FAIR COUNTDOWN

Pig-n-Ford races turn 100

WILL CHAPPELL
Headlight Editor

A century ago, Tillamook residents awaited their late-September county fair with great anticipation, as a new domed exhibit building was under construction at a cost of $27,000, part of a $1 million bond approved in 1921 to move the fair to its current home.

Another momentous change was also afoot, as for the first time, racers brought their Ford Model Ts to the fairground and hauled pigs through a two-lap race, giving birth to the Pig-n-Ford races, which are celebrating their 100-year anniversary at this year's fair from August 6-9.

The idea for the event was spawned when Joe Bell found a loose pig on his property one day in the early 1920s. Bell gathered the squealing swine, crank started his Ford Model T and returned the pig to its owner, and in recounting the incident to his friends around Tillamook, the idea for a competition was born.

In its early days, the races were open to all comers, with participation varying year to year, but in the early 1950s, the Model T Pig n' Fords Association was formed, establishing ten franchises that would participate in the event each year. More than seventy years later, those same ten franchises still exist, with many owned by descendants of the original owners from the 1950s.

Parry Hurliman, a franchise owner who has been a member of the association for 52 years since he joined as a driver at the age of 16, recently sat down with the Headlight Herald to reminisce on his time with the association.

Three of Hurliman's uncles owned franchises in the 1950s and it was with one of them that Hurliman began racing in 1973, as soon as he turned 16. Hurliman's father had purchased a franchise in 1970, and Hurliman eventually drove for him before inheriting the franchise.

In his early days in the association, Hurliman said that things were

Dialysis clinic reopens

WILL CHAPPELL
Headlight Editor

After months of review, a final inspection was completed at the Tillamook Kidney Center on June 27, and Dialysis Clinic, Inc. received final paperwork allowing the center to begin operations on July 9.

Patients are now being transitioned to care at the center, ending a year-and-a-half ordeal that saw them forced into multi-hour roundtrips three times weekly for their life sustaining treatment.

Tillamook dialysis patients were first thrown into uncertainty in January 2024 when the then-operator of Tillamook's dialysis clinic, U.S. Renal Care (USRC), announced its intention to close the unit, citing low patient numbers making the clinic economically unsustainable.

Following the announcement, Tillamook Adventist Health President Eric Swanson swung into action, seeking a new partner to operate the center and spare patients commutes to Lincoln City, Astoria or Forest Grove for treatment. On a tip from a consultant, Swanson reached out to Dialysis Clinic, Inc. (DCI), a Nashville-based nonprofit that runs dialysis centers across the country, whose leaders immediately expressed an interest in helping to reopen the center.

In September, DCI staff reached out to the Oregon Health Authority (OHA) to inquire about the possibility of transferring USRC's license for the center to the new center but were informed that USRC had returned its license to OHA and the Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services (CMS), making a transfer impossible and triggering a new review for the proposed center.

That review process generally takes six months to a year, an OHA official told the Headlight Herald in March, and includes reviews of the physical environment by the OHA's Facilities Planning and Safety Program and fire and life safety elements and mechanicals by the Oregon Fire Marshal's Office. The fire marshal office's inspection was completed in late February and the physical environment review in March.

Following those inspections, the center needed a review of its operations by CMS, which pays for many dialysis patients' care. The center began serving one patient with private insurance in June to demonstrate operations and OHA contractors completed two inspections on behalf of CMS, with the second, a fire and life safety check, occurring on June 27. With those inspections complete, DCI's Tillamook Kidney Center received its certification of operation on July 9.

Sharon Marti, DCI's Senior Operations Director, said that center staff are now working to transition patients from other centers to Tillamook for treatments, prioritizing care based on medical need and in a way to ensure the staff can acclimate to patient needs.

Marti said that the center was treating three patients as of July 11, with 17 on the waitlist to be dialyzed there.

Currently, the center is licensed to operate five treatment stations, according to Marti, meaning that it will likely be necessary to add treatment shifts on Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday in addition to the current Monday, Wednesday, Friday schedule. Marti said that DCI is in the planning process for two additional treatment stations, which it hopes to have operational by December.

Healthcare education building at TBCC 'starting to finish'

WILL CHAPPELL

Interior and exterior finishes are being installed at Tillamook Bay Community College's new healthcare education building, keeping the project on track for a fall completion and January 2026 opening to students.

When complete, the building and associated plaza will transform the college's campus, encouraging students, staff and community members to circulate among the buildings and enjoy the outdoor space, according to Tillamook Bay Community College (TBCC) President Paul Jarrell.

"I think it's important to understand that our goal is to really create that kind of campus feel and really encourage students and staff to move from building to building so that we're not so isolated," Jarrell said during a recent tour of the new building.

Work on the new 28,000-square-foot building began last June and its $23.8-million budget is being supported primarily by a voter-approved bond. Jason Lawrence, TBCC's Director of Facilities and Safety, said that the project has remained on schedule and there are still contingency funds remaining in the budget, Tiling being installed on the new healthcare education building's exterior that will be painted to match the main building.

even after complicated wastewater management systems were found to be necessary early in the project.

As of early July, groundwork had begun on a sitting wall and planter in the plaza between the healthcare education building and the college's main building. When complete, the plaza will feature varied plantings, grassy and paved areas, and be next to a new solar-powered kiosk abutting the college's roundabout that will serve as a bus stop.

Installation of exterior siding panels was also underway in early July. Once complete in mid to late July, the tiles will be painted the same color as the college's main building, as will the college's center for industrial technology and a wellhouse for the Pleasant View utility district that sits on campus,

Commissioners approve contracts, county counsel recruitment

WILL CHAPPELL Headlight Editor

Tillamook’s board of county commissioners approved a $1.379-million contract for wastewater upgrades at the county fairgrounds and a $48,880 contract for an upgrade to the entrance at Barview Jetty Campground at their July 9 meeting.

Additionally, commissioners approved the recruitment of a new county counsel, additional funds for an ongoing wage rate study and $1.7 million in annual funding to the Tillamook Coast Visitors Association.

With Commissioner Erin Skaar unavailable for the meeting, Commissioners Mary Faith Bell and Paul Fournier formed a quorum for the lengthy agenda.

The $1.379-million contract was entered into with Earthworks of Cloverdale, for a major project that will alleviate flooding in the fairground’s parking lots. The project is scheduled to begin following the fair and for completion by October 2026, but if weather cooperates by staying dry, it could be finished this year.

SAI Design and Build will be leading the project to revamp the entrance to the Barview Jetty campground, with the addition of a secondary, smaller fee station to help with campground registrations expected to cut down on congestion at the park’s entrance that sometimes backs up to Highway 101.

The search for a new county counsel comes as William Sargent, who has long served in the role, prepares to retire. Currently, Sargent works part-time onsite, while Joel Stevens handles the rest of the duties remotely in a full-time capacity. With the transition, Stevens will move to a part-time role supporting the new hire.

Tillamook County Chief Administrative Officer Rachel Hagerty said that the transition plan had been developed with input from a small group of county department leaders. Hagerty said that the move would cost the county an additional $20,000 annually, but that she hoped some of that increase would be offset by a decrease in contracted legal services with by hiring a new counsel who specializes in one of the areas of high cost for the county, like employment law.

Hagerty also said that the intention was to hire an attorney to fill the position but that she and the group had discussed the possibility of contracting with a law firm to meet the need if no qualified candidates applied. Hagerty said that this was a backup option and that if the county needed to pursue it, they would require onsite availability at least some of the time.

Bell and Fournier approved an additional $46,330 on top of the initial $82,000 spent for a compensation and pay equity study being conducted by Trupp HR.

Hagerty said that the job descriptions portion of the study had been completed and that during that process the number of unique jobs identified and described had come in at 211, up from 129, contributing to the increased cost. Other factors pushing the total up were collective bargaining negotiations necessitating certain parts of the assessment be sped up and a compensation survey for elected officials that still needs to be completed.

