Board briefed on state forester recruitment

WILL CHAPPELL
Headlight Editor

In the wake of senate bill 1051, members of the board of forestry were updated on Governor Tina Kotek’s plan for the recruitment of a new state forester, a responsibility reassigned from the board by the bill, on July 17.

Several board members were dubious about the importance of their positions given the change with Kotek natural policy resource advisors Geoff Huntington and Chandra Ferrari reassuring the board that they would still have a role to play.

“The board still, in my opinion has a very important role,” Ferrari said. “I still think you’re a very important interface point with the forester and with this agency and in terms of providing some clarity around how well the department is functioning in achieving the outcomes we’re all still going to collectively share for the department and for forest management in Oregon.”

Senate bill 1051 reallocated the responsibility for the hiring and firing of Oregon’s state forester from the board of forestry to the governor, in the middle of the process to find a replacement for Cal Mukumoto, who resigned from the post in January.

Kotek’s representatives were at the board meeting to detail the process the governor’s office will be using for the recruitment. Huntington said that Ferrari would be taking the lead on the recruitment and that their office was using the same framework they had in the recruitment of executives at six other natural resource agencies during Kotek’s tenure.

Huntington told the board that a recruitment firm had been retained and that the job listing would be posted sometime on the day of the meeting and remain active through the end of August.

At that point, applications will be reviewed by staff from the governor’s natural resource office, Board of Forestry Chair Jim Kelly and two board members, who will subjectively rank the candidates’ qualifications based on the recruitment criteria. Huntington said that in past recruitments, six to eight candidates have typically advanced.

Garibaldi businesses ready for 101 reopening

WILL CHAPPELL
Headlight Editor

Since last September, Garibaldi businesses have contended with difficult access slowing customer traffic throughout a major upgrade to Highway 101 through the city’s downtown.

With the project set to wrap up this week, just in time for the annual Garibaldi Days festival, Garibaldi Business Association (GBA) President Valerie Schumann said that her members wanted to encourage locals to come out to support the businesses and thank the project team from K&E Excavating.

“They were exceptional, really from the beginning they made a point to attend our Garibaldi Business Association meetings,” Schumann said. “Mike Zollner, who was their superintendent, was a face, he was really everywhere, and he came in and listened.”

The project to overhaul 101 with a new alignment, bike lane, parking spaces and ADA-accessible crosswalks between First and 11th Streets began last September and came with a price tag of $10.5 million.

Early on, the project did not cause many delays, but starting in March, intermittent one-lane closures began to disrupt traffic through the city, with waits to pass through sometimes surpassing half an hour, and impact businesses.

Becky Sage, owner of the Ghost Hole Public House, said that her revenues had been down at least 25-30% from a normal year. Sage said that business during the days was particularly slow but that over the past month, evenings have begun to pick up.

Sage credited the team from K&E for doing everything they could to make sure her business stayed accessible but said that it seemed that people weren't interested in stopping after sitting in a snarl of traffic. "They make their way through the 45-minute wait or 20-minute wait or whatever and they just keep going," Sage said.

While the Ghost Hole has been able to keep all its employees, Sage said she had to cut back on hours somewhat and that she hadn't hired more workers to staff up for the summer rush as she normally does. Sage said that she is a little stressed about the situation and possible decreases in on-street parking with the addition of bike lanes but that she was hopeful business would pick up, noting that she had just hired an additional staff member.

Phil Maske, owner of Belladonna Beads, said that while business had suffered somewhat during the construction, he had been surprised by the support shown by customers.

"Business was a little bit down, but I was pretty impressed by how much people made the effort to support us still," Maske said. "There was a real press to support the store despite the construction going on."

Maske credited the relatively strong performance to a combination of past patrons making a special effort to support the store and new customers seeing his store while in traffic and deciding to stop in.

"We had a lot of people who had never really noticed us before, even if Garibaldi was part of their routine or part of their vacation," Maske said, "they just were forced to take the time to notice us a little bit more."

As part of the project, crews installed an entrance on a vacant lot that Maske had purchased next to his business to allow it to become a parking lot, and like Schumann and Sage, he said that the team at K&E had done everything possible to mitigate the impacts of the work.

Port of Garibaldi Manager Mike Saindon also echoed the positive sentiments about K&E and said that he is excited for the transformation the project will bring for the city.

Saindon said that the port had not been economically impacted by the project but that tenants at the property, which leases buildings to several businesses, had been. Saindon said that while everyone had weathered the slow year so far, many were stressed about making enough money during the remaining summer months to sustain them through the winter.

