Plan Act funds to backfill $700,000 in funding for completed projects and accounting for $1.9 million in funds allocated for unfilled staff positions. For this year’s budget, commissioners plugged the projected hole with a

$1.2-million transfer from the county’s revenue stabilization fund, and a $1-million transfer from the Parks Department, which they reimbursed with an award of restricted TLT dollars. Those dollars can only be used for projects or operations with a substantial use by tourists, a requirement which all Parks Department projects meet. Currently Jacob discussed the county’s staffing situation, saying that of 134 budgeted positions, on average, only 120 were filled, accounting for just $16.5 million of $18.4 million budgeted for compensation. Personnel are budgeted to account for 71% of the county’s budget, with the remainder going to materials and services, insurance, software and a small portion to capital outlays. Jacob then reviewed the county’s revenue stabilization fund, which has been drawn on five times in the last 17 years, including last year, and has a current balance around $2 million, with another draw of $1.2 million planned for next year’s budget. The county’s ending fund balance sits around 10.9% of overall revenues, compared to a recommended 15%, according to Jacobs, and is projected to decrease by $1.1 million in this fiscal year to $3.08 million by July 2026. Absent action, decreases will continue in future fiscal years by around $2 million annually due to the county’s cash flow gap, putting the fund balance below zero in July 2027. The balance functions to cover the county’s operating expenses between the beginning of the fiscal year and the arrival of property tax payments in the fall and would rebound above insolvency briefly, before hitting what contracted financial analyst Mike Gleason called “crunch time” in April 2028. Gleason, who has been helping the county with financial planning since last year, said that at that point the county would have to start borrowing from its general reserve fund, which he estimated would cover cash flow gaps for an additional five to six years. Solutions analysis Tillamook County Chief Administrative Officer Rachel Hagerty then broke down the results of the Tiberius Solutions analysis of 30 revenue-generation, and 21 cost-reduction strategies proposed by county leaders last year. The evaluation was based on six factors including solutions’ impact, ease of implementation and political viability. The top five revenue-generating ideas were a public service charge, systems development charge, vacant housing fee, vehicle registration fee and local option levy to support the sheriff’s department. A public service charge could be implemented to pay for a county service specified by the commissioners and collected through residents’ electric bills with the Tillamook Peoples’ Utility District. Such a charge would generate an estimated $1.9 million annually. Systems development charges are one-time fees charged to new construction projects to account for past improvements to utility systems for which existing users paid and would generate an estimated $1 million annually. A vacant housing fee is a new concept, Hagerty said, and would be applied to residences that failed to meet an occupancy minimum, and while specifics would need to be developed, it could generate around $100,000 annually. Adding vehicle registration fees on top of current state fees is in the commissioners’ purview and could generate a projected $680,000 annually. Two other potential strategies, a utility permit fee to cover the cost of permitting work in the right of way and generating $50,000 annually and a solid waste and recycling franchise fee, paid by private utility companies for the benefit of using the private right of way and exclusive franchise rights, were also included in the analysis. On the cost-cutting front, the top five solutions were making long-term plans to increase financial efficiency, deferring capital expenses, delaying filling open positions, freezing salaries and furlough days for employees. Long-term planning work is already ongoing under Tiberius, with a further report expected in December, which Hagerty said will help the county move into the final phase of financial planning. Hagerty said that report will recommend a new property manager position at the county to focus on developing county properties to increase revenue, evaluate day use fees and manage the county’s foreclosed property program. It will also include a recommendation to add a code officer position to enforce existing ordinances and help keep them up to date. Hagerty then discussed county’s use of TLT revenues, saying that the Tillamook Coast Visitors Association (TCVA), which receives $2 million from the county annually for destination management services, is close to completing a prioritized list of projects across the county that qualify for the funds, which will be brought to commissioners and incorporated in the county’s strategic plan. Finally, Hagerty discussed staff recommendations based on the report, saying that they recommended quarterly budget committee meetings after timber harvest revenues arrived and monthly updates to commissioners from the county leadership team; not pursuing a sheriff’s levy; having a discussion about the county’s fee philosophy and whether it was appropriate to use fees to generate revenue; and continuing parks department transfers to the general fund offset by TLT awards. Regarding cost-cutting proposals, Hagerty said that staff was recommending continuing to defer maintenance while developing a plan to address select needs as funds become available. Part of that process would include exploring options to finance deferred maintenance as well as the purchase of the ex-BLM building on Third Street, which the county recently entered a purchase agreement on. Hagerty said that she also recommended the board discuss the $400,000 facilities grant program administered by TCVA and consider crafting a new policy for spending TLT funds, as the current policy is not followed. Hagerty also recommended that the county create a fund watch to more closely monitor the revenues and expenses of various county funds with issues on the horizon, like the general fund. Creating additional financial policies, which Hagerty said the county currently lacks, was also recommended, as was requiring departments to seek board approval before exceeding their budgets. Hagerty wrapped up her presentation by saying that after having a discussion at the current meeting, the board would need to choose their top 20 options from the report and rank them, to inform her next steps.

Discussion After a brief break, commissioners then began discussing the proposals, first taking the temperature of the county’s department leaders who were assembled at the meeting. All were in favor of creating management expectations around budgeting, including

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

The Culture Death of a Pacific City Part #2

I want to follow up on my previous letter about Pacific City. Let me start by saying this: I love that place. I mean, I really love it. Some of the most core memories of my life and my children's lives were made in that little town. Some of the best weekends I'll ever have happened there.