Bell and Fournier both said that the compensation study work was critical to ensuring fair compensation for county employees and noted that the county had not done a similar study before. Bell said that the study would provide a baseline for the county going forward and allow for methodical updates to stay current on wages.

Bell and Fournier also approved the installation of two new RV dump stations at Webb Campground in Pacific City and the Tillamook Coast Visitor Association’s annual $1.7-million contract for destination management services.

Seismic valve installed at Bay City reservoir

WILL CHAPPELL Headlight Editor

State Senator Suzanne Weber joined Bay City Mayor Lianne Welch, City Manager David McCall and Public Works Director Roy Markee to inspect a recently installed seismic isolation valve at the city’s Pennsylvania Avenue reservoir on July 7.

The valve was funded with $225,000 in the 2023 capital construction bill, made available through a Oregon Water Resources Department grant, and will automatically shut off when an attached sensor registers an earthquake to prevent the reservoir’s contents from emptying through broken pipes.

In addition to the seismic monitor, the system features solar-charged batteries that power the monitor as well as the valve, storing enough energy to open and close it three times. In the event of an earthquake, Markee said that public works staff will check the system for leaks before turning the water back on.

The valve is intended to prevent the 500,000-gallon reservoir from emptying through broken lines throughout the system in the aftermath of an earthquake. A pump was also installed as part of the upgrade so that residents can access the reservoir’s potable water even if the rest of the system is damaged.

Another seismic valve is currently being installed at the city’s reservoir on Juno Hill in Tillamook at the same time as its capacity is doubled from 500,000 to one million gallons.

to create a cohesive appearance across the college’s facilities. Lawrence also said that the new building’s roof was near completion.

On the building’s interior, drywall installation has begun and with framing complete, the layout has come into focus. Natural light will feature prominently throughout, with two-story glass facades on the north and south end of the building’s main entry corridor, large skylights above the main hallway and atrium, and three sets of enormous, two-story windows in the building’s 400-person event center.

Flexibility is another touchstone for the building, with the event center divisible into five different configurations and other meeting rooms and classrooms throughout the building serving multiple potential purposes. Jarrell said that while the nursing and EMT labs on the first floor will be dedicated to students in those programs, he expects to see other courses offered by TBCC meet in the building’s second story classrooms.

The facilities for students in healthcare education are located on the ground floor and will include three full hospital bed setups plus two smart mannequins in dedicated rooms for nursing students, an ambulance simulator and two retired ambulances donated by Adventist Health that can be pulled into the EMT lab via a garage door, and an x-ray lab that will offer recertification courses for radiology technicians.

Beyond the student facing facilities, the second floor features a new office suite for TBCC leadership, as well as a remote-meeting-ready conference room. Jarrell said that the plan is for student-facing administrators to remain in the current building’s office suite, while he and other more faculty-focused administrators, like those in human resources and accounting, will move to the new building.

The project will also see the college’s traffic flow revamped, with the main entrance moved to Brookfield Avenue and a new parking lot on the building’s south side increasing capacity from just under 100 spots to just under 200. New sidewalks were also added along Brookfield Avenue and Marold Loop Road to increase safety for students who access campus by foot.

Lawrence said that as of early July “we’re kind of just on that turn of starting to finish” the project and that he expects the substantial completion deadline of early October to be met. That will allow move in to begin in late October or early November, allowing the building to welcome students beginning in January 2026.

a little more laid back, with pranks playing a role in the races, in contrast with a more serious approach today.

"We can goof off a little," Hurliman said, "but them guys used to shove people into pins. They'd be going to try to get a pig, and somebody would lift them up and push them in there or shut their car off when they went by." Hurliman also recalled an incident when competing drivers swapped out one of the pigs in his dad's pen with a goat.

At the same time, the 1960s and 70s saw several franchise owners become more serious about winning, pouring money into refurbishing their cars.

To prevent an arms race of vehicle modification, the association began imposing rules on the cars' engines, requiring cast-iron pistons be used, creating a list of permissible manifolds and banning carburetors, among others.

"It was back in the 60s, 70s, there were guys starting to alter stuff in the motors, so we had to make rules, and we continue to make rules," Hurliman said.

Today, franchise owners inspect the cars of the top three finishers in the championship race to ensure compliance with the regulations, and, with a few exceptions, compliance is good.

However, despite these rules, Hurliman said that several of the cars that had major rebuilds done, especially by outside shops, in the early franchise days still run faster than others, like Hurliman's, that have been maintained by franchise members.

Throughout the early years of the association, there were also several incidents on the racetrack, including a car flip by one of Hurliman's uncles, a driver going through a fence on the track and one taking a detour through the infield, that led to an increase in vigilance for safe driving on the dirt horse track.

During races, franchise owners assume positions at strategic points around the course and watch for any dangerous behavior, with violations brought to the association's membership, which votes on disqualification.

Safety of the pigs is also a top priority, with 25- to 40-pound animals purchased specifically for the purpose to allow easier handling after an incident occurred during a race in the 1980s when pigs up to 70 pounds were used.

Today, more than 70 years into the franchise era and at the century mark as an institution, the Pig n' Ford races are going strong, with second generation franchise owners preparing their kids and grandkids to take over in the future.

Hurliman said that the association had considered expanding in the past but decided against it to stay true to the founders' vision and that if a franchise were to become available, it would first be offered to the longest tenured association member who did not already own one.

In the past, the racers have competed at Moses Lake and the St. Paul Rodeo, and they have plans to return to the latter event in 2026. The association also takes part in Tillamook's annual June Dairy Parade.

To celebrate the 100th anniversary, the association will be offering a driver meet and greet for the public for an hour following Friday night's championship races, while the fair is honoring the occasion with a theme of "Celebrating Pig n' Fords 100 Years."

Tillamook Early Learning Center gets new roof

WILL CHAPPELL
Headlight Editor

Contractors installed a new roof on the Tillamook Early Learning Center during the first week of July, replacing its badly failing predecessor and ensuring a safe environment for the center’s students.

Tillamook Early Learning Center’s (TELC) Executive Director Vanessa Cham said that the $155,000 project, which also included repairs for damage caused by two air-conditioning units and new siding, was made possible by broad community support.

“Without our county developers, without our city management looking in the lens of prioritizing these children, we wouldn’t be where we are today,” said Cham who also praised contractor Alex Jimenez, who completed the work in under a week, and the Loren Parks Foundation, which financially supported it.

Cham took over as the executive director at TELC in February in an interim capacity before being selected for the full-time position in April. Cham said that when she became director, her top priority was repairing the building, which was deeded to TELC and Tillamook Headstart, which shares the space, by the Tillamook city council in May.

Cham said that prior to the repairs, the roof was leaking in two of TELC’s classroom as well as in Headstart’s bathroom in spots where two air-conditioning units installed in the 1990s had caused extensive damage.

After unsuccessfully applying for a grant from the state to pay for the project, Cham turned to Jerry Dove at the Loren Parks Foundation and requested that a past donation earmarked for expanding TELC’s offerings be reallocated for repairs to its current facility.

“I know we all want to expand, I know this is a priority,” Cham said she told Dove. “But how can you expand if you don’t have stability in the asset we’re currently about to get?”

Dove agreed and Cham began looking for a contractor to do the work, eventually finding Jimenez, who works Country Roads Exteriors out of Estacada but grew up in Tillamook, and agreed to take on the project, saying that he could complete it in the first week of July, if it was permitted in time.

Cham then worked with Sarah Absher, Tillamook County Director of Community Development, and officials at the city of Tillamook to expedite the permitting process, allowing the project to get underway and be completed by the Independence Day weekend.