However, like the business owners, Saindon stressed the necessity of the project for the community and said that he hoped to see future projects build on the work it has done to make downtown Garibaldi more accessible.

"I am hopeful that when the Highway 101 project is 1005 done the community and Garibaldi Business Association can continue to move forward with some main street projects and other things to move Garibaldi to the next level and make the town truly Walkable for people," Saindon said.

Candidates will then move into three rounds of interviews.

The first will feature two stakeholder panels, comprised of members of different groups interested in forests, with Huntington mentioning the possibility of forest industry and conservation groups. The groups will offer feedback on the candidates, and the field may be narrowed.

Candidates will then interview with a panel consisting of two board of forestry members, staff from the department of forestry and executive-level employees from other state agencies. Huntington said that the goal was to winnow the field of candidates to three or four following this round of interviews.

The final round of interviews will take place with the governor's executive team and Kelly, who will recommend two or three finalists for a decisive interview with Kotek.

Huntington said that the goal is to conduct the interview panels throughout September, allowing Kotek to do her interviews in the first week of October and reach a decision by October 17, a month ahead of the November 17 legislative days when Kotek will seek senate approval for the nomination.

Following several procedural questions about the recruitment, Kelly opened a discussion about the board's role under the new law, and it quickly became clear that board members, especially Brenda McComb, were concerned about the change.

McComb started the discussion by pointedly asking Huntington and Ferrari what the board's role would be now that they did not manage the state forester.

"Since we now have responsibility without authority to appoint the state forester nor to oversee or hold accountable the state forester, I would like to hear from Chandra and Jeff what they see as our role from this point on," McComb wondered.

Ferrari said that the board would still play an important role in helping the governor evaluate the forester's performance and that she was committed to creating mechanisms to promote communication with the board.

McComb pressed on the issue, saying that without the authority to oversee the forester, any attempts to resolve policy or management disagreements between the board and forester would be mediated by the governor's office and that given recent events, she did not have much faith in receiving their support.

"We then have to trust that your office will listen to what we have to say," McComb said, "and right now after the passage of the senate bill, I have very little reason to trust your office."

McComb then again asked what authority the board would wield without oversight of the agency's director.

Huntington chimed in that the board was now in the same position as the water resources commission and that they would continue to participate in policy setting for the department. Huntington argued that the board would still have lots of influence and said that the authority to hire and fire did not matter to the governor's office.

McComb shot back that Huntington was describing a situation where the board would have responsibility without authority.

Huntington pushed back, arguing that the governor had always had ultimate discretion over the department and its human resources, with 1051 simply formalizing that authority. "The ultimate authority for the enterprise sits with the governor, working in partnership with our boards and commissions whether they have hiring and firing authority or they don't," Huntington said.

Kelly asked how the board could rely on the governor's office to remain engaged after the recruitment policy ended when they had many other responsibilities. Ferrari said that she wanted to collaborate to establish best practices and expectations to create continuity in the board's communications with the governor's office.

Board Member Liz Agpaoa said that she was concerned the change would put state foresters in jeopardy of being fired for situations outside of their control, such as wildfires or inadequate funding mechanisms for the department, robbing the department of stability.

Huntington said that Kotek stood up for her agency heads, specifically pointing to the Oregon Department of Transportation, which has perennial budget struggles, as an example of Kotek not turning on an embattled director. Huntington said that he also felt there was a better understanding of the challenges posed by climate change and budget constraints now than at any time in the past.

Huntington argued the change would reduce the political pressures on future state foresters as long as they were transparent about issues facing the department.

"Our office believes that having the governor be responsible for the state forester being hired and fired and responsible for the duration of that tenure is part of settling things out," Huntington said.

McComb said she thought it was "incredibly naive" to believe that transparency would keep an angry public from turning on an agency head and that she doubted the governor's resolve in such a situation.

From there, the discussion began to wind down, but a commonality among several board members began to emerge when Kelly asked a question on behalf of Ben Deumling, who wondered how the board would be able to create meaningful performance measure for the state's forests if they lacked authority over the state forester and why he should remain invested in the board given that.

Ferrari responded that the performance measures, like the board's feedback, would play an important role in the governor's evaluation of the agency.

However, that answer did not seem to assuage concerns, with McComb saying that the change had eroded her interest in investing time and energy in the board, and both Kelly and Board Member Joe Justice agreeing.

