Out of the mouths of babes: Christmas innocence found in the words of our children

Joe Warren
Chief Executive
Country Media

This time of year, we are inundated with holiday-hype. This hysteria has reached such a high, that the anticipation must be far greater to our children than I remember it being in my youth. It's grown so much that I tend to push back a bit, each year vowing not take part in any early shopping or decorating, but I am never able to accomplish that. I'm not the Grinch — I just like to do things on my schedule, how I've grown accustomed. And I'm not a last-minute person either, so I guess I've found my holiday stride.

I love this time of year. This season, the rush to Christmas seemed to begin much earlier. It seems like last week we were taking Halloween pictures in our office of all our area trick-or-treaters.

When I was younger, we didn't even think about Christmas prior to Thanksgiving. My mother would not put our tree up until around the 20th of December so we wouldn't get too excited to early I suppose.

This year, I started seeing Christmas marketing well before Halloween. I don't believe that trend will ever change either.

Joe Warren

One thing I do look forward to each year, is reading through the Letters to Santa that come into the office. We have published all the letters in this section of Season's Greetings. Children have a special innocence when it comes to this time of year. Perhaps it's through the heightened anticipation, but whatever the reason, it's fun to see their excitement and read about that special day through their words.

Like Rudy B. who wrote, "this year I would like a chainsaw because I want to have firewood for this winter, I also want an ax so I can cut the firewood. A Two-wheel wheelbarrow would also be good for the firewood because I split it. I'm thankful for my family and friends and school to go to. Rudy, your letter warmed my heart as much as the firewood you cut will warm your family.

Or Azure B. who wants to get with the beat. Azure wants a tape player to listen to music.

Azure also wants new headphones and some music. I also love music, especially this time of year, with all the Christmas songs, reminds me of a simpler time, when I shared your anticipation.

Evan W. wants to thank the Headlight Herald for printing his letter: "Dear News Paper people, how are you? I will thank you for letting me be on the newspaper! I hope the newspaper cost $11 for one newspaper. Me and my brother are thankful to be on a newspaper. Evan, you are the reason we do what we do, and we promise to keep the cost under $11 per paper.

Finally, Ledger wrote on behalf of his brother, "I want Zep to be on the good list so he can get lots of toys." Ledger, I believe you and Zep will make the nice list and your Christmas will be filled with joy and happiness.

If you have forgotten what a special time of year this really is, take a quick read through the Letters to Santa and you will quickly agree; Christmas is special, even for us older kids. Merry Christmas everyone! We hope this new year will bring us a little closer together, that perhaps a little Christmas spirit will stay with us, until next year.
