Join us at the Oregon Coast in September, the weekend after Labor Day, for an intimate Seafood and Spirits Festival hosted by the Port of Garibaldi and presented by Visit Tillamook Coast!

This inaugural event was created with the vision to educate, bring awareness, and highlight the abundance of fresh seafood in our local community. This 3-day event will be an immersive experience where our guests can not only sample Oregon spirits, but also taste freshly harvested local seafood like oysters, seaweed and mussels. The event will feature local Oregon spirit, wine and cider vendors who will be selling samples, glasses, canned cocktails and/or bottles to-go of their products. There will also be other seafood centric vendors selling their food, art, products, and wares.

Our main stage will have live musical performances by Chad Rupp and the Sugar Roots, N.E. DayNow, Mercury Coast, North County Blues, Katelyn Convery Band, Scott Casey and the Unsung Heroes, Ronni Kay and Lauren Sheehan & Great Auntie Lo Band.

Our demo stage will be jam packed with educational demonstrations and seafood sampling by local seafood experts and chefs each day to include fish filleting, oyster shucking, seaweed and mussel cooking, crab cleaning and cracking and a tuna cooking demonstration. Check out our schedule of events for more info.

Tickets are available here: <https://aftontickets.com/POGSeafood-Fest>

The Port of Garibaldi Seafood and Spirits Festival is supported, in part, by a grant funded by Transient Lodging Tax dollars through Tillamook Coast Visitors Association. Fish With Lips

The Fish with Lips art display at the Garibaldi Maritime Museum is Saturday, Sept. 2 from 11 a.m. - 2 p.m.

Fourty handmade fish created for the Seafood and Spirits Festival will be on display and raffled off during event. Come get a sneak peek and a chance to take one home!

This crazy idea was hatched when event planner Laura Schmidt started organizing the Seafood and Spirits Festival being held at the Port of Garibaldi. We decided it would be fun to decorate the venue with something unique. After sending Laura pictures of "smoking fish" (literally!) we decided it might not be appropriate for the event so eventually it morphed into paper mache fish with lips! The next thing that happened was I ended up with a handful of very creative women working in my garage for the next 6 months. We ended up with 80 fabulous fish with lips which will be raffled September 8-10 with the proceeds going to the Garibaldi Cultural Heritage Initiative which supports our historic U.S. Coast Guard Boathouse.

Current and former members of the Tillamook Library Foundation cutting the ribbon on the stage to open the new Maxwell Library Park.

Ribbon cut at new library park

WILL CHAPPELL
Headlight Editor

A group of some 50 residents gathered on Sunday, August 20, to celebrate the opening of the new Maxwell Library Park adjacent to the main branch of the Tillamook Library in downtown Tillamook.

The park was the vision of Stu and Clarice Maxwell, longtime community volunteers, who also made the park's creation a reality with a bequest from their estate.

"We are here because two people, Stu and Clarice Maxwell, were visionaries," said Ruth LaFrance, president of the Tillamook Library Foundation.

Before their passing in 2014, the couple envisioned a new park that would serve as a gathering place for the people of Tillamook County. When they passed, they bequeathed over $130,000 from their estate to the library foundation, which purchased the lot on Third Street west of the library's main branch in October 2014.

The foundation then worked on crafting plans for the park with the same architect who had designed the main branch building, Richard Turi. Turi's designs incorporated the three elements the Maxwells had wanted to include in the park: a fountain, a place for quiet contemplation and a stage with seating area for community events.

Over the years following the property purchase, the project came together with help from a wide range of sources. Funding came from grants from the county government's transient lodging tax revenues, the Tillamook Urban Renewal Association, private donations, bookstore sales at the foundation's main branch location and several private foundation grants. More than 30 local businesses also contributed to the construction effort.

"Maxwell Park has always been seen as a park by the people of Tillamook County for the people of Tillamook County," LaFrance said.

The new park came in with a total budget of $322,000 and ticked each of the desired elements off the Maxwells' checklist. There is a fountain, featuring two children under an umbrella that rains on them, a contemplative area with benches nestled in the shade and a stage with a large seating area.

In addition to LaFrance, Tillamook County Library Director Don Allgeier, Nestucca Valley School District Superintendent Misty Wharton, Tillamook County Commissioner Erin Skaar and State Library of Oregon Program Manager Buzzy Nielsen spoke before the ribbon cutting.

Wharton said that the new park was a great example of what civic minded individuals could initiate in a community.

Skaar said that the community involvement in the park's construction were a great example of the interconnectedness of Tillamook residents. "The common underpinnings and goals of this space are part of what holds our community together," Skaar said.

Nielsen said that Tillamook's new park joined at least 25 others across the state that had been added to libraries. Nielsen said that the parks had helped those other communities to create synergies between citizens and served as a literal public square.

Allgeier said that he was happy to see the park open and that it had been a great project to introduce him to the library after his arrival last year.

"I'm filled with gratitude today," Allgeier said, "It's been a pleasure to work in this system and see this park and stage develop."

WILL CHAPPELL
Headlight Editor

Senator Ron Wyden attended a lunch meeting at the Tillamook County Creamery Association (TCCA) board members who own dairy farms, trucking company representatives, and creamery staff to discuss how he could help to promote agriculture in Oregon.

At the creamery, Wyden sat down with Tillamook County Creamery Association (TCCA) board members who own dairy farms, trucking company representatives, and creamery staff to discuss how he could help to promote agriculture in Oregon.

The visit was part of the fact-finding process that Wyden is going through in advance of Business Oregon’s annual December conference, at which the organization crafts policy proposals with the help of legislators.

Last year’s conference emphasized advancing the semiconductor industry in Oregon, yielding policy proposals that helped secure a new Intel microchip manufacturing facility in Washington County.

Wyden said that with work on a new farm bill set to begin next year in Washington, he hopes this year’s conference will give him a good plan to support Oregon farmers and those in related industries in that bill.

Wyden started the meeting by acknowledging the federal issue of most pressing concern to most farmers and landowners in Tillamook County: the impending update to the Federal Emergency Management Agency’s (FEMA) flood insurance plan.

The proposed updates to the plan would require counties to institute new floodplain development regulations requiring no net loss of floodplain functions to protect fish habitat. The proposed updates drew concern from more than a hundred Tillamook residents at a May meeting and the county’s government has now been included as a participating agency in the process.

Wyden said that he was not going to take legislative action to delay the plan update, as had former Congressman Peter DeFazio on several occasions. Wyden said that instead he was committed to making sure that FEMA allow state and local governments options in how they meet the new standards.

“When you make those judgments, you need to give state and local communities flexibility on how to get there,” Wyden said.

Several of the dairymen present at the meeting pushed Wyden further on this point. They said they felt the proposed updates did not consider the years of work residents and the county government have done to protect and restore fish passage, pointing specifically to the Salmon Superhighway project in South Tillamook County.

Wyden said that he had been involved with the Salmon Superhighway since its inception and was aware of the good work they were doing to increase fish passage. He said that he was committed to ensuring that FEMA took those types of projects into account when developing the new plan and that his team would reach out shortly to learn more about the dairymen’s efforts.

Another challenge highlighted by those at the meeting was the dearth of housing in Tillamook County. They said that their employees were not eligible for low-income or workforce housing projects subsidized by government programs, creating staffing difficulties.

Wyden said that he appreciated this problem and had seen it in other communities across the state and nation, leading him to begin working on middle income housing tax credits for developers.

Also putting pressure on the labor pool in Tillamook County are immigration related issues, according to the farmers. They said that many, if not most, farms in the county relied on undocumented migrants for labor. They said that with a consistent, non-seasonal labor demand, they were unable to participate in the H-2A visa program for temporary agricultural workers and that they were in favor of reforms to expand its availability.

Wyden said that he would similarly favor expanding the program and mentioned resolving the status of undocumented arrivals who had arrived as children. “Our country is better and stronger with immigration,” Wyden said.

The farmers at the meeting also mentioned their desire to see programs promoting alternative energy on farms expanded. They said that they saw California’s Renewable Energy for Agriculture Program as a good model for helping farms implement new technologies.

Several mentioned that while tax credits for installations were helpful, in many instances the initial outlay to qualify for the credits outstripped small farms’ budgets.

Wyden thanked the meeting’s attendees for their feedback and said that he looked forward to continuing the conversation in advance of the December conference.

When stored, the assembly point fits into two 20-foot Conex storage containers that sit near the port’s helipad.

When assembled, the facility consists of a command center, mess hall, medical tent, shower and toilet tents, and dormitory tents that can sleep eight people on foldable cots.

A communications trailer for the assembly point will be stored at the sheriff’s department, which is located on a property near the containers. It is capable of operating using cell towers or satellites for data and creating its own cellular signal. It will allow the assembly point to communicate with state and federal authorities and reconnect survivors with loved ones in the wake of an emergency.