With that project complete, Cham said that her next priority is building a stronger relationship between TELC and Tillamook Headstart.

Hallie Edgmon, Director of Tillamook Headstart, said that in the past the two programs had not interacted much, despite sharing a building, but that since Cham took over there had been a distinct change and that the pair were now working to better support each other.

“Vanessa and I share that goal of just having a really positive place where the staff works together,” Edgmon said. “We’re all here to support the kids, to do activities together, to share the space in a way that works well for all the kids and to support our communities.”

Beyond strengthening the partnership with Headstart, Cham said that she also plans to look for ways to expand TELC’s offerings beyond its current 54 students.

Cham is already a member of a group led by Michelle Jenck, Adventist Health’s Director of Community Integration, developing a community health needs assessment, that will include information about childcare challenges in the community.

Cham said that she has started having conversations with some community businesses as part of that work and will continue to expand those dialogues. Cham said she also plans to start fundraising efforts to give community members a chance to support the nonprofit center, saying as a fifth-generation resident, she has seen the power of the community’s generosity repeatedly.

“I know what our community can do,” Cham said. “Once this building is sustained, once we can show the quality of this business and the connection that we have made with Headstart, then we can be asking other, where do we sustain this building? Where do we expand from?”

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Open letter to the person who told me that I hated America

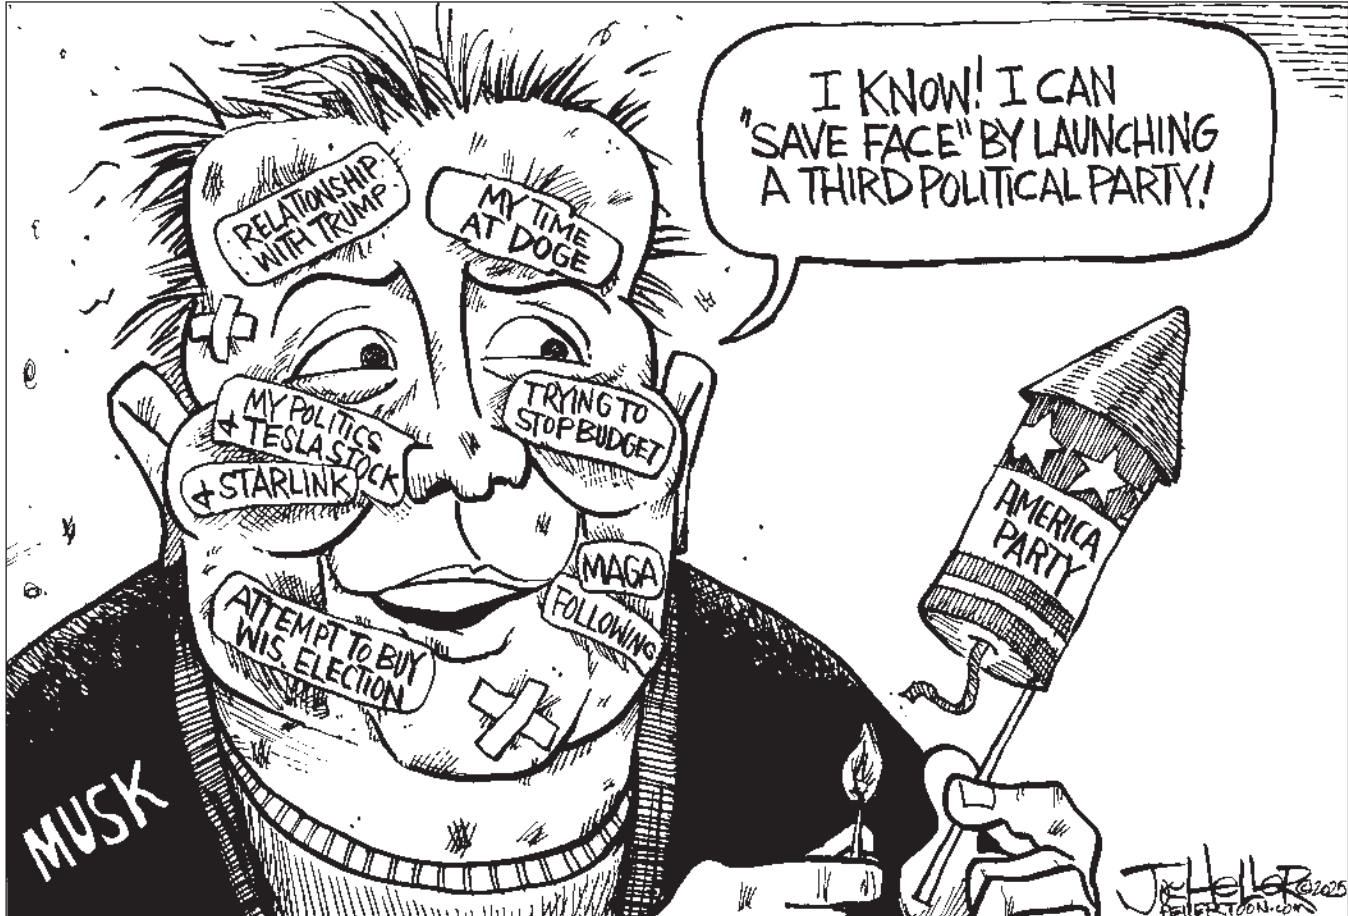

Dear Neighbor
I Love my Country
I carried an American flag — a heavy one with embroidered stars, made right here in the USA. My sign said, “No Concentration Camps.” And you told me that I hated America. Repeatedly.
I can’t say what caused you to assume I hate us. When I arrived at the protest I did see a couple of rude signs. Mine wasn’t.
I carried the sign about the concentration camps because my uncle — 101st Airborne — didn’t die fighting Hitler for people to be rounded up without due process. Hitler began by scapegoating Jews. Now it is Spanish speakers with brown skin who are blamed.
If I didn’t love our country, I would have been working in the garden or lying in a hammock. Standing by a busy street is not my idea of a relaxing holiday.
Growing up, I was often in other countries as my parents did research. Because of what I saw and heard, I was always relieved and grateful to get back to the USA. Here, anonymous people didn’t show up and drag you away into unmarked cars, as they did in Guatemala. Here, even if you were incarcerated, your loved ones knew where you were, unlike Argentina. Here, you could speak your mind and even if those in power didn’t agree, you wouldn’t be arrested for it, unlike Chile. Some of these places have returned to democracy. But many died and many were tortured before the abuses ended. Here, in America, you would not be tortured, even by proxy.

Here we were free.
Some think that they will be immune from all this because of belief, money, or the color of their skin. But if someone but if someone jealous of you or who has a peeve denounces you in secret, you may one day find yourself without recourse.
I ask you; do you love your country and what it stands for enough to make it be free for everyone?

Questions about Social Security’s future

I am 78 and have received Social Security benefits since I was 65. I cannot remember ever getting an email from the Social Security Administration other than at times receiving an email telling me I have a message. I then go into my SS account and read the message. It is usually about changes to my benefit amount or suggestions for increasing security.
A day after the Tax and Spending Bill passed Congress I received an email from the SSA describing the benefits I would supposedly receive as a result of the passage of the “Big, Beautiful Bill”. This is not the official name of the bill and I believe is part of the propaganda campaign of the Trump administration. It is inappropriate to use in an official communication.
Given this introduction to the message I was suspicious of the contents so I decided to research the assertions made in the email. This is what I found. Among various misleading statements and omissions the email strongly implies that all taxes on Social Security have been eliminated. Social Security is funded by payroll taxes which have not been eliminated and by income taxes which have been adjusted for some income brackets but have not been eliminated (note since 1983 up to 85% of social security benefits can be taxed as income for higher-income retirees). Notably missing from the message was the threat of insolvency by 2033 and any actions to mitigate this danger.