Kelly ended the meeting with an impromptu pep talk for himself, Justice and McComb, encouraging them to join him in remaining engaged.

"I guess we just need to—the three of us—put our big boy or our big girl pants on and do the work," Kelly said, "because it's going to be really important as all this transition happens that we're not checking out early."

Rockaway receives $1.4 million towards watershed purchase

WILL CHAPPELL
Headlight Editor

Rockaway Beach’s city council voted to accept a $1.4-million grant from the Oregon Water-shed Board to support the purchase of the lower half of the Jetty Creek watershed at their July 16 meeting.

Council also approved a decrease in the speed limit on Highway 101 through the city’s business district from 30 miles per hour to 20, and appointed Patrick Ryan to fill a vacant position on the council.

The $1.4-million grant from the Oregon Watershed

Board was awarded as part of the agen-cy’s drinking water source protection program and will contribute to staff costs, contrac-tors and the purchase of the 550 acres of the lower watershed that are owned by Nuveen Capital.

City Manager Luke Shepard said that the city was also “nearly approved” for a grant from the clean water state revolving fund, which should provide the remainder of the needed funds for the purchase, which is expected to be complete by October 2026.

In addition to accepting the grant, council also ap-proved a $10,355 payment to Stimson Lumber to pay for the company to mechanically brush the 10.9 miles of road in the upper part of the Jetty Creek watershed, which it owns, through 2028, rather than spray pesticides.

The speed limit decrease from 30 miles per hour to 20 in the downtown business corridor between North and South Third Streets came at the recommendation of the Oregon De-partment of Transportation.

Ryan was appointed to fill council position four, which was recently vacated by Ale-sia Franken. Ryan previously served on the Neah-Kah-Nie School Board for more than 20 years.

Garibaldi

Stop the City Manager’s Madness

While the City of Garibaldi desperately hired Jake Boone as its city manager at a substantial salary of $120,000, he now plans to relinquish a key responsibility of his job by creating a new City position of Recorder with a salary of $76,932. Boone is bound by the City Charter to carry out these duties. His response is: change the Charter.

Under Garibaldi Municipal Code, Section 2.10.060, “...the salary and benefits of the city administrator... may be revised from time to time by the City Council in its discretion and legislative function.” Therefore, the City Council has a duty and responsibility to the citizens of Garibaldi to adjust Boone’s annual salary to reflex his fewer duties, to accommodate the cost of the new position, and to recognize the City’s fiscal limitations regarding staff salaries.

Further, Boone has demonstrated he does not have the full qualifications required for the city manager post based on his lackluster performance to date and inexperienced on Public Record and Public Meeting rules that have been recognized by watchful citizens. The City is facing complaints to the State of Oregon’s Ethics Commission as a result of his rule violations.

As this new Recorder job is more than a $25,000 pay addition to a replacement clerical job required by City administration, Boone’s salary should be revised to $100,000. His current salary is already $40,000 more than the City paid to a more qualified and experienced city manager in 2021-2022. This salary adjustment is reasonable, generous and in the best interest of Garibaldi.

Our small city should not have to shoulder the large payroll for a very small staff. I remind the City Council and residents that part of Garibaldi’s financial troubles are connected to a situation in 2023 where big job titles and high salaries were set by employees who promoted themselves. The temporary city managers had no authority or Council permission to approve it, but the huge pay raises stand.

The Garibaldi taxpayers deserve fiscally responsible oversight of City staff. The recent rejection by Boone on a salary freeze (to help reduce water/ sewer fees increases) and his refusal to cancel his across-the-board 3 percent staff pay increases demonstrates his lack of commitment to solve the city’s serious financial crisis.

Now, after jacking up water and sewer rates with little explanation, Boone has proposed having individual residents pay for costly sewer repairs on City property connected to their homes. More to come on this.

It’s time for responsible oversight of Boone from the City Council.

Nehalem Council raises water rates

WILL CHAPPELL
Headlight Editor

Nehalem's city council raised water rates by 8% at their July 14 meeting, to keep up with increases in the utility's budget.

Council also heard an update on the Thompson Springs project being led by local nonprofit Sammy's Place, which plans to bring ten units offering home ownership opportunities, with a portion dedicated to individuals with intellectual and developmental disabilities (IDD), to the city.

The water rate increase came as the city heads into a new fiscal year and to close a gap between revenues and expenses caused when the council declined to increase rates in 2023. That put rates 4-5% behind expenses and a 5% increase last year was insufficient to make up for it.