I spent my 40th birthday at the RV park with twenty of my lifelong friends in the middle of March, pouring rain and all, and it was still magical. That's the kind of place Pacific City is. It's where time slows down, where you can escape the grind of daily life and just be fully present in the beauty around you. There's something about that town that captures you.

I wrote my first letter because I care deeply about this place, and I hate to see it change. I hope I'm wrong. I hope I'm not just another blowhard complaining about how things used to be. But I've seen what happens when "elite" and "luxury" become synonymous with a destination, and the grit, freedom, and sense of community that make it special start to fade.

I also get it, people need to make a living. I'm not so self-righteous that I can't appreciate the opportunity to run a thriving business or own a rental in a beautiful spot. It's complicated. You want a community to evolve and prosper, but you also want to hold on to the heart and character that made it unique in the first place.

Maybe I'm just resisting time and change. Maybe I'm simply hoping to preserve a place that still feels real for regular folks. Either way, it's just my humble opinion and maybe something worth chatting about with your neighbor over coffee.

And before I go, a shout out to the Dory Fleets out there. That's grit. That's heritage. That's what makes Pacific City, Pacific City.

Sincerely,
Kathleen Leipzig

GARDENING MATTERS

Spooky time!

Regular readers will remember I save my last October column to focus on something spooky. I have covered bats and their benefits, spiders and their benefits, snakes and their benefits, and I even did a column on Halloween decorations one year. But this week I have something really spooky.

Enter the hammerhead worm.

A gardener friend of mine mentioned at lunch a couple of weeks ago that she had seen articles about a hammerhead worm. That put me off finishing my lunch, let me tell you. Especially when she explained what they are. Having never heard of the beast, I researched it further only to find this is really a spooky – and invasive – worm.

For one thing, its head is shaped like a half-moon or hammerhead shark, thus the name. Bipalium adventitium can grow 8 to 15 inches long, and can be found in shades of gray, honey-brown, gold, green, and may be speckled or have dark stripes. It is also known as a flat-head worm or a wandering broadhead planarian. This worm secretes a quite potent neurotoxin which it uses to immobilize its prey. The toxin tetrodotoxin can cause skin irritation in humans and can trigger nausea in pets who consume the worm. But they are also distasteful, so animals generally leave them alone.

GARDENING MATTERS

I would consider hammerheads to be apex predators of the worm world because of their toxicity. They prey on earthworms, slugs, insect larvae and other hammerheads. It is because of their preference for earthworms that they are considered a threatening and invasive species worldwide. Hammerheads don't pose a direct threat to humans or plants; however they have the power to eradicate native earthworms.

Hammerheads prefer areas of high humidity which restricts them mostly to the warmer regions of the country. But they have been found as far north as Ontario, Canada. They do inhabit greenhouses in colder climates. Coming from Southeast Asia, hammerheads apparently have been in the eastern United States for quite a while. But now they are showing up in Oregon, and specifically, Tillamook County.

Since the worms are light sensitive, they feed at night. They have a slimy mucus covering that helps in their movement and keeps them from drying out. They have what are called "creeping soles" which are small hair-like surfaces on their underside that helps them glide along that mucus film, similar to slugs.

Now this is the part that gets really spooky: these worms are potentially immortal. They are hermaphrodites, possessing both female and male reproductive organs. But much more common is asexual reproduction whereby they can reproduce from fragments of their bodies. If a worm is cut into pieces, each of those pieces can regenerate into an adult in a few weeks.

This makes it rather tricky to banish hammerheads from our gardens. First, I recommend wearing gloves or using a stick or paper towel to pick one up. If you do happen to touch one, wash and disinfect your hands immediately. They will generally roll themselves into a ball if disturbed, making them easier to collect. Don't cut them for reasons given above. The best thing to do is to place them in a container that can be sealed, like a cottage cheese or yogurt tub or resealable plastic bag. Then add salt or vinegar to the container and place it in the freezer for 48 hours to be sure the worm has dissolved. Once you are sure the worm is dead, place the sealed container in the trash for disposal. Do not try to compost these guys.

If you have found one hammerhead worm, there are probably more. Keep on the lookout for them, usually in the early morning and after it rains when they are more likely to be visible. If you can, before you dispose of them, take a photo and send it to the OSU Extension Office at <https://extension.oregon-state.edu/ask-extension> so they can submit the information to Oregon State for tracking.

If this doesn't affect your sleep at night, I give up. Happy Halloween.

Sue Drafahl of Cape Meares is an inaugural member of the Women Divers Hall of Fame (WDHOF). This dynamic group celebrated its 25th anniversary this year with a tour of the Oregon Coast and Wine Country. No diving this go-round, but there was plenty of camaraderie during five days and four nights of wine tastings, meals out and tours here in Oregon. The group started in Florence to attend a member’s yearly cancer fundraiser (Diveforacure.org) and worked their way up the coast photographing lighthouses, and then back through McMinville, where they enjoyed five wineries. The festivities included a dinner hosted by Sue Drafahl—with the help of Jack Drafahl, Diondra Gordon and Wendy Kunkel—at our own Barbara Bennett Community Center on Oct. 5. WDHOF attendees came from coast to coast to attend. WDHOF offers an associate membership so everyone can contribute to their scholarship goals and join them on trips like this one (wdhof.org).