I expect federal agencies to tell me how actions will impact my situation not general platitudes to make me feel good about legislation. I expect government agencies like the SSA to serve all people regardless of their political affiliation and do not approve of government agencies serving as propaganda arms for one segment of the population. We must now be very careful to vet what we hear from federal agencies we have trusted in the past.

Support local businesses

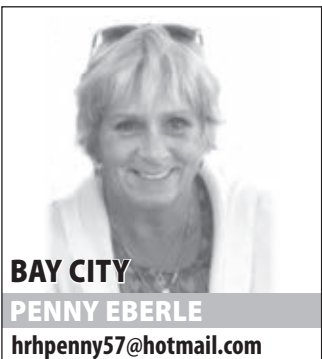

Here in Tillamook we’re lucky to have an array of locally-owned small businesses in town. I believe it’s important to support those small businesses whenever we can, because the money we spend stays here and helps make Tillamook a great place to live.
For example, the Hygge Cafe just opened up on Stillwell between First and Second streets, and they’re serving excellent espresso drinks and fresh-baked pastries every morning. Or there are the many food carts that offer a variety of tasty lunch options. When we choose to do business with our neighbors, we’re building a strong and healthy community.

FENCEPOSTS

There are some special people in our community that perform remarkable tasks that most of us are unaware of. These people dedicate themselves to certain causes and tasks without being asked or craving any recognition, they just do it to benefit us all. One such person, is Mike Rawson. He has worked voluntarily and tirelessly for many years eradicating as much Scotch broom, which is a highly invasive plant, as possible from areas around Bay City. The piece of land that goes into the bay west of the Fish Peddler once featured a Scotch broom tunnel, but he has opened it up and demolished much of the broom.

BAY CITY
hrhpenny57@hotmail.com

The Hobsonville Point area is another place he has been working on. Thank you, Mike, for all that you do, your dedication is very much appreciated.
We all know that sometime in the future the “big one” will shake our coastline. Bay City has a well-organized emergency volunteer group that will kick into gear. Last week Senator Suzanne Weber and Bay City Mayor Lianne Welch joined forces to demonstrate how we can provide valuable clean drinking water to our community following an earthquake. Funded through a grant from the Oregon Water Resources Department through a 2023-25 capital funding request supported by Senator Weber and representative Cyrus Javadi, this system will automatically shut off water when triggered by an earthquake, saving water rather than it being lost through broken pipes.

The next coffee with the mayor will take place on Tuesday July 22 from 9:30 to 10:30 a.m. at the community hall. There is always coffee and treats to be enjoyed, and a chance to hear about happenings within the city government and for residents to input questions and ideas in this informal setting.

On Saturday July 26, beginning at 7 p.m. the Bay City Arts Center will host a music performance by Katelyn Convery. She will be bringing her “grungy pop-rock with soul” along with her whole band and special guest players as well. Tickets are $20.
I am so excited and marking my calendar for an extra big reminder for

August 4, as Blessing Bled Chimanga, featuring Doctor Twang, Marimba maestro from Zimbabwe, will be bringing Bay City a night of African Music beginning at 7. Tickets are $15. I was a member of the Tillamarimba band for several years and loved playing this fun, uplifting music. Should be a great evening.

The main library in Tillamook will host live music performances every Friday at noon in July and August, there are some wonderful musicians in the line up, so check out their web site or call the library for more information.

It was a fabulous fourth in Cape Meares. First came the parade, one block down and one block back, with a drum majorette, kids on gaily decorated bikes and little cars, a boy on a red-white-and-blue dinosaur, trucks and cars bedecked with flags (and one with a giant inflatable bald eagle), Tillamook Fire Station 73’s fire engine and truck, and candy flung to a record crowd lining the sides of 4th Street NW.

Next was the potluck, with summer salads of pasta and vegetables, homemade breads, baked beans and other side dishes; meats ranging from pulled pork to baked salmon to burgers grilled by our local volunteer firefighters (thanks, guys!); and a table laden with pies, cakes, cookies, and other sugary things. One could barely move from eating all that good stuff when... The live music from Gary and the Meares Cats started up in Harold Bennett’s back yard (thanks, Harold, yet again). The admittedly older audience rocked to Louie-Louie, Gloria, On the Road Again, Tequila, and did the Bunny Hop and the Hokey-Pokey. In the meantime, a silent auction to raise funds for the Cape Meares Community Association (CMCA) was held in the old schoolhouse that serves as our central meeting place. Items from artwork to home-cooked meals, gift certificates to local businesses and restaurants, gift baskets of all kinds, and coupons for services were all auctioned. CMCA met its goal for the silent auction, raising enough money to pay annual maintenance costs for the community center and to help put on events such as this celebration. Many thanks to all who donated to and purchased from the auction. A special shout-out to Mary Gordon, Kathy Burke, Pam Robenolt, and Claudia Cameron for organizing and managing all the 4th of July activities. They figure close to 250 people attended. Thanks, too, to the many individuals who stepped in to help set up before the event and clean up afterward. And a thank-you to Marcille Ansonge, who coordinated the sale and installation of 12 new bricks in front of the community just in time for the holiday festivities. On a more somber note, Charyl Cenicerros came up to me at the potluck to let me know that her husband, retired judge Joseph Cenicerros, had passed away in June. The family gathered at the Cenicerros Cape Meares beach cabin this July 4th weekend to celebrate Papa Joe’s long life. He passed away at age 87, surrounded by his loving family. The Cape Meares community offers our sincere condolences to the Cenicerros family. An eye-popping picture appeared on my iPhone the other day: The biggest spring Chinook I have ever seen. There was Andrea Papadopoli with a humongous salmon, caught on the first day of July in guide Big Dave’s boat. Andrea and her husband, Tony, usually fish in their own boat, but they had taken theirs out for the season when Big Dave saw them and invited them to jump in his boat. That monster springer nearly spooled Andrea, taking out 297 feet of line. I saw the video: Andrea was reeling like crazy, and Big Dave had to rev the motor to go chase that big buck. Finally, the fish was in the net and lifted into the boat; everyone was agog at its size. Although no scale was available to weigh the fish, it was surely 30+ pounds, according to Capt. Pete and others who have seen the photo. That was a stellar morning on the bay, by the way: close to twenty fish hooked, with Andrea’s surely the star of the show. Congrats, Andrea.