City Manager Lori Longfellow told councilors that the water revenues were the city's financial lifeblood and that it was important they not fall further behind on updating them. Councilors agreed with Wandell and approved the increase. The base rate for .75" pipes will now be $65.85.

Members of the team working on the Thompson

Springs project presented at the meeting, with Kevin Shluka who sits on the Thompson Springs Housing Advisory Committee and Shane Boland from construction company Owen Gabbert LLC speaking.

Work on the project began in earnest in 2019, when Tillamook County donated the three-acre property on Thompson Lane in Nehalem to Sammy's Place after it went into foreclosure. At that point, there were hazardous material concerns on the property, but Oregon's Department of Environmental Quality and the United States Environmental Protection Agency donated staff time to remediate those issues, and it is now largely ready for development.

The plan for the project is to build six one-bed and four two-bed homes and a community building featuring a communal kitchen, generator and emergency supplies on the property. Five of the homes would be for people with IDD, while the others would be open to anybody to create an integrated community.

Residents will purchase the individual units while the common land remains under the ownership of a land trust. Two of the units will be affordable to residents making 120% of the area's median income or less, while the rest will be even more affordable, though final prices will depend on fundraising efforts, as IDD individuals will also be eligible to participate in a Homebuyer Assistance Program.

The project is still in the design phase and Boland said that the project team is now evaluating necessary infrastructure improvements around the site to facilitate it, including widening Thompson Road and improving water service with the installation of a new loop.

Fundraising for the project has been successful thus far, with more than $3 million raised, including a $1.8 million grant from Oregon Housing and Community Services, $1.2 million from the Fairview Trust and $840,000 from the KUNI foundation.

Boland said that the project had an estimated construction price of $5.5 million and that his firm was still working to determine the cost of the needed infrastructure upgrades. He also said that the affordability level of the homes would be affected by the amount of money raised.

A rendering of the Thompson Springs development shared by Shane Boland of Owen Gabbert LLC at the council meeting.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

A random act of kindness

For some time now, I’ve been depressed and discouraged. It’s not just the medical issues I’m experiencing. It’s my beliefs in mankind. I follow current events closely and find them increasingly disturbing. The divisions and hatred in our country and world grow and are a real downer.

But an event happened to me on July 8, that absolutely floored me, stunned me and renewed my faith in human nature.

I was shopping at Fred Meyer in the morning. Needed groceries and a birthday gift card for my granddaughter. I pulled up to a checkout line in my electric cart with my basket filled with items (I’m disabled and can only shop with the cart). There were two carts stuffed with items in front of me and a mother and daughter checking out. My Vietnam veteran cap started a long conversation. They were getting supplies for their annual family Oregon coast seafood fest. We discussed our histories, families and Tillamook stories. My groceries had been scanned and were waiting to be bagged when these other two finished bagging and left.

When I asked the clerk when I should put in my debit card, she informed me that the customers in front of me had paid my bill. A $173 bill.

I was flabbergasted. Really brought to tears. They have renewed my faith in humanity. Despite being a divided nation, there are generous, warm, caring individuals on both side of the divide. We are, after all, all Americans. We pull together and help each other when things get bad. God bless America.

Issues with ICE

The ongoing actions of U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE), whose tactics resemble abductions more than lawful enforcement are distressing and cruel. The quiet, often violent apprehensions of both documented and undocumented individuals—many of whom have lived, worked, and raised families here for decades—are a stain on our national conscience.