Medical services available at the assembly point will be limited, focusing on triaging patients and arranging transport to medical facilities. Similarly, visitors to the area will be able to arrange evacuation at the assembly point.

In the aftermath of a maximum Cascadia zone subduction event, communities across Tillamook County will be isolated by damaged bridges and roads. Those in need of medical services or evacuation will be ferried from around Tillamook County to the airport in small helicopters, before larger helicopters transport groups onward to the Willamette Valley.

Tillamook received the first of its kind kit thanks to strong local partnerships that smoothed the process for the Oregon Department of Human Services (ODHS).

Tillamook’s Board of County Commissioners partnered with the Port of Tillamook Bay and Nearspace Corporation, which is headquartered at the port, to bring the containers to the port.

Another important factor in the decision was that Tillamook’s Airport is expected to be the only airport on the coast to survive a maximum Cascadia subduction zone event. This led to the airport’s designation as the emergency supply distribution point for the coast by the state earlier this year. Nearspace is currently developing drones that will facilitate that distribution.

The assembly drill was carried out to test the capabilities of the assembly point in real world conditions and train local volunteers and officials on how to deploy the kit, which will be their responsibility in emergent situations.

Officials from ODHS arrived on Tuesday for the event labeled Able Readiness 4. They were joined by a large group of volunteers from emergency preparedness groups and fire departments across the county. With the large turnout, the group was able to put up the assembly point in three hours, less than half the expected time.

The group enjoyed a lunch of meals ready to eat before training exercises in the afternoon. In the evening, Rogue Food unites catered a hot dinner, before 38 people spent the night in the dormitory tents.

On Wednesday morning, the assembly point hosted a board of county commissioners meeting to test the communications capabilities of the facility. The meeting was interrupted several times by drone tests being conducted by Nearspace and generator noise, but the commissioners were able to complete their business and broadcast the meeting.

ODHS Director Fariborz Pakseresht attended the commissioners meeting and gave a presentation on the assembly point and ODHS’s emergency management functions.

Pakseresht said that after the 2020 wildfires in the state had caught the department “flatfooted,” they had rededicated themselves to their emergency response and recovery missions. Tillamook’s assembly point is just the first that ODHS plans to deploy in communities across the state, with the next slated for Lincoln County to be stationed at the Siletz Bay State Airport.

Pakseresht thanked the Tillamook County Commissioners for their dedication to emergency preparedness and said that other communities in the state needed a similar sense of urgency.

“Today’s environment requires a different level of awareness and preparation than 20 years ago,” said Pakseresht.

After the commissioners’ meeting and a hot lunch, the volunteers disassembled the point, packed it into its storage crates and redeposited those in the Conex containers. OREM staff will check on the contents of the containers each month to ensure that supplies are replaced upon expiration.

Tillamook County Director of Emergency Management Randy Thorpe said that the event had been a success and that he wanted to repeat the drill in the future, hopefully during more inclement weather.

Commissioners, staff and media crowded into the mess hall tent for Wednesday’s meeting, where Fariborz Pakseresht addressed the board.

Commissioners focus on preparedness at meeting at port

WILL CHAPPELL
Headlight Editor

Tillamook’s Board of County Commissioners met in a tent at the Port of Tillamook Bay on August 23 for their regular meeting as part of an emergency assembly point drill.

At the meeting, commissioners recognized September as “National Emergency Preparedness Month” in Tillamook County and gave updates on the replacement of retiring County Clerk Tassi O’Neil and the water situation in the county.

The commissioners were invited to host their meeting at the assembly point by the Oregon Department of Human Services (ODHS), which was responsible for placing the Conex containers containing the assembly point at the port. Officials from the department wanted to use the commissioners’ meeting as an opportunity to test the communications functions of the assembly point that will be critical in emergent events.

The meeting was held in the four, joined 18-by-16-foot tents that served as the mess hall during the rest of the drill. The confines were cozier than the commissioner’s usual courthouse meeting room and drone and generator noise interrupted the meeting on several occasions, but commissioners were nonetheless able to complete and broadcast their meeting.

The meeting started with a presentation from ODHS Director Fariborz Pakseresht, who thanked the commissioners for their support for the department’s Office of Resiliency and Emergency Management (OREM), which was responsible for the assembly point’s deployment.

Real-world drills like the one at the Port of Tillamook Bay are invaluable compared to tabletop exercises when it comes to preparing for disasters, according to Pakseresht. He said that his department had been caught “flatfooted” during the 2020 wildfires in the state, leading to a reevaluation of their operations.

Pakseresht said that OREM now has 50 staff and they are working to deploy more emergency assembly point kits like the one in Tillamook to other Oregon counties, with Lincoln up next.

Commissioner Erin Skaar updated the public on the process to replace County Clerk Tassi O’Neil, who is retiring at the end of August after 33 years in the clerk’s office. Unlike the replacement process for retiring Commissioner David Yamamoto, which will include public feedback and deliberations, the one to replace O’Neil will be more straightforward, according to Skaar.

Skaar said that the board plans to appoint O’Neil’s deputy clerk, Christy Biggs, to fill the position until voters choose a permanent replacement in next November’s election. Skaar explained that Biggs has been trained and certified for the duties required of county clerk and is prepared to take over the job and oversee next year’s elections.

Skaar also addressed the low water levels that are causing concern across the county. Several cities including Tillamook, Rockaway Beach and Nehalem have asked their residents to begin voluntarily limiting their water usage, while several well users have contacted the county after their wells ran dry, according to Skaar.

Skaar said that residents with dry wells should contact Tillamook County Emergency Director Randy Thorpe, who could connect them with water delivery programs available through the state’s Office of Resilience and Emergency Management. Thorpe’s email address is rthorpe@co.tillamook.or.us.

Tillamook City Council approves paving contract for Fifth Street

WILL CHAPPELL
Headlight Editor

Tillamook’s City Council approved a bid of $95,000 from SC Paving Company to install new ADA compliant crossings at the intersection of Fifth Street and Stillwell Avenue and to repave Fifth Street from that intersection to Douglas Avenue on August 21.

The council also approved the purchase of a new streetsweeper, approved a liquor license for the YMCA to continue operations at the Tillamook Bowling Lanes and approved a permit fee reduction for an expansion to the food bank located at Tillamook United Methodist Church.

Hopkins absences questioned

The meeting began with some controversy during roll call, as Councilor Rebekah Hopkins was absent for the second straight council meeting. Councilor Nick Torres questioned Hopkins’s repeated absences from meetings this year and said that he believed the council should consider removing her.

Councilor Doug Henson chimed in in support of Torres, noting that the city’s charter said that the council needed to approve absences of members. Henson said that the charter said that two unexcused absences from council meetings or thirty consecutive days of absence from meetings allowed for the council to call for a vote on removal.

However, Henson noted that in practice the mayor had been solely responsible for excusing councilors’ absences, which Mayor Aaron Burris had done for Hopkins’s previous absences.

City Manager Nathan George confirmed that this had been the practice but said that he had consulted with the city’s counsel about the process. George said that since the charter gives oversight of absences to councilors, it was within their power to change the past practice of designating that power to the mayor. George said that if the council wished to change the process, the city’s attorney had suggested holding a special meeting to clarify the new method.

Torres said that he would like to see the oversight returned to council and requested that the August 21 meeting be counted as Hopkins’s first unexcused absence. The rest of the council concurred and George said that he would schedule a special meeting with the city’s attorney.

The issue had previously been breached when Hopkins missed the council’s regular meeting on June 20, after departing prior to the start of the meeting on June 5. At the June 20 meeting, the council had voted to excuse the absence without addressing the underlying policy.

At the council’s meeting on July 3, Hopkins questioned that vote, saying she felt a different standard had been applied to her absences. Hopkins said that she had been dealing with medical issues and questioned the privacy implications of being asked to explain her absences. She also said that she felt targeted by other councilors who might want her off the council and mentioned pursuing legal remedies should the situation progress.

Paving contract approved

Paving on Fifth Street will begin shortly to complete work before the arrival of wet weather. SC Paving Company submitted the low bid for the work, funding for which is coming from the Oregon Department of Transportation’s small city allotment.

The project has a total cost of around $118,000, with the allotment contributing $100,000, and the city chipping in the remainder. The $23,000 not being used for paving is dedicated to constructing the upgraded crossings at the intersection of Fifth and Stillwell.

Tillamook Project Manager Madelyn Orton said that the contractor will pave as far west on Fifth Street from Stillwell Avenue as possible with the approved budget, expecting to make it to at least Douglas Avenue and, hopefully, closer to Cedar Avenue. The work will begin on August 29, and is expected to be completed by September 8.

YMCA approved for bowling center liquor license

Liquor license approval for the YMCA to continue offering alcohol at the Tillamook Lanes came as part of the YMCA’s purchase of the facility, set to close on August 31.