Here are a few items of interest from the upcoming July city council workshop and meeting. If you’ve never attended in person or on-line, workshops are where, in the words of Mayor Charles McNeilly, “discussions lead to decisions.” Topics on the agenda get time for full exploration by the mayor, City Manager Luke Shepard, and the city council. The first item on the workshop agenda: the results of an Oregon Department of Transportation (ODOT) Speed Zone investigation (Request 14127) into the downtown corridor of Rockaway Beach. This stretches from 0.11 mile north of N 3rd to 350 feet south of S 3rd. The ODOT memo states, “This section currently meets the definition of a statutory 20 mph business district,” going on to define a business district as “the territory contiguous to a highway when 50 percent or more of the frontage [...] is occupied by buildings used for business.” The memo additionally notes, “There are 6 marked crosswalks in this 0.55-mile-long section.” This is consistent with the recent speed limit change in Nehalem, where the previously posted 30 mph limit has changed to 20 from the boat launch area on 101 up past Nehalem Lumber. It also follows the long-standing speed limit of 20 mph on Laneda Street in Manzanita. Those of us in Rockaway Beach have seen no doubt dozens of near-miss incidents in our business corridor, when traffic does not recognize pedestrians about to cross the street, especially when the view can be blocked by large vehicles parked near the crosswalk. The oregon.gov webpage on crosswalk laws reminds us that in Oregon, every intersection is a crosswalk, “whether it’s marked or not.” That page continues: “By law, a pedestrian is in a crosswalk when any part of the pedestrian moves into the roadway, at a crosswalk, with the intent to proceed. That includes not only the pedestrian’s body, but also a wheelchair, cane, crutch, bicycle, or any other extension of the person.” This logically includes strollers. How the speed limit change affects safety: the braking distance of an average vehicle traveling 30 mph is 75 feet, which includes roughly 30 feet of reaction-time distance and 45 feet for safe braking on a dry road. Compare this to the braking distance of a vehicle at 20 mph, which is around 40 feet, roughly half of that the reaction time and the other half the actual braking distance. The documents attached to the city council workshop agenda list the results of the ODOT survey in detail, with photographs and maps, and are interesting reading for anyone who drives through Rockaway, and even more for anyone who crosses 101 in our historic downtown district. Other items of interest include Resolution 2025-40, which authorizes City Manager Shepard to sign the contract for the “Drinking Water Source Protection Grant Program Grant Agreement for the Lower Jetty Creek Watershed (Grant No. 225-8016-24164) with the Oregon Watershed Enhancement Board, in the amount of $1,422,270.00” This is the grant I wrote about in last week’s column, which will authorize the Forest Stewardship Plan Advisory Committee. The entire grant agreement is included in the information packet for the workshop, including a schedule with dates extending through 2026. Of special importance, however, is a memo included as Attachment A in the agreement. This memo from Sustainable Northwest concerns Stimson Lumber Company, owner of the upper portion of the Jetty Creek watershed. Stimson has traditionally used herbicides to control brush on logging roads in their portion of the watershed, and estimates “a cost of $950 per road mile, totaling $10,355 throughout the 10.9 miles on and adjacent to the 750-acre upper watershed.” This memo recommends that the city should pay Stimson the $10,355, to ensure “that no herbicide will be used for road treatments within the Upper (eastern-most) 750 acres of the Jetty Creek Watershed prior to July 2028.” Resolution 2025-41, if accepted, would authorize this payment to Stimson to ensure no herbicides will be used in the upper portion of the Jetty Creek watershed. The last portion of the workshop agenda includes applications for the Forest Stewardship Plan Advisory Committee. I plan to cover the applicants in detail once final approval has been made.

Clinton Robert Bailey, Jr.

April 198, 1949 - June 1, 2025

Clinton Robert Bailey, Jr., affectionately known as "Skip" was born on April 18, 1949, in Tillamook to Clinton R. Bailey, Sr. and Joyce Lois Munsell Bailey. Skip left this world on June 1, 2025, surrounded by the love of his family and friends. As we reflect on his life, we find a tapestry woven with love, dedication, and countless cherished memories.

Skip is survived by his beloved wife, Kathy, his daughter Kim Bailey Bird, his son Rob Bailey, his stepsons Travis and Jeff Yates, his sister Ellen Heaton, and an extended family that includes six grandchildren and four great-grandchildren. Each of them carries a piece of him in their heart.

Skip spent most of his life near the water, from the serene shores of Three Rivers in Hebo to the banks of the Big Nestucca River in Pacific City. His childhood was filled with adventures—fishing, clamming, crabbing, and hunting. He often reminisced about the joy of riding bikes until sunset, water skiing off the dock, and learning to navigate boats and jeeps on the beach. Those memories were not just moments in time; they were the foundation of a life lived in harmony with nature.

At just 15, Skip demonstrated an entrepreneurial spirit that would define his character. Running the marina at Rickey's Lodge, he ran a business that brought joy to countless visitors. His high school years at Nestucca High and early adulthood were equally vibrant, filled with sports, music, and friendships that lasted a lifetime. Whether playing football or serenading his family with trumpet tunes like "Reveille" and "The

he embraced every opportunity with enthusiasm.

After graduating from Nestucca, Skip's dedication to his passions led him to earn a forestry degree from Clatsop Community College and return to Hebo to work for the U.S. Forest Service, where he spent an impressive 33 years. His career spanned timber, fire, recreation, and federal law enforcement, reflecting his commitment to protecting the land he loved and serving people. His colleagues knew him as a trusted leader, renowned for his work ethic, deep knowledge, and unwavering commitment to safety.

As we remember Skip, let us not forget the profound blessing that graced his life—the love of his wife, Kathy. The day they married marked a turning point, a love story that enriched his life until his last breath. Together, they created a bond that not only sustained them but also illuminated the lives of everyone around them. Retiring at the age of 53 allowed him to fully embrace that love, his friends, and his hobbies, making memories that many only dream of experiencing in their later years.

His children, Kim and Rob, are filled with gratitude, recognizing the incredible teacher he was in so many ways and realize they would not be who they are today if it weren't for the lessons they learned from him. He was a father who provided for us, told us stories we share today, and was a guide who instilled in us the values of hard work and kindness. We will miss so many things about him, yet we hold onto the memories he gifted us and will be able to carry his legacy forward.

He touched the hearts of so many. We find comfort in knowing that he is watching over us now, filled with peace, love, and humility. His heart was full, and we are forever grateful for the time we shared.

As we say goodbye, we celebrate Skip's life—one filled with adventure, love, lifelong friendships and an enduring spirit that will live on in each of us. You will be profoundly missed but never forgotten.

Courtney Bangs launches campaign for State Senate Dist. 16

Clatsop County Commissioner Vice-Chair and 25-year educator Courtney Bangs officially launched her campaign for Oregon Senate District 16 over the weekend with Senator Suzanne Weber at the Warrenton 4th of July Parade. Commissioner Bangs will seek the Republican nomination in the May 2026 primary.

“I have experienced and understood the challenges facing rural Northwest Oregon families as a local mom and educator, as well as from my time serving on the Clatsop County Commission,” said Bangs. “We don’t have access to enough affordable housing or childcare, our roads and telecom infrastructure are inadequate for our needs, and we rarely see investments come from the Portland politicians, despite paying more and more in taxes and fees every year. Every legislative session we stand at risk that the Legislature will increase taxes and shut down more of our natural resource jobs. I am running for the state senate to stand in the breach and protect our communities.”

Bangs was first elected to the Clatsop County Commission in 2020, defeating an incumbent Democrat and helping flip the commission to a common sense conservative majority. As Commissioner, she has been a champion for working forests, infrastructure improvements, and fiscal responsibility.

Senator Suzanne Weber, who currently holds the Senate District 16 seat, has given Bangs her full endorsement: “Courtney Bangs is exactly the kind of leader we need in the Oregon Senate. Her experience as a county commissioner, her dedication to our rural communities, and her proven track record of common-sense governance make her the clear and only choice for Senate District 16 in the Republican primary and November election of next year. No one is a fiercer advocate for the people she works to protect than Commissioner Bangs. I cannot wait to see how she shakes things up in Salem.”

Bangs brings a wealth of experience to her Senate campaign. She is an Academic Director and Teacher at Encore Academy in Warrenton, with over 25 years of experience in education. She is a mother of three and her husband, Derek, works for the Oregon Department of Forestry. Bangs has deep roots in the community, having lived in the area for 17 years.

“My priority has always been to listen to the people I represent and to be their voice,” Bangs added. “In the Senate, I will build on the steadfast and bold leadership of Senator Weber, who has been a champion for our rural way of life in Northwest Oregon. Like her, I will always fight to protect parental rights in education, support our natural resource industries, and push back against government overreach.”

Senate District 16 includes Clatsop, Columbia, and Tillamook counties, as well as parts of western Multnomah and Washington counties and a sliver of Yamhill County.

The Tillamook Coast Visitors Association recently wrapped up its pilot Introduction to Tourism and Hospitality class at Nestucca High School. Held during the spring 2025 semester, the 12 week class introduced students to a range of careers in the local tourism and hospitality industry, featuring five industry partners who shared hands on experiences and insights. The program aimed to inspire students to explore future careers in Tillamook County and connect with the professionals shaping its growing tourism sector.