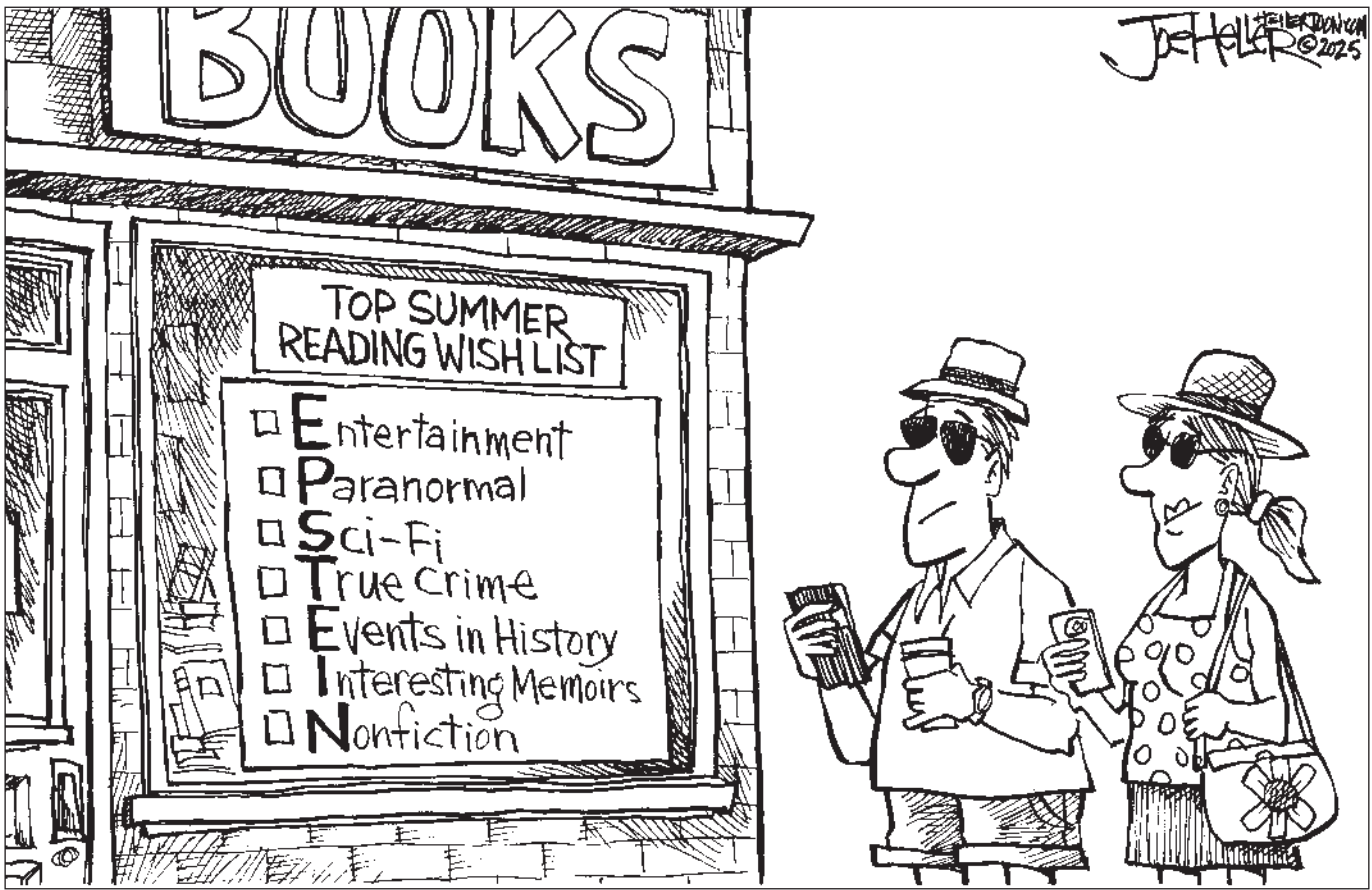

ICE operates in the shadows: snatching people off the streets, raiding homes without proper warrants, and detaining individuals in facilities where due process is often ignored. Many times ICE shows up in unmarked vehicles and wearing masks so they aren’t identifying themselves as “law enforcement” to the people they are taking. These are not just arrests—they are state-sanctioned disappearances. Families are being torn apart without notice, leaving children traumatized and communities destabilized.

What’s most disturbing is the increasing normalization of these tactics. We are told these actions are necessary for “national security,” yet time and again, ICE targets long-standing members of our communities, not dangerous criminals.

This is a human rights issue, not just an immigration issue. ICE also received a significant budget increase with the recent passage of the Big Beautiful Bill Act. This is another cause for concern with this agency run amok.

We must demand that Congress investigate and reform ICE calling for greater oversight, transparency, and accountability. The USA cannot claim to be the “land of the free” while allowing such inhumane tactics within our borders. We must stand up, speak out, and protect the dignity and rights of all people living in this country.

An Adventist Health-led group of 20 volunteers made a trip to Micronesia earlier this month. Our own Karen Walz, a physical therapist with Adventist, was part of the team. One of the main goals of the trip was to screen for Rheumatic Heart Disease in children (who have had untreated strep throat infections) and to set them up with treatment when needed to prevent Congestive Heart Failure. Karen helped with this goal as well as some Physical Therapy care. She focused on establishing care plans for a wide variety of patients, both those in Chuuk Hospital on the Micronesian island of Weno and those who are outpatients. The goal was to set up programs that individuals could continue alone or assisted by nursing staff or family. In-patient cases included patients with post-stroke and other neurological disorders, amputation, cerebral palsy, burn care, and patients needing assistance with bed mobility. Outpatient care involved patients with chronic pain (spine, shoulder, overuse, and gout) as well as a younger patient following up after a shoulder labral repair. Karen thanks friends and neighbors who made a financial contribution toward the cost of her participation in this wonderful charitable effort.