There was a short power outage in Cape Meares on the morning of October 8. I checked with the Tillamook PUD and found out that the outage, which went beyond our immediate community, was due to construction work on the new Tillamook to-Oceanside transmission line. A contractor was installing the pull rope that will be used to pull in the transmission line conductor when the rope accidentally touched an active power line. This occurrence prompted one of the PUD’s electric system safety features, known as a recloser, to activate and turn off the power immediately. This is a good thing; we don’t want a tree branch or the like touching a hot power line and causing damage. The good folks at the PUD had us up and running again in a little over half an hour. By the way, the new Tillamook to-Oceanside transmission line will not have any effect here in Cape Meares, although some day the PUD may build more infrastructure out our way to create a looped system that would provide more redundancy in our electrical service. Conduit has already been installed along the new Cape Meares Loop Road in anticipation of connecting the Oceanside substation to the Cape Meares system in the future.

The evening of blues/jazz that Bob Garrigues organized for the Cape Meares community on October 9, was a big hit. About 25 people came to the Barbara Bennett Community Center to enjoy music performed by Lauren Sheehan, a master musician who also teaches at Pacific University, and Port Barlow, a lifelong musician. The two musicians, who had never met before that night, shared a wonderful, energetic and enjoyable music conversation after their marvelous individual sets. Listening to them play guitar and mandolin, sing, and talk music made for a wonderfully mellow night in Cape Meares. We hope this duo and others continue to come to Cape Meares to perform.

The Mexican food potluck hosted by Meka and Jon Zieger had such a big turnout, a fourth dining table had to be added. From chips and salsa to baked beans, ribs to pulled pork, whipped cream pastries to Hershey chocolate bars, everyone had plenty to eat and enjoyed their meal. Conversation was lively and the evening was a huge success. Many thanks, Meka and Jon.

Next week’s column will have a report on Cape Meares’s participation in the Great ShakeOut drill on October 16. Stay tuned.

Nancy Contolini
Aug. 11, 1947 - Sept. 9, 2025

Nancy Contolini was born on August 11, 1947 in Bridgeport, Connecticut to John and Helen Contolini. She passed away on Sept. 9, 2025.

Nancy grew up in Fairfield, Connecticut and earned a Bachelor of Science degree at Trinity College, plus a Master of Science degree at the University of Bridgeport. Her passion was education and she spent her career as a devoted, highly accomplished high school biology teacher, helping her students discover their own learning passions and life work.

Some time back, one of her former students (now a research scientist in microbiology at Woods Hole, Massachusetts) wrote her a letter. When he was still in high school, Nancy had recognized his potential in the field of biology and had him switch his enrollment to the honors class that she taught. He wrote to her that, had it not been for her, “I would not be the person I am today,” writing of the “... profound effect you had on my education and career.” He wrote, “...what an outstanding teacher you have been for me.”

Throughout her career, Nancy received numerous awards, including the “Presidential Award for Excellence in Mathematics and Science Teaching” in 1996. She never stopped learning, including a sabbatical at Oak Ridge National Laboratories in Tennessee where she learned more about biotechnology. She took that knowledge back to her students, receiving a Christa McAuliffe Program grant to establish a biotechnology learning center at her high school.

During her retirement Nancy resided in Nedonna Beach, Oregon, serving her community in several ways. Active in the American Association of University Women (AAUW), she also became a children’s advocate in Tillamook County’s “Court Appointed Special Advocate” (CASA) program. She was a hardworking volunteer at both the Tillamook County Pioneer Museum and the Rockaway Beach Library. As a longtime Board member at Tides of Change (the local organization that helps survivors of domestic violence and sexual assault) Nancy also served as the office’s volunteer receptionist.

Nancy’s parents predeceased her, as did her brother Robert and sister Arty. She is survived by her sister Carol, brother-in-law David Ringelberg of Bradford, Vermont, sister-in-law Judy Contolini, and numerous nieces and nephews.

A Celebration of Life for Nancy will be held in the Bunker Grill at Alderbrook Golf Course from 2 to 5 p.m. on November 9, 2025.

Talk to teens about the importance of driving safety during National Teen Driver Safety Week

Your Tillamook Police Department is teaming up with Tillamook High School to support National Teen Driver Safety Week, October 19-25, 2025. On Tuesday, October 22nd during school hours Teen Drivers will have the opportunity to drive a golfcart on a cone course simulating distractive and impaired driving. It is important to discuss safe driving habits with teens every day, but Teen Driver Safety Week serves as an opportunity for parents and guardians to have a conversation with teens about safe driving habits. Teen drivers need to know the Rules of the Road before parents hand over the keys. Ultimately, it’s parents who are in control.

Traffic crashes are a leading cause of death for 15-20-year-olds. In 2023, there were 2,611 people killed in crashes involving a teen (15 to 18 years old) driver, and 822 were teen drivers themselves. Of the 2,611 people killed in crashes involving a teen (15-18 years old) driver, 604 were the passengers of a teen driver, and 377 (62%) of those fatalities were other teens riding with a passenger vehicle teen driver. Of those teen passengers killed while riding with another teen driver, 67% were male and 33% were female.