“The Introduction to Hospitality and Tourism class changes the way students learn, by providing them with an immersive, hands-on, real-life experience that touches on various segments of the tourism industry,” said Jeremy Strober, Career & Technical Education Coordinator for Nestucca High School. “It connects students and teachers to industry partners and provides exposure to the depths of an industry that is connected to so many things in our county.”

Each three-week section featured two in-class sessions with an industry partner, followed by an on-site immersive activity. Each partner illustrated how their work supported an important piece of the larger tourism puzzle. The five partners were: The Schooner Restaurant & Lounge, travel writer Adam Sawyer, Noble House Properties, Tillamook Air Museum and Tillamook

Estuaries Partnership.

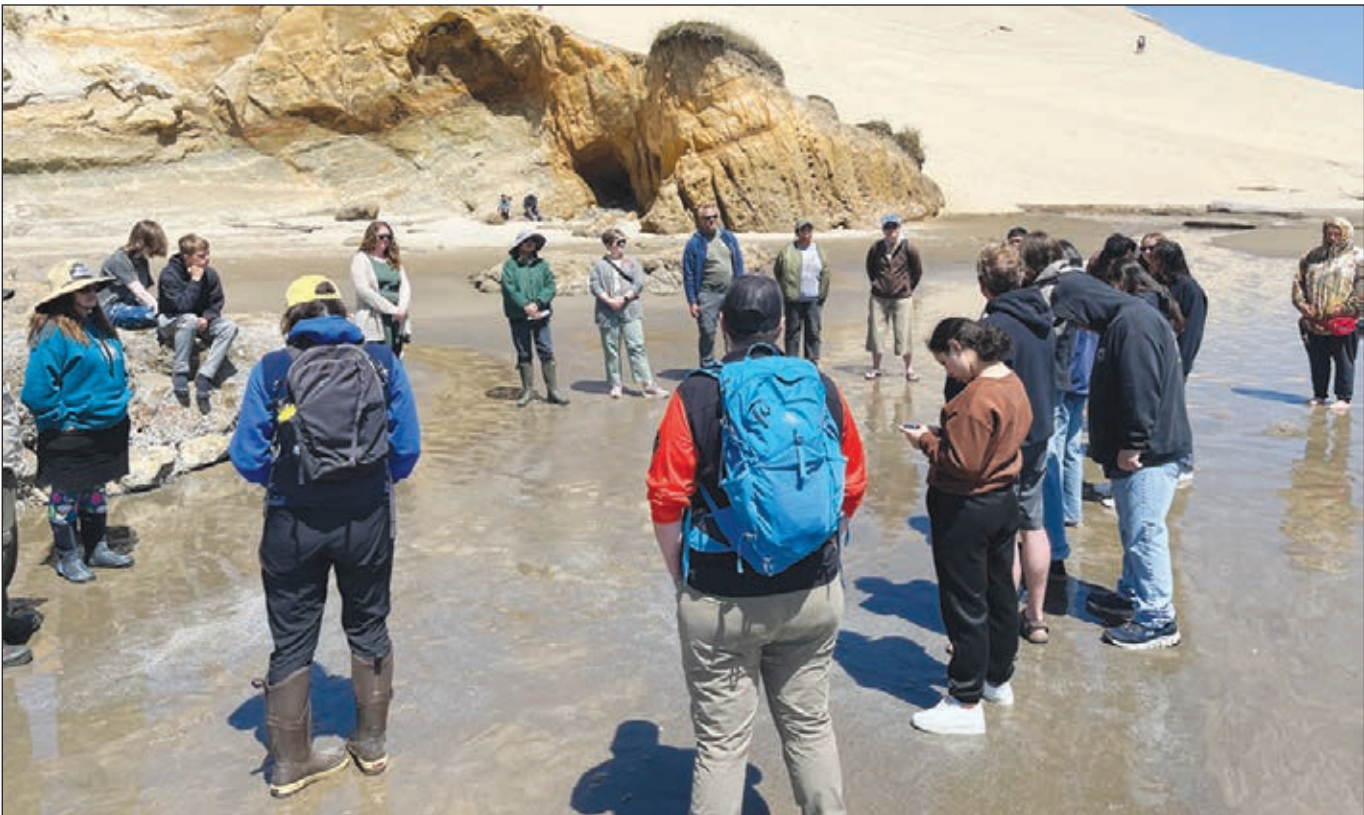

“Each partner gave the students a better understanding of how tourism and hospitality involves a much wider spectrum of industries than is typically seen,” said Dan Haag, TCVA’s Director of Trails, Outdoor Recreation and Accessibility. “We so appreciate the generosity of our industry partners and their willingness to fully embrace this program.” Haag was responsible for coordinating industry partner participation on behalf of TCVA.

First, The Schooner’s team brought the world of culinary arts into the classroom, teaching students how to shuck oysters, plate meals and design menus. This immersive experience culminated in a visit to the Netarts restaurant, where students rolled up their sleeves to set tables, prepare food and take orders during a lunch shift.

“Being a part of this class was an incredibly rewarding experience for our entire team,” said Taniesha Garibay, Restaurant Manager at The Schooner. “Over the course of just three days, we got to share not only what we do, but why we love doing it. Programs like this are so important because they connect students to real opportunities and show them that there’s a place for them in this industry.”

Next, travel writer Adam Sawyer introduced students to the art of storytelling in tourism, sharing tips on writing for travel audiences and leading an interpretive hike at Cape Meares Lighthouse to bring those skills to life.

At Stimulus Coffee,

Students took a field trip to Cape Kiwanda with representatives from the Tillamook Estuaries Partnership as part of the program.

students teamed up with the Noble House staff to craft their own drinks for the café’s menu while also learning how to budget and order supplies. Their exploration of hospitality management continued with tours of Noble House properties in Pacific City and a work shift at Stimulus.

The Tillamook Air Museum staff offered a fascinating glimpse into the region’s aviation history, sharing artifacts and discussing how preserving heritage can draw visitors. Behind the scenes, students gained firsthand experience in cataloging, budgeting and conducting research to keep the museum’s stories alive.

“Participating in this program was both meaningful and impactful,” said Christain Gurling, Museum Curator at Tillamook Air Museum. “It provided students with a valuable introduction to the role of tourism in our local economy and gave our museum the opportunity to connect with the next generation, those who will help shape what museums look like in the future.”

Finally, the team from the Tillamook Estuaries Partnership explored the connection between conservation and tourism, emphasizing the power of messaging to promote responsible visitation. Students saw the importance of native plants in preserving natural beauty and got to experience it themselves with a tide pool visit and nature hike at Cape Kiwanda. Thanks to David’s Chair, students also tried out an all-terrain track chair to understand how crucial accessibility is for welcoming all visitors.

“At the Oregon Restaurant and Lodging Association, we strive to support the training, education and inspiration of our current and future workforce,” said Ella Sturdevant, Workforce Development Coordinator at ORLA. “We would like to commend Nestucca High School for such a successful year and hope to see it grow within the institution and across the state.”

With the pilot program’s success, plans turn to growing and including more schools and local partners.

“I look forward to seeing this class grow next year and would love to see it expand to all three high schools, with more industry-partner experiences,” Strober said.

GARDENING MATTERS

Going to the Fair

For some reason, I had a hard time coming up with a topic for this week’s column. July is commonly the month of maintenance and enjoying the fruits – and vegetables – of our labors. After writing this column for over 22 years, there was nothing too exciting left to write about. And then I remembered: we are coming up on the Tillamook County Fair in three weeks.

So, it is time to explore what you need to know to enjoy the fair even more this year. Consider entering some of your own vegetables or flowers. It will give you an increased appreciation of what your friends and neighbors do to raise that perfect pumpkin or dahlia.