I heard the news just in time: The Tillamook County Creamery Association’s (TCCA’s) Original Farmstyle Cream Cheese Spread was ranked as the best cheese spread of any variety at the International Cheese and Dairy Awards held in Stafford, United Kingdom, in late July. A granddaughter and her friend were coming to visit, and their mothers had told me that what the girls like for breakfast is bagels and cream cheese. I hurried to the grocery store to pick up some of that award-winning cream cheese. It was a huge hit here at the Steen residence. Congrats, TCCA, and thanks.

A new section of dry sand has been roped off to protect a snowy plover nesting area on Cape Meares beach. Unlike the snowy plover restricted zone far down by the south jetty, this section is right in the heart of our sandy shore, stretching for about a quarter of a mile from the Bayocean Road beach access south toward the Pacific Avenue beach access. I saw a woman carefully leashing up her dog near the restricted area, and a man who was excavating for a bonfire told me that he made sure he was a good distance from the flagged area. Let’s hope we can all get along until snowy plover restrictions are lifted on September 16.

If you are looking for a fun day trip, drive a couple of hours up the coast to Fort Stevens State Park to see the wreck of the Peter Iredale. Shifting sands have revealed more of this 1906 wreck than has been visible for decades. It is an amazing sight.

On a personal note, congratulations are in order for our son, Erik. On July 12, he completed the Mt. Hood Trail race, a 50-mile run through the Mt. Hood National Forest (mostly on the Pacific Crest Trail). In addition to the sheer distance, add in the fact that the trail gains 5,640 in elevation—and you can see why it boggles his parents’ minds. Erik came in fourteenth in his age group with a time of 10 hours, 29 minutes and 57.1 seconds. Way to go, son.

FENCEPOSTS

Congratulations to Patrick Ryan, Rockaway Beach’s newest member of city council. He replaces Alesia Franken, who herself was initially appointed after the untimely death of Cindy Kay Gregory in early 2023, then elected to her position in November 2024. During her tenure, she acted as city council liaison to the Sourcewater Protection Plan Development Advisory Committee and played a crucial role in the successful development of the plan, as well as other duties. We wish former councilor Franken all the best.

The process for selecting a replacement for an empty council seat involves each current councilor, plus the mayor, asking questions of each candidate. While one candidate is being interviewed, the others remain outside the council chamber. Councilors and the mayor come up with their own questions, but each asks the same question to all the candidates. At the end of the interview process, the councilors and mayor vote for the candidate they believe will do the best job for the city.

New City Councilor Ryan’s 20 years of experience on a number of boards and organizations, including school board, gave him a clear edge of experience in the kinds of negotiations and evaluations required for a position of this responsibility. He was sworn in near the end of the meeting.

In addition, city council appointed two new members to the Forest Stewardship Advisory Committee: Nancy Lanyon, longtime member of the Planning Commission, and Darlene Johnson. Johnson has a wealth of experience in financial planning, appraisal of industrial properties for the State of Oregon, and much more. As the Forest Stewardship Plan will require extensive work with the state government, Johnson’s expertise is expected to be of great value to the team. We wish them both success.

One pressing issue is the development of a wastewater rate analysis program for the city. The last time Rockaway’s wastewater rates were adjusted was in 2009. At present, the costs of processing wastewater exceed the revenue taken in by the city. A Zoom presentation by wastewater analysis company HDR listed rates for eleven cities on the northern Oregon Coast. Rockaway Beach is 4th lowest, at $50.80 per month. The range runs from a low of $34.86/month in Astoria to a high of $92.68 in Tillamook.

During the meeting, Mayor McNeilly explained that in the coming months, wastewater processing costs would exceed the revenue from city rate payers. He went on to say that other city funds cannot be used to cover the additional cost, which makes the current analysis of wastewater rates a necessity.

One question that came up involved the term “customer classes” used by HDR. This refers to the difference in cost between processing wastewater for a single-family home versus a commercial establishment, especially restaurants and food-service businesses. A commercial kitchen, it was explained, produces far more wastewater and can require more processing, due to food waste, dishwasher effluent and other requirements due to the number of customers during a typical day.