Tillamook YMCA Director Kaylan Sisco appeared at the meeting and told the council that the YMCA was purchasing the facility to bolster its offerings to community youth but remained committed to serving the adult bowlers of Tillamook.

Sisco said that the YMCA plans to upgrade the bowling center and offer free bowling and other activities to kids in the afterschool hours. Sisco said that the center is stopping operations under its current owners, Dennis and Tanya Wilks, on August 26, and that the Wilks will be helping the Y to begin operations in the following weeks. Sisco said that alcohol would only be served at times when children were not present.

The bowling center’s proximity to both Tillamook Junior High School and East Elementary led Sisco to decide to delay a planned new building adjacent to the YMCA’s current facility, in favor of purchasing the lanes when he saw they were on the market earlier this year.

Food Bank permitting fees reduced

The council also approved a permit fee reduction from $1,600 to $800 for an expansion to the food bank at the United Methodist Church on 12th Street in Tillamook. A representative from the food bank said that the plan was to add a covered pull-through to allow volunteers to stay dry while handing off meals.

George said that the city’s budget could support the fee reduction and that he recommended making such reductions for nonprofits serving the community and other governmental organizations seeking permits in Tillamook. Burris noted that he had been to the food bank before and that they did good work, and the council unanimously approved the fee reduction.

Other business and veterans’ memorial update

Council approved a loan agreement for a new streetsweeper that will cost a total of $238,000, to be repaid over five years. The public works department is also trading in the city’s current street sweeper for a credit of $50,000 against the cost. The new streetsweeper will be delivered early next year, with the first loan payment due in August.

The council also approved an update to the city’s land use fee structure, bringing those fees in line with Oregon requirements that they not exceed the cost of employee time spent on reviews and other activities.

Finally, Henson delivered an update on the veterans’ memorial that he is working to construct in the city-owned lot between Pacific Avenue, Main Avenue and First Street in downtown Tillamook. Henson said that he has now reached his fundraising goal of $200,000 and that supplies for construction have been ordered and will be delivered early next year.

Henson said that he expects construction to be completed by late summer next year and thanked the project’s supporters, with a special mention to Terry Phillips of North Coast Lawn, who has committed to donating landscaping services for the new memorial.

discriminated against job applicants, and who demanded a high salary while on poor performance work plan. These claims can be verified.

While mayor, there were efforts to deny me the responsibilities and privileges of the office that previous mayors enjoyed, like the mayor’s choice of a parade Grand Marshal.

“Someone has to stop him.” This battle cry led to real concerns for my safety and that of my family. A man with known mental health problems stalked my house and constantly harassed me. He was weaponized by recall organizers to do this hoping I would quit like Hyams and Johnston, as he harassed them.

I never thought I’d have to install home security cameras and get the sheriff involved. I was warned by several residents, neighboring city officials and a newspaper editor that it was “unsafe” for me due to stirred up bigotry and prejudice by recall organizers. They will say this is not true, but there’s clear proof.

With all this venomous hate, especially from Judy Riggs and Laurie Wandell, who lost in the last election, I’ve come to the conclusion that even if I survive a recall, it will not stop them from continuing to harass and bully me more.

Because I care more about the well-being of my city, I have made the difficult but thoughtful decision to resign as mayor of the City of Garibaldi effective September 1, 2023. I apologize to my supporters who I hope will understand I can’t take any more of their poisonous lies and hate.

I want it very clear; they did not win. My choice has more to do with sparing residents - all of whom I consider my neighbors - from further ugliness and mudslinging. And I must admit, I’m frustrated and tired of the constant harassment while I’m trying to help. I can only hope they do not target other Council members who represent what is good in our city.

My alerting residents to the City’s serious financial problems is something I hope people will remember and thank me for.

It has been an honor to serve the good friendly people of Garibaldi, my home.

Turn visiting into volunteerism through learning and stewardship

TILLAMOOK, Ore. 22, Aug. 2023 — Visitors are adopting the Tillamook Coast volunteer culture with enthusiasm and initiative. Throughout the past year, the Tillamook Coast Visitors Association has made a concerted effort to build a culture of thoughtful stewards. TCVA is looking for schools, work groups, churches, community organizations and families to help care for the natural areas in the beautiful, diverse locations all along the 70-mile Tillamook Coast. Tillamook Coast Volunteer Adventures debuted this summer with two volunteer adventures: Girl Scouts Service Unit 14, Troop #45210, plan to learn about, clean up and make art from marine debris the weekend of Aug. 25-27. A group of Linfield University students and faculty will be performing stewardship projects at Alder Creek Farm in Nehalem October 7-9. “My hope is that our volunteer adventures program will help create a deeper awareness of how special this place is,” says Dan Haag, TCVA Director of Trails, Outdoor Recreation and Accessibility. “The Tillamook Coast is not just a pass-through vacation or a place to buy t-shirts. We want our visitors to understand and care about local stewardship and conservation as our residents do. The best part is, there are plenty of local non-profits that could use the volunteer help. They run on volunteer power and often can’t get to their projects.” TCVA will design a custom adventure to fit your groups’ needs, featuring itineraries of one to two and a half days. Meals, transportation, lodging and activities are included. Tools and supervision are provided by the host organization. Crews typically consist of 8-15 volunteers, as well as a TCVA staff member. If you know of a group or would like to put together a group to create your own volunteer adventure, contact Haag at 503-842-2672 or email dan@tillamookcoast.com.

TBCC Focus on CTE Programs

By DR. ROSS TOMLIN
President

Community colleges are built on partnerships. We cannot do our job well and help students without developing partnerships and working with other groups throughout our district and state. One of the key areas of partnerships critical to our mission is with our K-12 school districts. We are fortunate in Tillamook County to have three school districts and the Northwest Regional Education Service District (NWRESD) that work well together with the college to help all students at the secondary and post-secondary levels.

We have the Tillamook Education Consortium (TEC) that is made up of the three school district superintendents, high school principals, and the College President and Vice President of Instruction and Student Services. We meet monthly to review issues and topics that impact our secondary and post-secondary students in Tillamook County. We have been meeting and working closely together for many years.

TEC is now in the process of developing a strategic plan for this coming year. It will focus on coordinating our career technical (CTE) training among the three school districts and TBCC to create a seamless transfer of courses and credits from secondary to post-secondary education in fields like welding, construction and manufacturing. This partnership project will provide wonderful career opportunities for Tillamook County high school students in several different fields.

One of the exciting projects we are starting in this area is a pre-apprenticeship program in construction in partnership with Nestucca Valley School District and O’Brien Construction. This program will allow high school students to enter a pre-apprenticeship program with O’Brien and take construction classes at Nestucca Valley High School including up to 19 credit hours of dual credit college courses and up to seven stackable nationally portable credentials while in high school. After they graduate, they can enter the full apprenticeship program at TBCC and earn additional credentials that lead to an Associate of Applied Science degree.

We then plan to expand these opportunities to the other two high schools in Tillamook County. These excellent career opportunities for high school students will lead to high-paying positions after finishing an apprenticeship through high school and TBCC.

TBCC is committed to expanding opportunities in CTE beyond the apprenticeship programs. CTE programs provide students with skills in 2 years or less at TBCC to obtain a good-paying position. We ensure that new programs are sustainable and will provide good-paying jobs for years to come, both locally and in other locations throughout Oregon or the nation. We will be starting a new Registered Nurse (RN) program this coming winter and are now accepting applications for the first cohort of 16 students. We are also looking to develop other healthcare programs over the coming few years as an example of our continued commitment to CTE programs. This is just the beginning of creating more opportunities for our students over the coming years.

If you are interested in applying for the Nursing program or starting your prerequisites, please visit tillamookbaycc.edu/nursing for application information.

Celebrating New Coastal and Ocean Investments in Oregon - Part Two

STATE REPRESENTATIVE DAVID GOMBERG

Last week I detailed federal investments in climate and our coastal waters. But of course, the State of Oregon is doing our part as well.

In June, the Oregon Legislature passed a landmark Climate Resilience Budget Framework that not only invests $90 million in climate resilience efforts statewide, but will also be used to begin attracting nearly $1 billion in federal funding.

The Climate Resilience Budget Framework includes investments to help make our state's residential and commercial buildings more energy-efficient, funds to develop community-resilience hubs for emergency preparedness and funds for more robust wildfire resilience across Oregon. As well, the Framework provides continued investments in Oregon's Solar & Storage Rebate Program, the Community Renewable Energy Grant Program and the Natural & Working Lands Fund – an effort I was proud to lend my support to this legislative session in an effort to promote natural climate solutions on our working lands for biological carbon sequestration.