“Parents play a critical role in teaching teen drivers safe driving habits,” said Chief Troxel. “New teen drivers are gaining experience behind the wheel, which increases the chance of dangerous situations for the teen and other roadway users around them,” School Resource Officer Olson said.

It’s critical for parents to model safe driving behaviors themselves and have discussions with their teens about the choices they make behind the wheel. NHTSA offers parents and guardians helpful tips and a framework for having discussions with teen drivers about risky driving behaviors that can lead to fatal consequences.

It’s a parent’s responsibility to help teen drivers make smart choices to stay safe on the road. NHTSA gives parents and guardians tips on how to talk about safer driving. These tips include discussions on how to influence positive behaviors and how to approach dangerous driving behaviors such as alcohol and other drug use, lack of seat belt use, distracted driving, speeding, or driving with passengers. Surveys show that teens whose parents set firm rules for driving typically engaged in less risky driving behaviors and were involved in fewer crashes.

Teens need to understand the rules, whether there are any other restrictions outlined in Oregon’s graduated driver licensing law, and the deadly consequences that could occur.

For more information about teen driver safety, visit www.nhtsa.gov/road-safety/teen-driving.

The event is free and is expected to build on the excitement and success of last year’s event, which moved to the Anchor Street Park for the first time.

If you’ve spent any time in transit along Highway 101, you’ve no doubt seen many businesses decorating for Halloween and for the harvest season. On my walks through the neighborhood I’ve seen dozens of homes with decorations ranging from eerie to comical.

I’m especially fond of the “It’s Too Late Petting Zoo” on N 3rd. This is a collection of skeletal animals from cute (bunnies, chickens, and the like) to improbable. I think the topper of that category has to be the skeleton octopus... yes, you read that correctly. Skeleton fishermen and at least one skeleton sloth make an appearance.

For businesses, I’d have to say smart money is on Grumpy’s winning again, and I haven’t yet seen the squad of skeletons climbing face-down from the roof as we did last year.

But Grumpy’s tells tales of a ghost of their own. Employees there speak of “Roger,” a restless spirit of what appears to be the poltergeist variety, known for moving, hiding and occasionally throwing things.

True ghost aficionados know that “poltergeist” comes from a Dutch word meaning “noisy ghost,” because their antics are said to involve moving physical objects, not simply making shadowy appearances or shimmering apparitions on moonless nights.

One story about Roger involves a Grumpy’s staffer who arrived alone early one morning to open the restaurant. He laid his keys down on a table and left the room briefly; when he returned, the keys were missing. Other staff report seeing cans sailing across the kitchen, and even a knife or two making its way off the rack and into the middle of a room.

Perhaps the most chilling story comes from one of our Rockaway Renaissance Artists, who paint our window decorations every year. She was painting the mural inside Grumpy’s a few years ago, and as usual she stayed after closing to work without disturbing customers. The kitchen staff left her alone with instructions to lock up when she was done.

A little after 3 p.m.—so no, not on a dark and stormy night, but in the broad light of day—she began cleaning up her brushes while seated on the floor in clear view of the restroom.

To her surprise, the restroom door slowly swung open.

Then the light turned on. Then the water started running in the sink, shutting down after a few minutes.

Finally, the light turned off again... and the door closed.

Whether you see Roger or not, winners of the Halloween decorating contest will be announced at 4 p.m. at the Trunk or Treat.

In addition, the Oregon Coast Scenic Railroad has two Halloween Train rides scheduled for that weekend. On Saturday, October 25 and again on Sunday, October 26, this one-hour ride leaves Rockaway Beach at 5:30 for Garibaldi, before it returns to Rockaway at 6:30.

The train will be decorated “in a not-so-spooky fashion,” according to the OCSR, but children in costume will have the opportunity to trick-or-treat in the 1910 Neakahnie Car once the train is underway. There will be an on-board costume contest for kids who wish to participate, and all riders will enjoy complimentary apple cider on the way.

COUNTY

a defined communication strategy, holding meetings for quarterly and monthly reporting, developing a fee philosophy and beginning to address capital maintenance as possible. Also receiving support were the property manager position, an updated TLT policy, a fund watch, and a full audit of the county’s services and budget.

Commissioners then discussed possible new fees and tax increases, with all saying that they were not sold on the public service charge on electric bills and were opposed to a vehicle registration fee. Contrastingly, all said that they were in favor of moving forward with the proposed utility permit and solid waste and recycling franchise fees.

Hagerty asked commissioners how they would feel about again asking voters to approve an increase to the county’s TLT, after a measure seeking approval in this May’s election fell short by just 12 votes. Commissioner Mary Faith Bell said that she wanted to wait to see how State Representative Cyrus Javadi’s attempts to change restrictions on the fee at the state level went before taking such an action, and Commissioner Paul Fournier agree.

Regarding TCVA’s management of the facilities grant, Commissioner Erin Skaar said that she thought there was value in having the organization manage the program and wasn’t in favor of making a change ahead of next year’s cycle. Skaar said that she did believe a conversation about where TLT money goes and how it is awarded was warranted.

Bell proposed that a working group should be formed to evaluate the county’s relationship with TCVA going forward considering the recent changes to the county’s understanding of permissible uses of the restricted funds, to wit, the parks department support and reciprocal general fund transfers. Bell said that she wanted to involve TCVA staff and board members in any discussion and work towards a new arrangement by the time the organization’s agreement with the county ends in June 2027.