The process of rate analysis will take several months. HDR is planning to provide a draft report sometime in August, which will be followed by public outreach from September through November. The final results will be presented to city council in December 2025 for consideration of new rates for January 2026.

At this point, it has not yet been decided whether to have town-hall type meetings as we have done for other issues, but they have been suggested, if not decided upon. You can expect to see other communications during this time, from bill inserts explaining the change, to social media posts, articles in the city newsletter and more. I am planning to cover proposed changes in detail in a future column.

Other city council decisions: as expected, the council voted unanimously to approve Oregon Department of Transportation’s speed limit change from 30 to 20 mph in the downtown corridor. This will extend roughly from the Little White Church at the south to Dollar General at the north.

We learned that the recent speed limit change in Nehalem was motivated by an accident between a pedestrian and a motor vehicle several months ago. It is hoped that the change will prevent a similar accident from happening in Rockaway.

Community begins work on Salmonberry Trail in Wheeler

WILL CHAPPELL
Headlight Editor

Community members gathered at Wheeler’s waterfront park on July 12, for a celebration of the Salmon-berry Trail project, culminating in a groundbreaking for a .6-mile stretch of trail in the city.

The event featured guided walks, history talks, live music, events for kids and more, and Wheeler Mayor Denise Donohue told the crowd that the planned trail will be transformative for the city.

“This trail represents a new era for us,” Donohue said, “more tourism, more recreation, more connection, more vitality. It honors our past while creating a new normal, a more vibrant, walkable, welcoming future.”

Oregon’s Recycling System is Getting an Upgrade—Here’s What You Need to Know!

Oregon’s Plastic Pollution and Recycling Modernization Act (RMA) will improve recycling. It will create a new system that shares the cost of recycling. Local governments, recycling companies, and the producers of packaging and paper products will all help fund recycling programs.

You may not see changes to your recycling service right away. But we want to tell you about some upcoming improvements!

What You Can Expect

- Expect changes to your recycling list in the next few years. The facilities that sort your recycling are upgrading to improve sorting.
- You’ll receive simple recycling information. This will help you recycle with confidence.
- Recycling facilities will have more tracking and transparency. This will help ensure your recyclables find a new life.

Why This Matters

The RMA aims to improve recycling by bringing consistency, transparency, and new funding to the system. This new system is designed to be easier, more effective, and trustworthy, no matter where you live in Oregon.

What Can You Do?

- Keep recycling! Every time you recycle correctly, you make a difference.
- Visit our website www.tillamookcounty.gov/solid-waste to stay informed about local recycling updates and learn how you can help reduce waste in our community.
- Tillamook County is working to facilitate the collection of more materials at the transfer stations by the end of 2025.

We’re excited about what’s coming - Let’s recycle better, together!

82-mile trail connecting Banks in Washington County with Tillamook County, via the disused Port of Tillamook Bay railroad line between the two cities, which fell into disuse after major damage in a 2007 storm. Work is already under way on a section of trail in Washington County between Manning and Stub Stewart State Park, but the Wheeler project is the first to begin on the coast and is set to be the first completed.

Construction of Wheeler's trail will begin with the .6-mile segment from the Oregon Coast Scenic Railroad Station in downtown to Bott's Marsh, just north of the city. The trail will run adjacent to the rail line on the bayside with a gravel surface and eventually be extended to the south end of town.

At the event to celebrate the project's beginning, volunteers for the Salmonberry Trail Foundation, which supports the trail, and other community groups staffed tables with information about the trail and led walks down the train tracks to Bott's Marsh. There were also craft activities for kids, live music, train locomotive tours, presentations on area history and more.

At the groundbreaking ceremony, Donohue welcomed the crowd, while Rockaway Beach Mayor Charles McNeilly, State Senator Suzanne Weber and Tillamook County Commissioner Mary Faith

Bell also spoke.

All were enthusiastic about the beginning of work on the trail on the coast, highlighting its positive potential impacts for local recreation, health and tourism opportunities.

"It's going to be game changing for mental and physical health. It's going to be game changing for economic success," Weber said. "We're going to be bringing people here from all over the world and they're going to see what you have here, all the wonderful things in your environment."

The trail segment has received a $62,000 grant from the Tillamook Coast Visitor's Association to support the cost of construction. Work is scheduled to begin in late August and finish by the end of November.