Over the past six months,

I sponsored and passed HB 2914 to establish a dedicated fund and program for the retrieval and disposal of abandoned and derelict vessels languishing in our state's waterways. I also led the effort to expand the successful marine reserves program on our coast. While funding did not materialize for the expansion of the marine reserves program this last legislative session, I certainly haven't given up. Moving forward, I will be communicating with the Governor's Natural Resources team to begin exploring how we can fix the missed opportunity to better support our marine reserves in 2024. I'll also be advocating for and promoting other ocean policy issues that the Ocean Policy Advisory Commission has recommended as I begin to formulate my legislative priorities for the 2024 legislative session.

I also helped advocate for a number of successful conservation, environmental, and toxic-free interests over the last two sessions, including holding fuel operators responsible for developing seismic resilience plans for their fuel storage, establishing environmental review standards for the landing of undersea network cables, funding for the study of ocean acidification and hypoxia, overhauling our state's recycling system and implementing producer responsibility rules for plastic-waste polluters. I was also very proud to lend my 'yes' vote to HB 2021 two years ago to get our state moving toward a 100% below base-line target of greenhouse gas emission by 2040.

This session, I was also proud to support and co-sponsor HB 3043, which directs the Oregon Health Authority to begin regulating potentially toxic chemicals in children's products and SB 543, which prohibits food vendors from using Styrofoam packaging for prepared food in Oregon.

I often opine that good work of global consequence is happening every day at the research hub south of Newport. If we are going to address the climate challenge, ocean warming, acidification, fishing and energy, those advances will come from Hatfield, the Marine Science Center, NOAA and PacWave. The central coast of Oregon is quickly emerging as the leading region addressing climate and changing ocean science.

As I said in the first of these two reports, new ocean-climate investments in Oregon's coast and communities demonstrate the kind of opportunities we have to fight and adapt to climate change and be better stewards of our lands and natural resources. We owe our gratitude to ocean climate action champions in our legislature and Congress who fought for these investments. Taking action gives us hope for a just and livable future where our communities and our citizens cannot just survive, but thrive, in a changing climate.

Suicide Prevention & Local Suicide Prevention Training Update

JANEANE KRONGOS

Tillamook Family Counseling Center, CPS

Each year, lives are lost due to suicide. Suicide is an intentional self-inflicted death. This cause of death is complex and is typically a result of many factors in a person's life. These factors are often referred to as risk factors. A risk factor is a condition, characteristic, or attribute that can increase the risk of a negative outcome. Examples of suicide risk factors include: a previous suicide attempt, access to lethal means, social isolation, lack of access of care, problem gambling, substance use disorder, loss of a loved one (especially by suicide), and a stigma of discussing mental health. If you would like to learn more about risk factors, I recommend the CDC's Risk and Protective Factors, this resource can be accessed on the CDC's website (www.cdc.gov).

Suicide is a leading cause of death in the United States and in Oregon. According to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC), in the year 2021, suicide was the 11th leading cause of death in the United States. The CDC's data shows that in the year 2021 there were 48,183 suicide deaths in the United States. For more information about national suicide statistics visit www.cdc.gov. According to the Oregon Health Authority (OHA), in the year 2021, suicide was the 10th leading cause of death in Oregon. OHA's Center for Health Statistics data shows that 893 Oregonians died by suicide in the year 2021. For more information the state level suicide statistics visit www.oregon.gov.

The good news is that this cause of death is preventable. One way to prevent suicide is to increase protective factors. Protective factors are a characteristic, attribute, or condition that can decrease

Many thanks to our park ranger, Simon Freeman, and fellow workers from the Oregon State Parks Dept. (OPRD) for removing the derelict boat that came ashore on Cape Meares beach earlier this month. It was not an easy task. The boat had washed ashore in the south cove, inaccessible by motor vehicle. A group in hazmat suits walked in, cut up the fiberglass boat, and took it away piece by piece over time. We appreciate your good work, Simon and crew.

A historic home in Cape Meares was dismantled this month. The old cabin on the corner of 4th and Pacific, built by Robert Winfred Watkins (father of the Bob Watkins we knew who lived in the pagoda house with his wife, Barbara), came down piece by piece...but the magnificent natural stone chimney and fireplace were left standing. I spoke with Jennelle Winter, a granddaughter of RW Watkins, and she shared some interesting history about the property with me.

Jennelle’s grandfather built the stone chimney/fireplace and the original house in the 1920s. That first home was grand, two stories high and with a full balcony. When RW and his family went to Portland for Thanksgiving, a couple of family members returned to Cape Meares early to go duck hunting. When they returned from their hunt, the entire house had burned down. The chimney/fireplace was the only thing left standing. RW tied a chain to his model A and tried to pull it down, but it wouldn’t tumble. He ended up building a smaller cabin around that stone structure. Now that the little cabin has been taken down, Jennelle and her three siblings plan to build the new house farther south on the lot and a half they own. It will be closer in size to the original house, and some flooring and siding salvaged from the old cabin will be used in the new construction. The family plans to add a balcony again off the upper floor. As for the old stone chimney/fireplace, it will be the center of an outdoor eating area. One final note: Neighbor Sally

McGee rescued several yellow irises, originally planted by Jennelle’s grandmother, before the house demolition. She will take care of them and return them to the family when it is time to work on the yard. We wish Jennelle and her siblings many wonderful family times ahead in their new vacation home.

Capt. Pete and I trekked out to Bayocean Spit August 19 to check out a report of another boat washed ashore. That boat had been removed by the time we reached the site, but we did come across something else: the Tillamook Bay Run. About 100 individuals were out on that beautiful morning, circling from the beach side to the gravel dike road. Kathy Burke, running the 5k, and Vicki Bernstein, tackling the full 10k, from Cape Meares were in the field. Author Jerry Sutherland was on site with a stack of his latest book, “Bayocean: Atlantis of Oregon.” Tillamook Coast Visitors Association gave a copy of that book to the winner of each division. Great swag, along with that prized “Tillamook Bay Run” medal and t-shirt. Congrats to all who participated.

Thanks to those who have reached out with well wishes as I have recovered this week from Covid. I am fortunate to have contracted only a mild case, made milder by a timely prescription to the antiviral therapy they’re calling Paxlovid. While the drug’s side effects proved gnarly, it nearly removed my fever, sore throat and cough. Fencepost readers may appreciate knowing that the virus can be spread to our canine and feline companions. We should avoid, petting, cuddling and kissing while contagious; pets should not sleep in the same bed with an infected individual.

Among well-wishers was Sonya Kazen, of Cloverdale. She and hubby Fred will croon original folk tunes from 6 to 8 p.m. on Wednesday, August 30 at Drift Inn in Yachats. They’ll return to Pacific City Farmer’s Market (located On Camp Street, in the library parking lot) from about 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. on Sunday, September 3, and they’ll serenade Manzanita’s Farmer’s Market, on the town’s main drag from 4 to 7 p.m. on Friday, September 8.

There are signs up in Hebo asking residents to conserve water, which is good advice for all of us as we enter a fourth month of unprecedented dry weather. Popular Mechanics suggest the following: Fix leaks and drips in plumbing. Sweep (rather than hosing off debris from walkways. Do essential outdoor watering early or late in the day, and mulch flowerbeds to contain moisture. Trade showers for baths and install aerators or flow restrictors to shower heads. Wash only full loads of dishes and laundry. And don’t leave water running as you shave or brush your teeth.

The procedure and its aftermath of recovery, rehab and physical therapy will prevent her from working the two jobs that were intended to finance Rachel’s college year, which starts next month. There is a donation jar at the bar in the Beachwood Restaurant. Donors can also arrange to help by telephone; the number is (503) 812-0528.

The Pacific City Branch of Oregon Coast Bank is collecting school supplies. They’ll accept unopened packages of any school supplies you have on hand. I met Phil Mashke during the ODOT paving project meeting at the Old Mill conference center nearly a year ago. I confess, I was one of many who thought Phil was the owner of Belladonna Beads. He spoke so passionately about the store, and the concerns and opportunities with the project that as I think back, it was an easy assumption to make.