Commissioners then discussed the prospects for expanding the use of TLT dollars to pay for permissible costs in various departments currently covered by the general fund.

All said that they were interested in working with the Tillamook County Fair Board to explore the possibility of awarding TLT revenue to the fair to cover some portion of their expenses to be matched by a return transfer to the general fund.

Skaar said that she was interested in looking at upping the reciprocal transfers between the parks department and general fund, noting that all their fee revenues could theoretically be transferred to the general fund.

Bell said that she wasn’t opposed to exploring the idea but wanted to be sure that the parks department would not be shortchanged in any such scenario.

Fournier said that he was in favor of both the potential of a fair transfer, as well as increasing transfers with the parks department and looking for other novel opportunities to use TLT, such as paying for sheriff’s deputies overtime during the fair as the county did this year.

Fournier also said that further developing the county’s tourist facilities to expand revenue should be a priority and that using visitor dollars should be the path forward over imposing new fees on residents.

Tillamook volleyball teams remain in playoff hunt

By MIKE WEBER

For The Headlight Herald

The Tillamook High Cheesemakers kept their hopes alive for an OSAA Class 4A volleyball playoff berth after getting a split in two Cowapa League games last week.

The No. 18-ranked Cheesemakers, guided by third-year Coach Trina Goss, lost 3-0 at home to the league leading No. 9-ranked Astoria High Fishermen (9-0 league, 11-4 overall) on October 14. Playing on back-to-back nights, the Cheesemakers (5-5 league, 8-8 overall) responded with a critical 3-1 road win the next day over the Scappoose High Indians (2-8 league, 7-19 overall).

“It was a great win against Scappoose,” said Goss. “We started off slow, but we came back strong to get the win. Overall, we had good passing, and we were aggressive at the net.”

The senior trio of Paige Wright (15 digs), Vivian Vogel (eight kills), Aubrey Hilton (three blocks) and junior Adrian Vogel (29 assists) helped lead the Mooks to the victory with their solid performance on the court.

The Mooks are hoping to keep their momentum going and get important wins in their last two games of the regular season when they meet the Seaside High Seagulls (0-8 league, 1-14 overall) Wednesday at 6:30 p.m. at Seaside High School and in their season finale on October 27 at 6:30 p.m. at home against the second place St. Helens High Lions (7-2 league, 11-5 overall).

If the Mooks win those games, they’ll be in a good position to possibly qualify for the 16-team state playoffs beginning November 1. The Mooks last qualified for state in 2023 and they’re hoping to return to the postseason this year.

The top two Cowapa league teams automatically qualify for state. Tillamook is in third place in the five-team standings. The third-place teams can earn a playoff spot with an at-Large berth that is based on rankings.

Nestucca High Bobcats

In Nestucca, the Bobcats won two games last week to stay in contention for an OSAA Class 2A Northwest League playoff spot. The Bobcats (5-8 NWL, 8-12 overall) won at home 3-0 over the Vernonia High Loggers (3-9 NWL, 4-14 overall) Oct. 14, snapping a three-game losing streak.

The Bobcats, guided by third-year Coach Megan Deam, then notched a second straight victory at home, 3-0 over the Knappa High Loggers (4-8 NWL, 4-13 overall) Oct. 16. The two wins helped solidify the Bobcats fifth place spot in the eight-team standings.

“We needed to get a win against those two teams to help keep our playoff hopes alive,” said Deam. “We were in a little bit of a downward spiral, and we definitely needed to win a couple of games, so I was very proud of our team.”

71 percent at the net to score points. Armstrong also served 77 percent from the service line, and she had two aces. Senior Taylor Knight led the Bobcats in serving at 92 percent versus Vernonia. Knight leads the offense with a total of over 100 kills this season. Nestucca junior setter Autumn Rist served very well too with five aces against the Loggers. The top five teams qualify for league playoffs beginning October 23. The top three teams from the NWL playoffs advance to the 16-team state playoffs beginning Nov. 1.

Neah-Kah-Nie High

Pirates

The Neah-Kah-Nie High Pirates split two Class 2A Coastal Range League volleyball matches last week to help keep their playoff hopes alive.

The Pirates (5-5 CRL, 8-12 overall), guided by first-year Coach Debra Beckwith, lost 3-1 to the league leading Banks High Braves (8-2 CRL, 15-5 overall) at Banks High School before bouncing back and regaining their momentum following a 3-0 home win over the Warrenton High Warriors (7-3, CRL, 11-7 overall).

“We’re going to be well-focused for our last two matches of the season,” said

Beckwith. “We do still have an opportunity to make it to the playoffs if we can win our last two matches. We are looking to play at a high level in the last two matches to try to secure a playoff spot.”

Junior Jasmine Jones helped lead the Pirates to the win over Warrenton as she had 15 digs, two blocks and four serving aces. Freshman Lucy Smith (seven kills, two blocks), junior Ruby Marteeny (five kills, 12 digs) and junior Bianca Smith 17 assists, 12 digs) also had solid performances versus the Warriors.

The Pirates were hoping to get a road win Tuesday versus the Rainier High Columbians (3-5 CRL, 7-9 overall). They’ll play their final regular season contest Thursday a 6 p.m. at home against the Corbett High Cardinals (6-4 CRL, 9-10 overall). Winning their last two games will help improve the Pirates chances to qualify for the state playoffs.