There are some basic rules, and to get this year’s guidance, I went to the fair’s website. It is full of all sorts of information about how to enter, what the judges require, and how to drop off your items.

I admit to not having exhibited for quite a few years, so I was a bit surprised to learn all the registration must now be done online. I know, I shouldn’t be surprised as it seems everything is done online these days, but I digress.

One of the most important things to know is that all exhibitors must reside or be a property owner in Tillamook County and the items must have been produced here as well. The only exception to this rule is in the artistic classes, but they need to be arranged by the exhibitor. There are several departments, and each department has its own set of rules.

For example, the floral

History exhibits and storytelling panel showcase the Pacific City Dory fleet during the 66th Annual Dory Days Festival

The traveling exhibit “Launching through the Surf: The Dory Fleet of Pacific City” makes its much-anticipated annual return to the Kiawanda Community Center during the 2025 Dory Days celebration in Pacific City! Don’t miss this opportunity to experience the rich heritage of the local dory fishing tradition.

This exhibition features a component of the larger “Launching through the Surf” project developed collaboratively by Linfield University and the Pacific City Dorymen’s Association. It explores the vital role dory fishers and their boats have played—and continue to play—in the life and identity of Pacific City.

Since its inception in the summer of 2011, the oral history project has documented the adventures of this unique fishing community. To date, the team has interviewed more than 100 dory fishers, collecting over 15,000 vintage and contemporary photographs and other images and more than 300 hours of audio and video recordings. The stories are shared in the voices of those closest to the fleet: the fishers themselves, along with their families, friends, boatbuilders, and fish buyers.

The exhibit features 25 panels exploring the following topics and more: historical highlights covering more than a century of dory activity in Pacific City, building a dory, turning oars, the evolution of the Pacific City dories, the Dory Derbies, and Dory Days. The panels are comprised of vintage photographs and historical documents from the dory fishers, contemporary photographs, and comments from the oral history interviews.

This year’s exhibit also includes three special displays:

- A salute to the 2025 Dory Days theme, “Christmas in July,” with photos by Tyrone Marshall,
- A tribute to the past with vintage photographs certain to evoke fond memories for many and a sense of awe for all, and
- A celebration of the photographs of Sandra (Sandy) Weedman, aka the “PC Photo Lady.”

Also known as the official photographer of the Dory Fleet, Sandy has been part of the dory landscape on the beach at Cape Kiwanda for several decades. She can be found there most weekends and holidays with camera in hand, documenting the dories as they launch west into the often-breathtaking waves and return with thrilling slides onto the beach.

Exhibit hours at the Kiawanda Community Center, 34600 Cape Kiwanda Drive, Pacific City are Saturday, July 19th from 7 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Sunday, July 20th from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

In addition to the Dory Days showing, a mini-version of the traveling exhibit will be on display at the Oregon Coast Bank in Pacific City throughout July. The mini-display features 7 of the larger exhibit’s 25 panels exploring the following topics: historical highlights covering more than a century of dory activity in Pacific City, the evolution of the Pacific City dories, the Dory Derbies, and Dory Days. The exhibit also includes a selection of vintage photographs as well as photos from the Sandy Weedman collection.

The exhibition will be open to the public during regular hours from July 1st through July 31st at 35490 Airport Way in Pacific

City.

The Pacific City Dory Days Planning Committee also enthusiastically announces the inaugural presentation of “Dory Fishers—Sand Kickin’ and Story Tellin’” during Dory Days 2025. Drawing inspiration from the oral histories collected as part of the “Launching through the Surf: The Dory Fleet of Pacific City” history project, the event will feature in-person storytelling by members of the dory community.

Storytellers include Steve Johnson (2025 Dory Days Parade Grand Marshal), Lee Peterson, David Sears, Randy Haltiner, Brent Foster, Brad Foster, Ray Monroe, and Pam Learned. Each storyteller will share one or two stories about their experiences with dory fishing and the dory community.

“Dory Fishers—Sand Kickin’ and Story Tellin’” will take place on Sunday, July 20th from Noon-1:30 p.m. at the Kiawanda Community Center, 34600 Cape Kiwanda Drive, Pacific City.

GARDENING

department requires you to enter online with registration ending at 11:59 on Monday, August 4th. You may then drop off your floral items between 10 a.m. and 8:00 p.m. on that Monday, or between 8:00 a.m. and 10:00 a.m. on Tuesday, the 5th as judging starts on the 5th. Because everything is online, each exhibitor will have a ShoWorks ID assigned when entering.

Now, the floral department requires horticultural entries to have attached or added foliage for flowers without foliage on the stems. You need to name your entry as to species and varietal name if known. Like “Rose, red, ‘Mr. Lincoln’.” There will be clear glass containers provided for the floral displays.

If you enter in an artistic class, Fair superintendents ask that you label your containers and/or figurines with your name. The artistic classes are the only ones where props are permitted.

Collections that have multiple blooms will be penalized for lack of uniformity in those blooms. The Fair guides have lists of Divisions, Class, and Section descriptions for your entry numbers. As an example, if I wanted to enter that ‘Mr. Lincoln’ rose, I would enter in the roses (w/attached foliage) division, description # 190, red. And I would include its name.

There are also divisions for bonsai, dahlias, potted plants (both indoor and outdoor), vines, and three divisions for cut flowers. There is also a youth division as well as the above open classes. And of course, the fair will not accept any plants that are considered invasive in the state of Oregon, like English ivy or buddleia.

If you are more interested in vegetables or fruit, there is a category for that, too, called land products. This category also includes extracted honey products and canned goods. The times for entering and dropping off are the same as for the Floral Category and entries must have been grown or produced in Tillamook County by residents or landowners. But, this category, logically, has its own set of rules.

These judges will look for uniformity and maturity. This makes it important to choose items of the same size and ripeness. A lot of the Land Products need to be entered in groups, according to the types. You will need 2 ears of corn, 2 stalks of rhubarb, and 2 tomatoes, for example, but 5 specimens of potatoes, beets, and carrots. This is where the Fair website is invaluable.

It’s not too early to be thinking about your entries and registration is open now. The fair’s website address is <https://www.tillamookfair.com/p/fair-info/show--tell> . Entering in the county fair brings with it a new level of enjoyment. And be sure and stop by the Tillamook County Master Gardeners’ Learning Garden near the main entrance. It will be staffed by volunteers during fair week, and they would love to answer your gardening questions and maybe give a few tips on growing flowers or veggies for next year’s fair.

Marathon Mission: 1,500 miles, 17 colleges, 50 days, 1 cause

This summer, an Oregon community college president is hitting the pavement to spotlight a critical issue: The basic needs of community college students. Starting mid-June, Clackamas Community College President Dr. Tim Cook — an avid marathoner — will embark on a bold challenge to run to every community college in Oregon. That’s more than 1,500 miles over 50 days, averaging 32 miles per day.

The Running for Oregon Community College Students (ROCCS) campaign is a statewide awareness and fundraising initiative to highlight the challenges facing today’s students and to advocate for increased state funding for essential support services. Funds raised through ROCCS will be distributed directly to participating colleges to support students’ basic needs, such as food, housing, childcare and transportation.

Community college students represent some of the most vulnerable populations in the state. A survey from The Hope Center highlights the pressing needs of Oregon’s community college students:

- Food insecurity: Approximately 41% of students reported experiencing food insecurity within the previous 30 days.

- Housing insecurity: About 52% of students faced housing insecurity in the past year, which includes difficulties such as affording rent, utilities, or frequent moves.
- Homelessness: Nearly 20% of students experienced homelessness in the past year, indicating a lack of stable and safe housing.

Oregon’s community colleges serve approximately 200,000 students, which is 52% of all public and private higher education enrollments in the state. Many of these students encounter significant obstacles, including housing and food insecurity, a lack of childcare, and transportation issues. Through this run, Oregon’s community colleges seek to highlight these challenges and generate support to address them.