I finally reconnected with Phil and took a deeper dive into the story of Belladonna Beads. I discovered its story was more intricate and fascinating than I heard through the grapevine. I asked how Belladonna Beads got its start and how they drew in their loyal fans. The conversation took off from there: “Kelly Siegle started the business in the Detroit area in 1994. Even then she was growing so fast that she had to keep moving to ever larger locations. She met her partner Edwin Noll in 2001 and he recruited me to sell inventory on the road to supply other bead stores in 2003. After that we actually parted ways for a while. I quickly began importing from all over the world and growing my wholesale business throughout the eastern half of the country, while Kelly and Edwin moved Belladonna to Portland in 2006. They established a great brand and a wonderful following in Portland. We reconnected around 2009 and joined forces to move to the coast in 2019. We are more like business roommates than business partners. We buy and sell to and from each other all the time. We call it ‘the endless knot.’ The plan is to trade beads back and forth until we are rich.” Then I asked them what brought them to Garibaldi, and what keeps them around: “When we were living in Portland, it seemed like we spent all our time planning trips to the coast. There are so many unique and iconic landmarks in Garibaldi. The smokestack, the G, the steam train and of course the parking. Our Portland customers are so much more likely to come all the way out to the coast than fight their way through the Portland traffic. It’s so much more rewarding to come to the coast. Everyone has a more relaxed attitude. I can’t get enough of all the bird drama in the bay, and the sunsets get more and more splendid every day.” The store is in the 3rd street area, which is subject to a loss of parking spots in the now-2025 ODOT paving project. I asked them their plans, including their recent purchase of the lot directly east of their location: “It started as an emergency rescue mission to replace the street parking that we are going to lose when ODOT resurfaces Highway 101. We will add a small lot for customers and employees, but now that I’m planning the site, I am most excited about planning my new garden and green space. I’ve noticed a shortage of proper jack-o-lantern style pumpkins in town, I’m excited to grow all kinds of ornamental gourds, and I’m also going to be building some arbors for Loofah gourd vines. I’ve noticed a grand variety of local soaps and potions up and down the coast, but I’ve not seen many locally sourced sponges. If things go according to plan, I’m hoping the “G” will stand for gourds.” Now I want some pumpkin pie. To follow up on their latest antics, check out Belladonna Beads on Facebook at <https://www.facebook.com/belladonnabeads/>. She’s back and she better not leave that long again because it was traumatic for me. She’s everybody’s favorite local librarian, June Ekborg: “On Sunday, August 20, we had a dedication for the new library park in Tillamook. This beautiful park is the result of the tireless efforts of many county residents and is a place of learning and enjoyment for all county residents. If you haven’t yet had a chance to experience the park, I encourage you to check it out. The park is located on the west side of the main branch library at 1716 Third Street in Tillamook.” “Friday, September 1, from 4 p.m. – 8 p.m., we’ll be at the Night Market with fun activities and giveaways. The Port of Garibaldi does a great job making sure there is something for everyone at their Night Markets. Hope to see you there. The Garibaldi Branch Library will be open regular hours that day.” Lastly, you know how I said if all went well, we’d have an Interim City Manager by last Monday. Well, we did. He was signed, sealed, but not yet delivered. In true Garibaldi fashion, John Schempf’s trip north was delayed by California’s first tropical storm in decades. It also affected Nevada, and with that, his route. But as of last Thursday, at 9 a.m., he was given keys to the city. The smarter Finn set up his working space. And reportedly the rest of the front office will be rounded out around the beginning of September, meaning city hall is nearly ready for walk-ins, again. And remember when I said I wouldn’t have to work the Seafood & Spirits Festival and that I could simply enjoy it? A few hours later after I pushed ‘send’ on last week post’s submission, the smarter Finn signed us up at our old volunteer gig with the Cavitts for Garibaldi Portside Bistro. As one of my old Captains during my riverboat days used to say: “Make your regrets enjoyable.”

We were delighted when the New Taste of India opened their food cart a bit north of town several years ago. I’d learned to love the cuisines of India in the 1980s and was thrilled to have an option close to home. We were happy to support them through 2020, when a food cart made social distancing easy. And we’re still happy to support them now.

In the traditional regional cuisines of India, and there are many, each dish has its own combination of spices, seasonings, and flavor elements. This is a constant source of delight to me and many who cherish traditional, regional culinary specialties—whether that means Dungeness crab and rockfish from the waters around Rockaway Beach, or heady combinations of coriander, cumin, and chili peppers from halfway across the world.

If you’re already a lover of Indian cuisine, you’ll recognize a few familiar dishes. We can’t seem to leave without an order of saag paneer ($14.95), a combination of chopped spinach leaves simmered with the traditional Indian cheese, called paneer. Like halloumi from the Mediterranean, paneer holds its shape when cooked, rather than melting like mozzarella or cheddar. It has a very mild, creamy flavor, and is a beautiful foil for the highly seasoned creamy spinach.

Mutter paneer ($14.95) is a variation on this, with green peas replacing the spinach, and saag channa ($14.95) combines spinach with chickpeas. All these dishes are cooked with onion, ginger, and garlic, and are served over a generous portion of steamed rice.

ROCKAWAY BEACH

Another of our favorite preparations here is Goa curry, available with either chickpeas ($14.95), chicken ($15.75), or lamb ($16.50). You might be familiar with the highly spiced dish containing potatoes, vindaloo, which is also from Goa; the New Taste of India serves this with chicken ($15.75) or lamb ($16.50) and a splash of vinegar.

The surprise of the Goa curry at New Taste of India: the spices are blended in a savory sauce made from coconut. The curries of Thailand, another favorite cuisine, are also typically based on coconut, but the Goa curry here is enrobed in a thick, creamy, and densely flavored sauce, whether served with chunks of lamb, chicken, or chickpeas.

Note that whatever dish you order, you’ll be asked how spicy you want it. We usually settle on medium; I used to be a serious lover of spicy food, the hotter the better, but these days medium is the right compromise for us: spicy enough that you feel the heat while stopping well short of that burning sensation.

Another regular choice for us is their biryani ($15.50 for vegetarian, $15.75 for chicken, $16.50 for lamb). This dish bears at least a structural resemblance to the Spanish paella: a savory combination of seasoned rice with onions, garlic, and ginger. Biryani uses basmati rice, the fragrant variety traditional to Indian cuisine, with a very long and delicate grain. (Spanish paella uses a shorter, plumper variety, the most popular of which is called bomba; it’s very similar to the Italian arborio used in risotto.) If you’re making Indian food at home and can’t find basmati rice, jasmine rice from Thailand has a similar texture.

The appetizers here (all $7) are delicious and go beyond the familiar samosas (a triangular pastry filled with potatoes, peas, and spices) and pakora (fresh vegetables in a chickpea batter), both served with two kinds of chutney, a spicy mint and a sweet-tart tamarind. You can also choose samosa chaat, made by layering slices of samosa with chickpeas, onions, yogurt, and the two chutneys, and papri chaat, which combines chickpeas, poppadums (crispy chips of chickpea flour), plus the chutneys, yogurt, and sliced onions.

This barely scratches the surface of the offerings from New Taste of India, with a full thirteen vegetarian selections (all $14.95). We’ve tried their channa masala, chickpeas served in a medium curry sauce, and malai kofta, vegetable balls in a creamy sauce, and it seems every time we order here, we see something else we want to try next time.

New Taste of India, 530 N. Highway 101, (503) 470-0932. Open seven days 11 a.m. – 8 p.m. Phone orders recommended, especially at dinnertime (wait times can be 30 minutes).

Tillamook County Wellness: Balancing breastfeeding with self-care

Breastfeeding is a sound method of giving your baby a healthy start in life. It is a great bonding experience for both mom and baby. However, with feedings around the clock, breastfeeding can also be taxing. When combined with other responsibilities, like caring for other children, working, and household chores, new mothers can become worn down and stressed. The time you spend breastfeeding or pumping breast milk does not have to feel like another chore. Instead, use this time to find ways to care for yourself and improve your well-being. Here are some suggestions to guide your self-care.

Meditate
Find a comfortable place to sit while breastfeeding, like your favorite spot on the couch or rocking chair. Close your eyes and breathe deeply. Let random thoughts go. If your mind begins to race, focus on your breathing. Consider lighting a scented candle or diffusing essential oils that provide a pleasant atmosphere for you to relax in.

Listen to music
Do you feel like you listen to lullabies and “Baby Shark” all day? When was the last time you played some of your favorite music and took time to genuinely enjoy it? Now is the time! Music can relax you, lift your mood, and remind you of happy times.

Watch a favorite TV show or movie
Much like music, you may be streaming children’s shows all day or not have time to watch TV at all with the new baby, let alone a movie. Being forced to sit still for the feeding or pumping gives you that time to catch up on “Bridgerton,” “The Bachelor,” or watch a favorite movie.

Read a book, listen to an audiobook or podcast
Feeding sessions during the middle of the night may not be ideal for watching screens. Instead, treat yourself to that new book you’ve been wanting to read. Too tired for your eyes to focus? Keep an audiobook or podcast downloaded that you can listen to with your headphones.

Nutrition
Busy moms constantly juggle responsibilities, and eating well for themselves can fall by the wayside. Remedy this by setting up some healthy snacks and a beverage for yourself when preparing to breastfeed. Keep some cut-up fruit, vegetables and hummus, or cheese and crackers on hand that you can easily eat while breastfeeding. Prepare a cup of tea, a glass of lemonade, or even just that bottle of water you never seem to have time to drink. You will finish your session less hungry and better hydrated.

Journal
Being a new mom is a significant change and can lead to a roller coaster of emotions. Many women find journaling helpful in their mental health journey. Writing down thoughts and feelings can be insightful in helping you understand them better. Other women enjoy journaling to document milestones they can look back on later.