The Pirates are in fourth place in the eight team CRL standings. The top three squads automatically qualify for the 20-team state playoffs beginning Oct. 29. The fourth-place team can possibly earn an at-Large playoff spot that is based upon rankings.

Cheesemakers fall to Indians 39-28 on gridiron

Will CHAPPELL

Headlight Editor

Tillamook High School’s football team suffered their first league loss of the season on October 17, falling to the Scappoose High Indians 39-28 on the road.

The Cheesemakers trailed throughout the first half, before rallying to tie the game at 28 before watching the Indians pull away with a late touchdown and field goal and two decisive interceptions to seal the win. Senior receiver Griffyn Boomer continued a standout season for the Mooks with two receiving touchdowns and junior Eli Wootton led the Mooks on defense with two picks.

The Indians received the opening kick and started to drive from their 22, quickly pushing into Tillamook territory and advancing just outside the red zone. Facing a fourth and seven from the 19 moments later Scappoose converted before capping the drive with a passing touchdown to take a 7-0 lead with just under eight minutes remaining in the first.

Tillamook started their first drive at the 29 and on second down quarterback Kevin Hurliman connected with Boomer on a 29-yard pass to push the Mooks into Indian territory. The drive then stalled out, and the Cheesemakers failed to convert on a fourth and five attempt, returning the ball to Scappoose at their own 42.

Scappoose picked up a first down, but back-to-back penalties put them behind the chains and Eli Wootton picked off an attempted pass on their third first down attempt, giving Tillamook the ball back at midfield.

After a loss of yardage on first down, Hurliman picked up six on a quarterback keeper but after a holding penalty on third down, a Hurliman pass fell incomplete, bringing the punt team onto the field.

Taking over at the 35, the Indians picked up 21 on the ground on first down and another 15 on the ensuing play pushing them to Tillamook’s 30. The drive continued as the game ticked into the second quarter and Scappoose punched in a rushing touchdown from the one-yard line with 10:50 left in the half, extending their lead to 14-0 with a successful PAT.

An Indian squib kick gave the Mooks possession at their own 39 and Hurliman connected with Boomer on a 16-yard pass to quickly advance into Scappoose territory. Aden Camacho Garcia picked up another first on the ground and picked up nine on back-to-back rushes, before a rush for no gain brought up a fourth and one, which Tillamook converted.

Just into the red zone, the Mooks lost a yard on their first two downs, but on third, Hurliman found Boomer at the three for a first and goal. On third and one, Methias Tuiolemotu burst into the end zone and after a successful PAT Tillamook trailed 14-7 with just over seven minutes left in the half.

A wild snap on first down left Scappoose facing second and 25 from their 19, and after two incompletions the Indians ran a fake punt run, picking 27 and a first. The Indians followed up with another quick first, pushing them to Tillamook’s 42 and drawing a timeout. Scappoose connected on a touchdown pass on the next play, stretching their lead to 21-7 with 5:19 left in the half.

Tillamook took over at their own 41 and Garcia started the drive strong with a 15-yard rush into Scappoose territory. The Mooks looked to be in a spot of trouble moments later facing a fourth and eight, but Hurliman connected with Tristan Smith Evans at the 15 and the receiver shook off two Indians en route to a touchdown. With a successful PAT, the Mooks trailed 21-14 with just over four remaining.

With Scappoose back on offense, the Cheesemaker defense gave up a quick rushing first from inside the Indian ten-yard line, and a second first pushed Scappoose out to their own 42. Tillamook’s struggles with the Indian attack continued as the home team advanced to a first and goal and capped the drive with a seven-yard rush to extend the lead to 28-14 with 30 seconds left in the half, where the score stood at the break.

Tillamook started the second half strong with Garcia returning the opening kick to midfield and Boomer immediately taking a short slant pass all the way to the house to cut the lead to 28-21 less than 30 seconds into the half.

The Indian offense started at their own 30 and began rolling on the ground, reeling off three quick first downs to advance inside Tillamook’s 40. Tillamook forced the Indians into a fourth and one before a quarterback keeper kept the drive going but facing fourth and 11 on their next set of downs, a Scappoose pass fell incomplete giving the Cheesemakers the ball at their 25.

Tuiolemotu picked up nine on the ground to start the drive, but the Mooks couldn’t sustain the momentum and quickly went three and out.

Scappoose picked up momentum on their next drive, advancing from their 30 to inside the Tillamook 40 but the Mooks defense then stonewalled the Indians, forcing a punt.

The Cheesemakers started facing a long field from their own 13 and facing a third and 10, Hurliman and Boomer connected for a first down at the Indian 42. Back-to-back Tuiolemotu rushes brought up another first and Boomer took a short slant for 22 to Scappoose’s 27.

Three direct snap rushes pushed the Mooks inside the 15, and after a holding on first, Hurliman connected with Boomer for his second touchdown of the night on a 25-yard pass, evening the score at 28 with a minute and a half to go in the third.

The Indians responded with a quick drive from midfield to the Tillamook red zone, but Wootton came up huge for the Mooks with his second pick of the night at the nine-yard line.

Tillamook lost six on a first-down rush and shortly later the punt team came onto the field, giving Scappoose the ball at the Cheesemaker 32.