Grand Marshal

Karl Morris,
Honorary Grand Marshal

Garibaldi Days parade marshalls announced

Toby was born in 1957 in Tillamook and lived most of his life in Garibaldi when it was filled with loggers, mill workers and fishermen. Attending Garibaldi Grade School and Neahkahnie Middle and High School, he was well known for his abilities in track and football. During high school, he worked for three summers at the Port of Garibaldi when his uncle Ben was the Harbor Master. His father was Garibaldi's Chief of Police for 22 years, working nights on duty and building homes during the day with Toby's assistance.

After high school, he worked in the woods for two years followed by three years at United Electronics Institute (now known as ITT). In 1984 he started JLT Construction and is officially retired as of last month. Anywhere you go in town, Toby has a hand in some of the construction and remodeling you see. From the subdivision at Arbor View and two apartment complexes to remodeling Parkside Restaurant in 30 days while doing construction projects for the Port, City and school district in earlier years. Other remodeling includes the initial City Hall remodel, the old Coast Guard station, Dairy Queen in 1990, and three phases of the Garibaldi Museum. He built the Chevron station and remodeled it ten years later. The old Miller's Seafood and Lounge was not only built by Toby, but he also got the contract for demolition. Where the current JLT office stands, he purchased the shop from Wayne Sours in 1992 and remodeled it to add an office and showroom.

Toby was active in the community for over 6 years on the city council where he helped with the first county contract with the Sheriff's Department, reunited the Fire Department and served as the Public Works liaison. He also spent 8 years on the Planning Commission.

Now that he's retired, he enjoys spending his time fishing, hunting, working in the greenhouse and garden, and taking care of their farm animals. He also enjoys spending more time traveling with his wife of 25 years, Theresa, and seeing his five children and six grandchildren.

The Honorary Grand Marshal for 2025 is Karl Morris, a teacher that started his first teaching job in 1957 as a seventh grade Home Room and PE teacher in Garibaldi. Back then, each of the five cities in North Tillamook County had their own school district. In his 37-year teaching career, 27 years would be spent in the Garibaldi and Neahkahnie School Districts. When the consolidated school district was formed in the 1960s, he taught sixth through eighth grade math and then social studies at Neahkahnie.

He worked as a summer relief teacher at Camp Tillamook at the old barracks in Tillamook. In 1979, he applied for a position at Camp Florence, and he was surprised at the interview by an interview panel of his former coworkers from Camp Tillamook! He spent nearly ten years in Florence, returning to Neahkahnie in 1988.

Mr. Morris was drafted June 5, 1953, where he served for two years in the Army as a squad leader in a heavy mortar company of the Fourth Infantry division in Germany. When he got out, he finished college at Linfield in McMinnville, Oregon. In 1957, he moved to Garibaldi with his wife Dee and nine-month-old son Steven.

Karl and Delores (Dee) Morris just celebrated their 70th anniversary on June 26, 2025. They have four sons (Steve, Andrew, Leo and Vince), six grandchildren and seven great-grandchildren (with another one arriving soon). Karl says it is such a treasure to bump into his students, which the Morris couple refers to as "our kids."

Silent auction benefits Garibaldi Boathouse

The Garibaldi Cultural Heritage Initiative is sponsoring a silent auction during this year's Garibaldi Days with proceeds going to the upkeep and maintenance of historic 1936 Coast Guard Boathouse. The auction runs from noon until 4 p.m. on Saturday, July 26 at the Berkshire-Hathaway Real Estate Office at 406 Garibaldi Avenue.

A private preview party for the auction will be held from 5 to 7 p.m. on Friday, with catered hors d'oeuvres and libations. Guests will be able to peruse the available items and start bidding that evening. The preview party is hosted by Jake Rzuczek and Carla Albright.

Some of the auction items include fishing bundles of rods and reels, men's raingear, Tillamook Creamery vintage baskets, cow-related collections, fish art and maritime items amassed by former Garibaldi Maritime Museum Director Anna Rzuczek. Also on offer is the last wooden bench handcrafted by Gary Albright before his passing in 2023. But there is so much more. An online catalog can be viewed at garibaldiboathouse.com. The auction will close promptly at 4 p.m. on Saturday.

Auction organizer Valerie Schumann said, "We are so pleased to be able to honor the memories of long-time supporters of the boathouse Anna and Gary by displaying their work and collections. They were both important contributors in our Tillamook County community."

For more information or to purchase tickets, contact Valerie at vschumann@bhhsnw.com or 503.812.8423.