Rest
Outside of your breastfeeding or pumping sessions, remember to rest. Rest is vital for physical and mental health. With a new baby, breastfeeding occurs so frequently around the clock it is hard to get more than a few hours of consistent sleep. The body is also recovering from the effort of giving birth. Your body needs rest to aid in this recovery. There is a reason your provider told you to sleep when the baby sleeps. The baby napping is not a time to ensure your house is spotless. Rest remains essential for moms who continue breastfeeding after the baby sleeps through the night. Not getting enough sleep can lead not only to fatigue but also depression. Experts recommend 7-9 hours of sleep a night. If you are napping during the day, limit the nap to no more than 15-20 minutes. Longer naps put you in deeper sleep that can make you feel sluggish when you wake up. Also, long naps can interrupt your nighttime sleep patterns.

The benefits of self-care cannot be said enough. Moms are often the “everything, everywhere, all at once” and put their well-being last. Because breastfeeding or pumping breast milk forces you to sit still, this is an ideal time to recharge and take care of yourself. Find a space away from household chaos and ask not to be interrupted. Taking time for your well-being will help you stay healthy to better care for the others in your life.

ABBY CARROLL

- 1 tube (8 oz.) refrigerated crescent rolls
- 3 medium zucchini, sliced
- 2 garlic cloves, minced
- 2 tbs. Tillamook butter
- 2 tsp. minced fresh parsley
- 1 tsp. snipped fresh dill
- ¼ tsp. salt
- ¼ tsp. pepper
- 1 ¼ cup grated Tillamook Pepper Jack cheese (divided)
- 2 eggs, lightly beaten

Separate crescent dough into eight triangles; place in a greased 9-inch pie plate with points toward the center. Press onto the bottom and up the sides of plate to form a crust; seal perforations.

In a skillet, sauté zucchini and garlic in butter. Add the parsley, dill, salt, pepper and ½ cup cheese.

Spoon into the crust. Pour eggs over top; sprinkle with remaining cheese. Cover edges loosely with foil.

Bake at 375 o for 25-30 minutes or until a knife inserted near the center comes out clean. Let stand for 5 minutes before cutting. Yield: 6 servings.

For a lighter version, turn your pie into a frittata! Remove the crescent rolls from the recipe and add your vegetable and egg mixture directly to a well-greased pan and bake as instructed.

Plan to protect threatened and endangered species in forests could face new delay

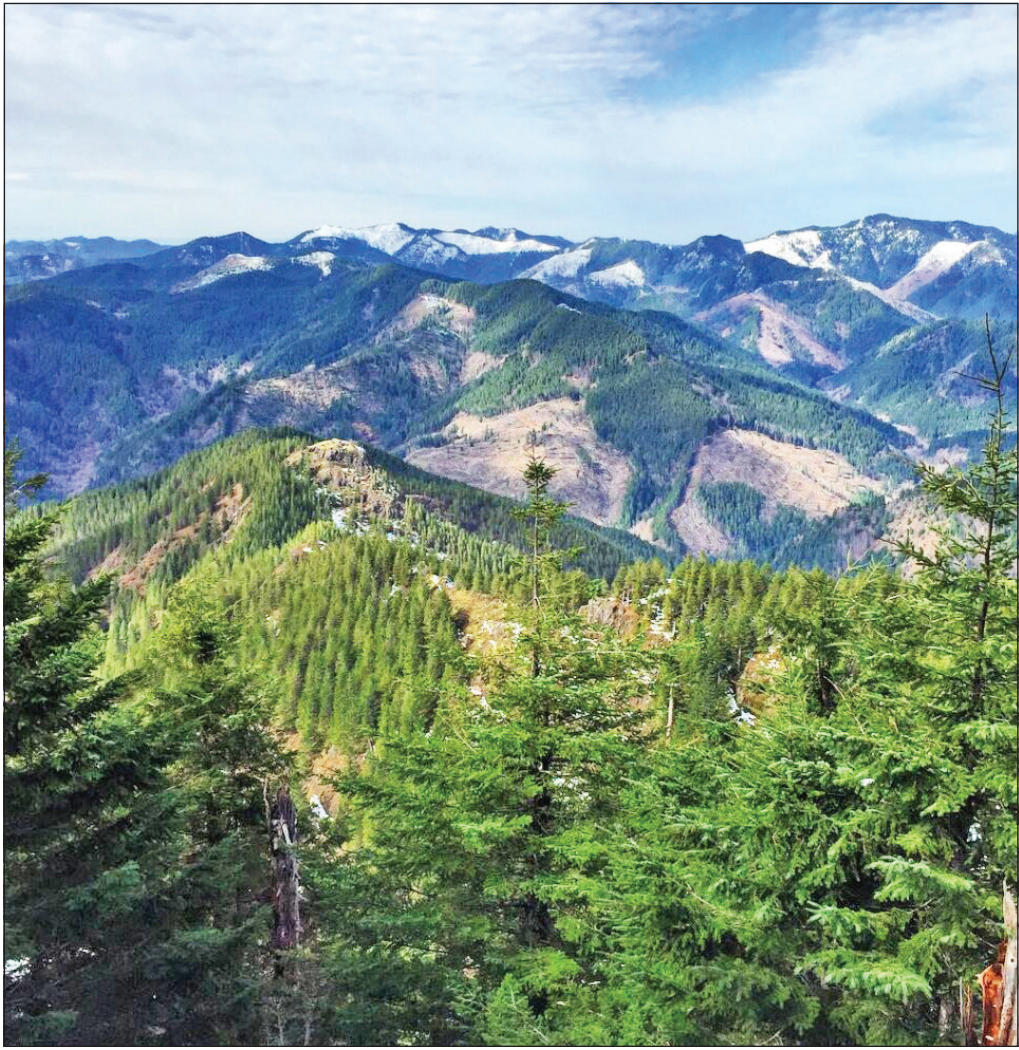

ALEX BAUMHARDT
Oregon Capital Chronicle
Headlight Herald
Guest Article

A long-delayed plan to protect threatened and endangered species from logging in Western state forests could face another setback, this time brought by the chair of the state Board of Forestry.

Jim Kelly proposed Tuesday a resolution to revise the draft Western Oregon State Forest Habitat Conservation Plan, allowing logging in some areas currently earmarked for conservation. If the resolution is passed, it could further stall years of planning and negotiation among state and federal agencies, environmentalists, and timber companies and industry groups. The seven-member, governor-appointed board will vote on Kelly’s resolution Sept. 7.

Kelly said he’s proposing changes after the Department of Forestry projected greater than expected cuts to timber harvest revenues due to the plan, which would protect 17 vulnerable fish and animal species for the next 70 years. Those revenue projections split the board, which is made up of several members with close ties to timber companies.

Kelly said revising the plan to allow for a bit more logging would preserve the best interests of all sides and get the plan over the finish line after decades of attempts.

The Tillamook State Forest as seen from the summit of King's Mountain. The forest provides critical habitat for several threatened and endangered species, but logging revenues from the forest also provide funding for critical human services in Tillamook County.

“This has been tried more than once and failed in the last 20 years,” he said, “and we’re trying to be dedicated to having this be successful.”

Those relying heavily on Oregon’s Western state forests for timber said they were relieved by the potential delay of a plan they find restrictive and that some have fought for decades.

Tyler Ernst, a lawyer for the trade association Oregon Forest & Industries Council, said the group is not opposed to a plan that would protect threatened and endangered species, but that the current plan takes too much state forest area out of production.

“We’re glad that they are expressing a commitment through this resolution to look at how they might be able to increase harvest without blowing everything up,” he said.

Environmentalists expressed frustration that a plan they see as critical to the survival of threatened and endangered species, and one they’ve advocated for decades, would continue to be stalled to preserve logging revenues for timber companies and the counties that depend on them.

Michael Lang, policy manager for the nonprofit Wild Salmon Center, said the resolution could endanger all of the work that’s been done on the plan.

“State forests have already been over-harvested,” he said. “The Board of Forestry is required by law to base decisions on the best available science, not politics.”

A final decision on the plan was originally slated for the fall of 2022. Now, the board is unlikely to decide anything before spring 2024. If Kelly’s resolution to make changes to the plan is passed, it would likely not be finalized until summer or beyond. Once finalized, the plan must be approved by the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration and the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

Thousands of acres at stake

The plan is an outgrowth of an existing plan – the Northwest Oregon State Forests Management Plan. That protects about half of the more than 630,000 acres of Western state forests managed by the Oregon Department of Forestry, but it allows the state forester to change conservation areas without agency and public input – something the new plan would change. The new plan would also make some previously logged areas off limits to logging for at least 70 years.

If approved, the new plan would protect the state from lawsuits over 17 species that are protected, or expected soon to be protected, under the Endangered Species Act. Among them are Northern spotted owls, marbled murrelets, salmon and steelhead, martens, red tree voles and torrent salamanders.