Scappoose capitalized on the short field with a short drive capped by a nine-yard rushing touchdown to retake the lead 36-28 with nine and a half minutes left in the game after the Indian kicker picked up a mishandled snap and rushed for a two-point conversion.

Tillamook took over at their own 45 and on second down Hurliman tossed an interception, giving Scappoose possession back at their own 31.

Scappoose began a ground-focused drive, moving into Cheesemaker territory but quick kicked the ball away after losing traction moments later.

Tillamook took over at their own 15 with just over six minutes remaining in the game but Hurliman immediately threw his second interception to an Indian defender who returned the ball to the Cheesemaker nine.

Scappoose failed to advance past the six and sent the field goal team onto the field on fourth, with a successful kick stretching the lead to 39-28 with four and a half minutes to play.

Tillamook started their next drive at their 43 and picked up a first down before Hurliman fumbled the ball on fourth down with Scappoose recovering. The Indians picked up a first down before taking a knee to seal the victory.

With the loss, the Cheesemakers went to 5-2 on the season heading into their final two games at Gladstone and Seaside. Scappoose improved to 6-1 on the season with the win and took command of the race for the Cowapa League championship.

The Mooks remain in control of their playoff destiny and can secure at least a second place finish and chance to the postseason by winning their last two matchups.

Tillamook P.U.D. held their “Customer Appreciation Week” last week, and news of it crossed my desk too late to alert Fencepost readers, I apologize. The week-long event offered sweet treats, and two take-aways (tiny boxes containing First Aid and sewing kits) plus entry forms for $100 off your electric bill in a drawing. I filled out the entry form, folded it in quarters and dropped it into the slot topped collection box. The phone rang Monday, and (what do we know!) I won the $100 off; that really made my day.

Happy birthday this week to- Anna Allen, Reagan Dooher, Christy Fagan, Joseph Fagan, Minita Hagerty, Amanda Hinkle, Wyatt Link, Jim McKillip, and Amanda Polivka.

At 10:16 am today (as I write) I will drop, cover, and hold on to participate in the Great Oregon Shakeout. asked if I could drive to my nearest assembly place. Connye frowned on that. “You are supposed to walk.” There are giveaways for people who show up and bring their go bags. I could do that, but it is a long and steep hill to walk up Arizona Way to that assembly point. And I keep getting older every year. Following a real earthquake/tsunami, I don’t think I would be able to make the Arizona Way assembly point due to the damage to the road, debris from places like the junk yard could well be piled up, blocking the way. So, instead I’ll take my walking stick and walk up into my backyard toward safety.

We all need to think out our best “escape routes” for when the tsunami does hit. Earthquake and tsunami. If you have not located your nearest assembly point, please take a moment to – contact the city for further information. Connye Corey is the City’s Emergency Preparedness coordinator.

Last week was also the monthly meeting of the Garibaldi Business Association met, and they continue to discuss the parking and plantings along Hwy 101. No resolutions, yet. Nan Devlin joined the group to talk about wayfinding signs. Like the signs at either end of the town that announces who we are: Garibaldi, Oregon’s authentic fishing village. This project is a long time in the making, as it waited until the highway work was completed. Nan discussed signage as telling the city’s story. So, the process has begun, and it sounds like the signage design and “story” will be the next steps in the process. You can visit TillamookCoast/wayfinding for examples of the signage they have been able to provide for other cities.

GBA now has a very nice trifold “map” of businesses in the city. They are being distributed to the membership for display and distribution to folks visiting city businesses. It shows Shopping (like Myrtlewood Factory), Groceries (like the Deli Mart/Chevron), Fresh Seafood (like The Spot), Restaurants and Specialties (like Ghost Hole Public House), Services (like Beach Beagle), Lodging (like Hotel Garibaldi) and Family Fun (like Garibaldi Maritime Museum).

A little more construction will be happening as the food cart (Under the Big G) area will be getting new decking for seating under cover and with an upper deck for a view. Things move slowly, but it is expected by next summer.

Another topic discussed by the GBA concerns the speed limit through the city’s business district. It is currently set at 25 mph. According to the City Manager, Jake Boone, the district may meet the definition to “qualify” to have a 20-mph speed through the downtown. City council will also be discussing this at the upcoming council meeting.

I spent my day yesterday reading the City Council Packet for the next council meeting. Unfortunately, this will print the day after that meeting. This packet includes a new Employee Handbook that changes employee hours from 40 to 32 per week. No change in salary. Office hours would remain the same from 8:30 am to 3:30 pm Monday through Thursday. It sets 13 paid holidays and makes some changes related to employee vacation time accruals and payouts. This is the first time this has come before the council, and I have no idea what will result. I’d like more time for public comments.

Garibaldi has a new Fire Chief, Tad Pedersen. Welcome Tad. I haven’t met him yet, but I understand he is now on the job full-time and has been getting familiarized with the department and its operations and personnel, as well as meeting with fire chiefs and emergency managers in the region. A good way to get to know him would be to become a volunteer firefighter. We are still looking for volunteers.

Our favorite Librarian, June Ekborg, provided this salmon update. Remember we have salmon eggs hatching in a tank at the library – they will be released when they reach the right age. Right now, they are still hatching, only a few more to go. The first to hatch was on October 10th. Most hatched between the 12th and the 14th. The “casings” will need to be removed from the tank to prevent pollution. You can see them floating in the tank. Come and see the baby salmon. Thanks for the updates, June.