“As a first-generation college student, I understand the transformative power of education,” Cook said. “Through ROCCS, I aim to shed light on the significant challenges our students face, rally support to address these critical needs, and raise awareness of the valuable role community colleges play in our state.”

“Tillamook Bay Community College is proud to support this mission and encourage the community to get involved,” TBCC President Dr. Paul Jarrell said. “This initiative not only raises awareness but also directly impacts our students by securing much-needed resources.”

Follow Cook’s training and daily progress during the run on Instagram at <https://www.instagram.com/run4orccstudents/>.

To donate or learn more about the run, visit <http://run4orccstudents.org/>.

The ROCCS campaign is made possible through the generous support of Rivermark Community Credit Union, Johnson RV, and Daimler Truck North America.

Drazan Blasts ODOT messaging after legislative failure

By Nigel Jaquiss
Oregon Journalism Project

House Minority Leader Christine Drazan (R-Canby) reacted strongly to an email Oregon Department of Transportation director Kris Strickler sent to agency employees last week in the wake of the Legislature’s failure to pass a transportation funding bill.

In her response July 2, Drazan was combative: “Stop the gaslighting and do your job, director Strickler,” she wrote.

Strickler originally communicated with the agency’s nearly 5,000 employees right after the session ended, warning that layoffs loomed for about 600 of them.

“This is the hardest message I’ve ever had to send in my career,” Strickler wrote June 28 at 9:03 pm.

“Moments ago, the legislative session ended without the Legislature passing a transportation funding package providing ODOT with either new funding, funding flexibility, or even an interim step so we would not have to take immediate reductions,” he continued. “The leadership team and governor pushed to the very end, including the governor testifying on a bill this evening. Because of this inaction, we are forced to make significant cuts starting this month.”

Although Democrats hold the three-fifths supermajorities in both legislative chambers that Oregon requires to pass new taxes, none of the various versions of the transportation funding bill generated enough support to result in a successful floor vote.

Lawmakers have cited a variety of explanations for the failure. Among them: Republican intransigence; the late arrival of the bill, which didn’t appear until the second week of June; and overreach on the part of Democrats, who initially proposed a $15 billion tax hike over the next decade, an increase that was difficult for members in swing districts to support. A slimmed-down version, which would have raised about $12 billion, was no more digestible, and a last-gasp, 3-cents-per-gallon gas tax increase failed to earmark any funding for local governments.

Underlying the failure: a general lack of confidence in ODOT among many lawmakers. Perhaps nothing captured the agency’s reputational issues in the Capitol more clearly than when a senior department official admitted to lawmakers early in the session that ODOT had made a billion-dollar error in its budget.

In his end-of-session email, however, Strickler repeated the agency talking points that had not convinced lawmakers of ODOT’s case: “For many years, this agency has informed the Oregon Legislature that a structural revenue issue driven by flattening and declining gas tax revenue, inflation, and statutory restrictions on available funding would eventually force the agency to dramatically reduce its staffing and service levels if no intervention came forward,” he wrote.

Drazan didn’t appreciate that framing. Her caucus and Senate Republicans had urged ODOT to make significant cuts rather than seek so much new money.

“I have read your lengthy email to ODOT employees,” Drazan wrote. “Make no mistake, this is an offensive abrogation of duty. Throughout this legislative process you have on behalf of your agency failed to take full responsibility for a culture of careless fiscal management, political doublespeak, and blame shifting.”

Drazan blamed Strickler’s boss, Gov. Tina Kotek, for failing to engage with Republican leaders on ODOT’s budget and chastised the agency for declining to work with GOP lawmakers.

“ODOT refused to respond to questions and instead obfuscated and dodged hard conversations,” Drazan wrote. “It appears you have since spread the false narrative that your agency leadership was working tirelessly to build awareness and support for their work.”

Drazan said ODOT and Democratic leaders deserved the result they got.

“You advanced backroom deals that failed to pan out,” she wrote. “Public employees should understand that by choosing to exclusively engage in political gamesmanship you and the governor gambled and lost.”

She added: “I would respectfully say you have no business playing the hero in staff emails, while stoking fears among ODOT’s workforce and conjuring up false narratives with imaginary villains.”

Of course, 2026 is an election year, and Drazan, who ran against Kotek in 2022, losing by 3.5 points, is keenly aware of that. But her tone suggests two things: First, the business community, which depends on a well-functioning transportation system to move its products and whose members are Republicans’ financial supporters, is not in a conciliatory mood.

Second, Kotek’s intimations that she plans to call the Legislature into special session to pass stopgap funding for ODOT face a significant obstacle as Republicans are clearly not feeling much pressure to fall in line.

ODOT and Kotek did not immediately respond to requests for comment on Drazan’s email.

Merkley will run for re-election in 2026

BY NIGEL JAQUISS
Oregon Journalism Project

U.S. Sen. Jeff Merkley (D-Ore.) told the Oregon Journalism Project in an interview this morning that he will run for a fourth term next year.

Merkley, 68, an East Portland resident when he’s not in Washington, D.C., has been mulling his future for months and extended his process beyond a self-imposed deadline of June 30.

“It was a difficult decision,” Merkley says. “I see folks who stay too long and assume they are the only ones who can make an effective case for their constituents.”

But in the end, Merk-

ley says, he and his wife, Mary Sorteberg, came to the conclusion that he should continue for one primary reason: the desire to help counterbalance President Donald Trump and his influence on all branches of government.

“What tipped us is the slide into a ‘strong man’ state; a deferential Supreme Court; the power they are giving him to reorganize the federal government; the effort to steal the power of the purse from Congress; and, the entire strategy of undermining the separation of powers,” Merkley says.

“It’s an incredibly perilous moment in our country’s history; Mary and I feel that we have to be fully engaged in the battle to defend our country and our constitution.”

Merkley, who serves on the Senate committees on appropriations, budget and foreign relations, began his Senate career with the 2008 defeat of incumbent U.S. Sen. Gordon Smith (R-Ore.). That outcome marked the second consecutive momentous victory in Merkley’s career and coincided with a seismic shift toward Democratic control of Oregon politics.

From the late 1960s until the mid-1990s, two Republicans, Mark Hatfield (1967-1997) and Bob Packwood (1969-1995), represented Oregon in the Senate. Sen. Ron Wyden (D-Ore.) replaced Packwood in 1996 and Merkley defeated Smith 12 years later.

Merkley grew up in Douglas County and later East Portland, and earned degrees from Stanford and Princeton. He led two non-profits, Habitat for Humanity and the World Affairs Council of Oregon, before making politics his fulltime career.

He won a seat in the Oregon House in 1998 and moved up to House speaker in 2007, the first time Democrats held control of the House since 1989. That takeover (Democrats had controlled the Senate since 2003) catapulted Merkley in his candidacy for the U.S. Senate.

After defeating Smith by 3.4 percentage points in 2008, Merkley has not experienced a close race, defeating GOP opponents Dr. Monica Wehby by 19 points in 2014 and Jo Rae Perkins by 17 points in 2020.

Since entering the Senate, Merkley has been a reliably progressive voice, a less flamboyant ally to Sen. Bernie Sanders (I-Vt.). He has a been loud voice for civil rights, a fierce critic of both Trump administrations and of Wall Street excesses. After the great recession, he co-authored the so-called “Volcker Rule,” which dramatically reduced banks’ speculative trading and risk-taking activities.

The Center for Effective Lawmaking, a joint venture between Vanderbilt University and the University of Virginia, which ranks members of Congress based on 15 criteria, ranked Merkley as the 5th most effective Senate Democrat earlier this year, noting he’d “advanced two sponsored bills into law: the Stop Institutional Child Abuse Act, and the Promoting a Resolution to the Tibet-China Dispute Act.”