The development of the plan was accelerated following a settlement between the Oregon Department of Forestry and several conservation groups over a lawsuit alleging logging was further threatening endangered coastal coho salmon. Part of that settlement agreement included the forestry department’s assurance that the Western Oregon State Forest Habitat Conservation Plan would be passed.

Counties weigh in

The bulk of Western state forests are in northwest Oregon’s Tillamook and Clatsop counties, which rely on timber harvest revenues to fund portions of public services such as schools and police departments. Leaders in both counties have fought the new habitat conservation plan as drafted, saying it would gut their budgets. Timber revenues also fund a large portion of the budget for the Oregon Department of Forestry, which would need to find new revenue to support its work.

State leaders considered a proposal during the most recent Legislative session that would have created a task force to figure out how to untwine county and agency funding from timber revenue. Senate Bill 90 ultimately died in the Senate Natural Resources Committee.

Two possible outcomes

If the Board of Forestry votes down Kelly’s resolution Sept. 7, the timeline for passing the habitat conservation plan by spring won’t be affected. Its last step would be consideration by the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration and the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, which would need to decide whether the plan protects the threatened and endangered species.

If so, the agencies would issue “incidental take permits” shielding the state and private companies from lawsuits under the Endangered Species Act.

If the board votes in favor of Kelly’s resolution, it would send the plan back to the state forestry department for revisions, boosting the amount of logging that can be done in some conservation areas and delaying a final vote on the plan by several months, Kelly said.

Hangar B’s construction began in October 1942, and was completed on August 15, 1943. Hangar A burned down in August 1992, after straw being stored in the hangar caught fire, incinerating the entire structure.

Following the war, Hangar B was home to Diamond Lumber and later Aerolift, Inc., before the Tillamook Air Museum opened its doors in 1994, using part of the hangar for its home. The museum was originally operated by the Port of Tillamook Bay until the Erickson Group took over operations between 2000 and 2015 before allowing its lease to expire and management responsibilities to revert to the port.

Today, Hangar B houses the Tillamook Air Museum and is the only remaining World War II blimp hangar that is accessible to the public, with others having been demolished or transferred to private ownership. In addition to housing the museum, Stimson Lumber uses part of the hangar to store wood milled in its facility at the port and residents lease spaces to store recreational vehicles in another. Hangar B is on the National Register of Historic Places and was recently named an official historic landmark by the Tillamook Board of County Commissioners.

FOTAM was founded in 2017 as a 501(c)3 nonprofit organization dedicated to preserving the air museum and hangar which house it. While the hangar brings a $50,000 annual profit to the port, its roof is in need of extensive maintenance, estimated to cost around $1.5 million, which FOTAM is helping to raise.

On August 19, FOTAM celebrated the 80th anniversary of the hangar’s opening while simultaneously raising funds for and awareness of the needed repairs.

Festivities kicked off at 10 a.m. as the museum opened with free admission for members of the public to take in its collection of aircraft and memorabilia. Local vendors and organizations like the Tillamook Veterans of Foreign Wars, the Tillamook County Composite Squadron and Heroes on the Water North Oregon Coast Branch set up inside the museum while bands performed, and balloon animals and face painting were available for the kids.

An hour after those activities had concluded, attendees started arriving for the 1940s themed fundraising gala, hosted inside the museum’s display tent inside the hangar. More than 200 people bought tickets for the gala and got into the spirit of the evening, donning zoot suits, flapper dresses and other era-appropriate attire for the gala.

Local businesses stepped up with contributions for a silent auction, with lots available ranging from flying lessons courtesy of Farrier Aviation to a four-person tour and tasting from the Tillamook Creamery.

Other items up for bid were passes for the Oregon Coast Scenic Railroad and to the Garibaldi Seafood and Spirits festival, two lumber units from Hampton Lumber, gift baskets from Pelican Brewery, Salty Raven, North Coast Food Roots and Umpqua bank and an assortment of aviation themed models.

The evening began with a dinner catered by Fathead BBQ, which is located in the hangar’s lobby. The menu was inspired by an original menu served to service members at Naval Air Station Tillamook Bay during World War !! and started with spam and pea salad phyllo cups, followed by rockfish and smoked tri tip with cupcakes for dessert.

After dinner, a full swing band performed 1940s music as revelers danced the Lindy Hop and Charleston, with silent auction winners announced during a break between sets.

Revelers danced the night away to big band music, celebrating the 1940s theme of a fundraising gala for Hangar B.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Tillamook local takes to the stage in Astoria production of MacBeth

A Tillamook County man is appearing in a theater show in Astoria during September.

Jacob Merwin plays Macduff in a production of “Macbeth.”

For Merwin, who has training in theater and sword fighting, the opportunity couldn’t be better.

“I feel there’s a real deep fulfillment doing it,” he said.

Merwin moved to Tillamook County in 2022. He works as a park ranger at Nehalem Bay State Park and at a newly opened print shop in Garibaldi.

Born and raised in upstate New York, as a young man he trained in classical theater and rapier fencing. After graduating from City University New York in Brooklyn with a bachelor’s degree in theater arts, he moved to Ireland to earn a master’s degree in theater production at the University of Galway. For two years, he performed in Irish theaters and trained in sword-fighting using a two-handed German technique.

On his return to the United States, he lived in Arizona for a while, publishing a fantasy called “Did You Read the News?” The novel is a love story set in a faraway planetary colony.

On his move to Oregon, Merwin appeared in the Riverbend Players’ production of “Twelve Angry Jurors,” his first show in three years. It has been more than a decade since his last Shakespeare production and he said was thrilled to be cast in one after such a long time. “I need to do some Shakespeare,” he said.

The show will be staged at the Ten Fifteen Theater in Astoria. It opens September 15 and runs two weekends.

The director, Sam Dinkowitz, is recent transplant to the Oregon Coast who has acted with the Oregon Shakespeare Festival in Ashland and appeared on TV shows including “Leverage” and “The Librarians.” His professional specialty is as a fight choreographer.

Macbeth tells the story of an ambitious warrior confronted by three mysterious witches who predict he will become king of Scotland. When he resorts to murder to achieve this, Macduff leads the opposition against him.

He said Merwin was a good fit. “He has a certain kind of intensity in his presence and his voice that lends itself very well to the part,” said Dinkowitz.

Because of space constraints, the play is being staged with 10 actors playing all the roles and taking part in the sword-fighting scenes. In his other roles, Merwin appears as one of the witches and a henchman who performs some of Macbeth’s crimes.

The play will be staged at the Ten Fifteen Theater at 1015 Commercial St., Astoria. Performances are 7:30 p.m. September 15-16, and 21-23; and 3:30 p.m. Sept. 17. Tickets are $20, available online at www.thetenfifteentheater.com.

Neah-Kah-Nie varsity football returns after two-year absence

By MIKE WEBER
For The Headlight Herald

There's good news at Neah-Kah-Nie High School this fall since the Pirates will have a football team for the first time in two years.

Neah-Kah-Nie is resuming its varsity football program, which is something the school hasn't had since 2021. Last year, the Pirates had only a junior varsity squad that competed in a regular season schedule.

The Pirates began preseason summer practice August 14 with a total of 23 players in preparation for their OSAA Class 2A nine-game schedule.

The Pirates, guided by first-year head Coach Alejandro Quintana-Rios, played in a jamboree August 25 at Willamina High School to help them develop their timing and rhythm and help get them ready for their first contest. They played three different teams while competing in each of the one quarter length games. They'll play their Special District 1 season opener on the road in eastern Oregon September 2 at 3 p.m. in a nonleague game versus the Irrigon High Knights (2-6 last year).

"We're all excited and we're looking forward to Friday night lights again, because it's been a while and I think the entire community is glad to see us come out and play football again,"

Nestucca football looks to build on league championship

By MIKE WEBER
For The Headlight Herald

The Nestucca High Bobcats enjoyed tremendous success last year after being co-champions of the OSAA Class 2A football Special District 1 league with the Knappa High Loggers. The Bobcats reached the state playoffs for a second straight season in 2022 and they're hoping their success will continue this season as they'll be seeking to make it to the playoffs for a third consecutive year.

The Bobcats started preseason summer practice on August 14 with a total of 29 athletes preparing for the upcoming nine-game schedule. The Bobcats played Friday in a jamboree at Nestucca High School with two short scrimmage matchups while competing one quarter against the Toledo High Boomers and a quarter against the Oakridge High Warriors.

The Bobcats, guided by longtime (20-year) Coach Jeff Schiewe, begin their schedule with a September 1 nonleague home matchup against the Gervais High Cougars (3-6 last year) at 7 p.m. They'll follow with their first road game September 9 at 3 p.m. in a nonleague contest versus the Gold Beach High Panthers (9-2 last year) at Gold Beach High School.