Time goes by so fast, already we are winding down October, and fall is bringing quite a few fun events to Bay City and the surrounding area.

On Saturday, October 24 from 10-4 a Batik workshop will be taking place at the Bay City Arts Center. Participants will learn about this wax resist fabric dying process in the company of fellow enthusiasts. Each attendee will have a piece to take home at the end of the day. Registration is required and can be done by e-mail to shawnajackson4525@gmail.com. There is a $30 tuition fee, and there is assistance available. Supplies will be provided. Call 503-347-3675 for more information.

The Tillamook County Master Gardener Association is offering two workshops, also on October 25, at the OSU extension office, 4506 Third Street in Tillamook. The first class which will run from 10-11:30 is titled Air Bee n’ Bee and will focus on hosting mason bees in your garden. Leah Pullman will cover the life cycle of mason bees and how you can provide the best housing and food to keep them happy. The second class takes place from 12:30-1:30 and will focus on climate change for coastal gardeners. Master Gardener, Carla Albright will present an enlightening talk, where she will explore the vital intersection between horticulture and environmental transformation. Both classes are free; registration is required.

Unscramble these twelve letter strings to form each into an ordinary word (ex. HAGNEC becomes CHANGE). Prepare to use only ONE word from any marked (♥) letter string as each unscrambles into more than one word (ex. ♥RATHE becomes HATER or EARTH or HEART). Fit each string's word either across or down to knot all twelve strings together.

Even Exchange by Donna Pettman

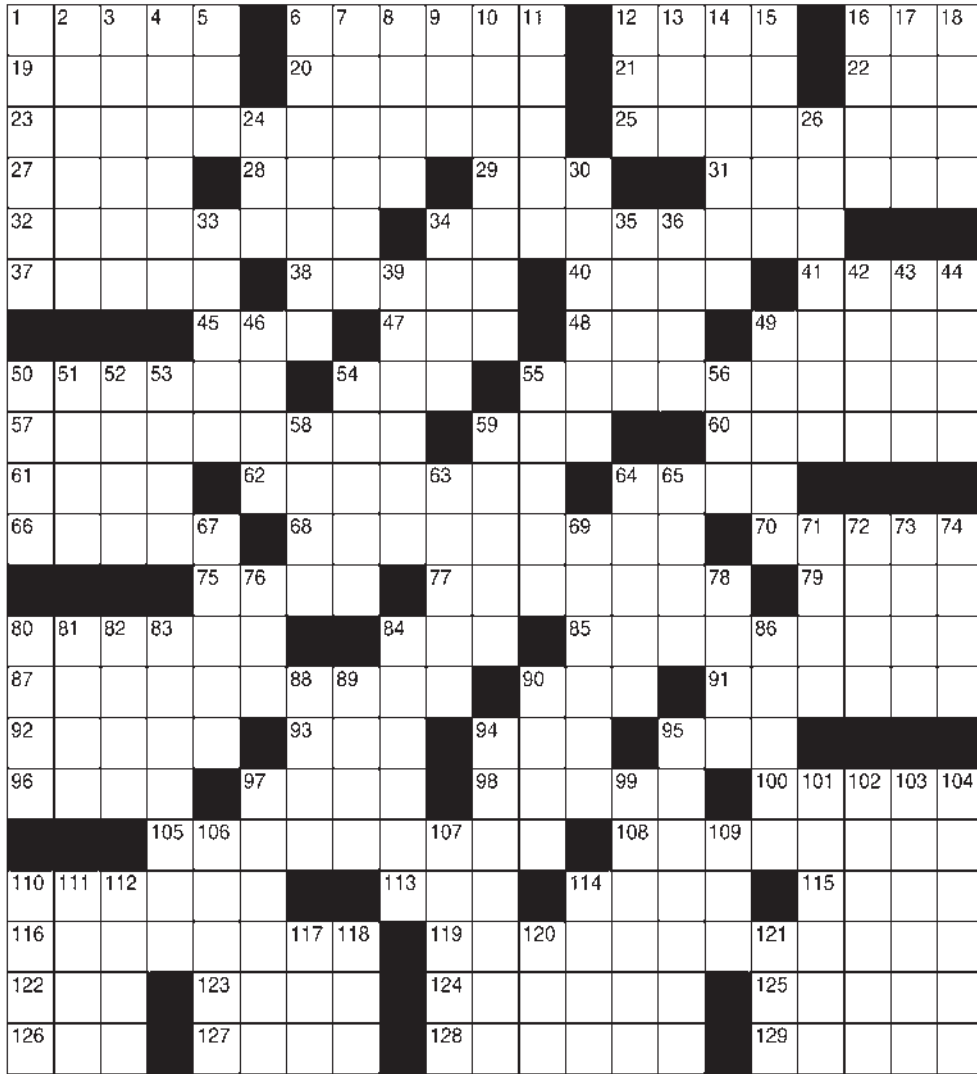

Each numbered row contains two clues and two 6-letter answers. The two answers differ from each other by only one letter, which has already been inserted. For example, if you exchange the A from MASTER for an I, you get MISTER. Do not change the order of the letters.

GO FIGURE!