"We're a really young team with just three returning seniors from last year's team," said Schiewe, whose assistant coaches include Jim Kiser, Tevin Gianella and Kim Johns. "Our goal is to repeat as league champions and return to the state playoffs again. Those are the expectations that we have for this year. We've had the best air quality and the best temperatures anywhere in the state for the first two weeks of practice. We've had a minimal amount of moisture and we're practicing on our new turf field. It's really nice because it's only one-year old and its pretty cool. It's wonderful, because there's never any water or mud on the field."

Nestucca opens its seven-game SD1 schedule September 15 at home versus the Class 3A Corbett High Cardinals (0-9 last year). The SD1 added three Class 3A teams this year in Corbett, the Neah-Kah-Nie Pirates and the Sheridan High Spartans (0-7 last year), which makes it a nine-team league now.

Last year the Bobcats won their first league title in recent history with a 4-1 league record and a 6-3

OBITUARIES

Gerald (Jerry) Wesley Tichenor
August 14, 1925 ~ August 17, 2023

Gerald (Jerry) Wesley Tichenor A beloved husband, father, grandfather and friend, Jerry passed away peacefully on August 17, 2023 in Tillamook, Oregon. Jerry was 98. Jerry was born on August 14, 1925 in Hollywood, CA. Jerry grew up in the Van Nuys area and became a follower of Jesus Christ at the age of 14 while attending Van Nuys Christian Church. As a boy Jerry loved to sing and through the encouragement of his mother, he began voice lessons at age

16. As Jerry’s voice matured, he was asked to sing solos at church. On his 18th birthday, Jerry enlisted in the U.S. Navy and drove a landing craft in the South Pacific during WWII. After the war Jerry enrolled at Northwest Christian College in Eugene, Oregon. Jerry sang on the NCC quartet and traveled to sing on the weekends. Jerry met Marcella Irwin, a pianist, who accompanied the quartet and who soon became the love of his life. They were married on December 19, 1950 at Kern Park Christian Church in Portland, Oregon. After graduating from NCC, Jerry received his MA degree in Sacred Music from Butler University. Jerry served in pastoral roles in churches in Washington, Utah, Indiana and California. Jerry also served as Minister of Music at Gilroy Methodist Church in Gilroy, CA and later at First Christian Church in Watsonville, CA. After settling in Gilroy, CA, Jerry led school choirs and taught elementary school for over 20 years for Gilroy Public Schools. Jerry also participated in special Christmas musicals as a soloist and in local plays. In 1992 after retiring from public school teaching in Gilroy, Jerry and Marcella moved to Rockaway Beach where he became a substitute teacher for Tillamook County and was active at Rockaway Community Church leading worship and he sang in several different quartets. Jerry was a kind and gentle man who loved God, his wife Marcella and her cooking, his family, music, people, Neapolitan ice cream, swimming at the YMCA until age 91 and walking in quieter areas to practice his singing. Throughout the years, Jerry has been a pastor, a choir director, a congregational song leader, a tenor soloist and held concerts in churches throughout the Pacific Northwest. Jerry is survived by his four children, Sheryl Tichenor, Mark (Patty) Tichenor, Laurie Jo (Tony) Porter and Karen (Mark) Kershner. Jerry has six grandchildren and three great grandchildren. Jerry was preceded in death by his wife Marcella of seventy - one years, his parents William and Irma Tichenor and his two brothers Rodger and Bill. A service will be held for Jerry on Saturday, September 2, at 1 pm at North Coast Christian Church, 309 3rd Street, Garibaldi with a dessert reception to follow. There will be a viewing on Friday, September 1, from 3:00-6:00 pm at Waud’s Funeral Home. In lieu of flowers, the family requests a donation be made in Gerald and Marcella Tichenor’s memory to The Beacon Fund in support of student scholarships and performing arts at Bushnell University (NCC), 828 E. 11th Avenue, Eugene, Oregon 97401 or to Wi-Nema Christian Camp, 5195 Winema Rd. Cloverdale, Oregon 97112.

said Quintana-Rios, whose assistant coaches include Jack Porter, Mike Lakey, Dave Allen and Barrett Wilson. “This is really the first full season of varsity football since 2019. Our seniors were in middle school the last time we had a full varsity football schedule.” A group of seven seniors will help provide leadership for the Pirates this season. They include Anthony Allen, Michael Prior, Asher Kronoff, Jeremiah Miller, Garrett Christian, Alex Aguinaga and John Burch. Quintana-Rios was an assistant coach for four years to former head Coach Chris Bennett before he became the JV head coach last season. Prior, the Pirates starting quarterback, will help lead the offense along with Allen, their starting running back. “Michael has shown great leadership skills in practice and so we’re expecting to see great things from him and Anthony has been doing a great job for us at running back the last three years,” said Quintana-Rios. Neah-Kah-Nie played just one game in the 2021 fall season before the remaining games were all canceled. The Pirates played three games in the 2021 Covid shortened spring season that wasn’t sanctioned by the OSAA. The 2020 season was canceled because of Covid-19. Neah-Kah-Nie’s last full season was in 2019 and the Pirates had a 5-3 record. The Pirates will play their first home game in three years with a 7 p.m. nonleague contest against the Willamina High Bulldogs (5-4 last year) at Neah-Kah-Nie High School in Rockaway on September 8. “We’re excited about playing our first home game and Willamina is going to bring everything they’ve got, but we’re really looking forward to that game,” said Quintana-Rios. “I think we’re pretty fortunate with what we’ve got going on, particularly on our line of scrimmage. We have some pretty good offensive linemen who have really stepped up. Most of them are juniors and so they’ve been playing together now for nearly three years. They’re big boys and I think we’ll be able to hang in there with our opponents. We’ll really rely on them and that will determine how far we’ll be able to go and how much success that we’ll have this year.” Neah-Kah-Nie begins its seven-game SDI schedule with a Sept. 15 7 p.m. contest versus the Vernonia/Jewell High Loggers (3-5 last year) at Vernonia High School.

overall mark and finished with a No. 13 OSAA ranking. Nestucca tied for first place in the six-team league with Knappa (4-1 league, 4-4 overall). The Bobcats qualified for a November 5, 2022, first round playoff home game and lost a heartbreaker, 24-23 to the No. 8 ranked Umatilla High Vikings (7-2) to end their season.

After losing 10 graduated seniors from last year’s state playoff squad, the Bobcats will certainly have some big shoes to fill. They’ll have leadership qualities provided by seniors in Quinn Hill, Zac Collins, Kevin Sanchez, Kenneth Blackburn and Bryson Morgan who will help fill the roles from last year’s graduates. Nestucca’s roster also features lots of young players, including eight freshmen, five sophomores and 11 juniors. Nestucca junior Nolen Hurlimann, a 6-foot-3, 200-pound quarterback, will help guide the Bobcats offense, along with Morgan, a 6-3, 180 pound running back. Junior Draven Marsh and sophomores Jaxon Jensen and Eli Love will be another trio of running backs who will also help contribute offensively as well.

NOTICE OF ELECTION & RECEIPT OF BALLOT TITLE
Published pursuant to ORS 255.085

HH23-339

Notice is hereby given that a ballot title for a measure referred by the North County Recreation District has been filed with the County Clerk of Tillamook County, Oregon on August 15, 2023. The November 7, 2023, Special Election will be conducted by mail pursuant to ORS 254.465. An elector may file a petition for review of this ballot title in Tillamook County Circuit Court no later than 5:00 p.m. on August 24, 2023 pursuant to ORS 255.155.

CAPTION: RENEWAL OF CURRENT FIVE-YEAR OPTION TAX FOR GENERAL OPERATIONS

QUESTION: Shall North County Recreation District renew five-year local option levy of $0.40 per $1,000 of assessed value beginning FY 2024/2025? This measure renews current local option taxes.

SUMMARY: North County Recreation District will use the tax revenue from this measure to operate the district at its present level of service.

Property taxes pay for recreation and health program services in aquatics, fitness, youth, and activities for adults, and operating costs such as the existing swimming pool operation, utilities, general administration, and minor maintenance.

Major capital expenditures are paid using timber tax and other non-property tax sources of income. Savings for these major capital costs, which include a fund for a replacement swimming pool, do not come from property taxes.

Without the renewed local option tax of .40 per $1,000, the district's program services would be cut by approximately 50% and all departments would have significant reductions in hours of operation.

The district estimates that the proposed local option levy of .40 per $1,000, less uncollectible taxes, will raise the following:
FY 2024 – 2025 $573,231
FY 2025 – 2026 $590,428
FY 2026 – 2027 $608,141
FY 2027 – 2028 $626,385
FY 2028 – 2029 $645,177
Total of estimated taxes to be collected: $3,043,362

The estimated tax cost for this measure is an ESTIMATE ONLY based on the best information available from the county assessor at the time of estimate and may reflect the impact of early payment discounts, compression and the collection rate.
