Tillamook County celebrates July 4th

Tillamook County celebrated the 249th anniversary of the signing of the Declaration of Independence with parades, wiener dog races and fireworks on July 4.

Rockaway Beach's celebrations kicked off the day, with the city's annual Fourth of July Parade taking place at 11 a.m. before the 18th annual Firecracker Wiener Nationals kicked off at 1 p.m. The parade featured entries from a wide assortment of local businesses from Flamingo Jim's to Pronto Pup and was preceded by a flyover from the United States Airforce.

Manzanita's parade rolled down Laneda Avenue at one and saw a wide array of local groups, including the Manzanita Police Department, neighborhood associations and Tillamook Peoples' Utility District participate.

The day was capped off at dusk with Rockaway Beach's annual fireworks show.

Ellis resigns from school district top position

WILL CHAPPELL
Headlight Editor

Tillamook School District Superintendent Matt Ellis resigned from his position on June 29, with the district's board of directors announcing the move in a press release on June 30.

Ellis's resignation followed an announcement on June 18, that the board had extended a previously unannounced administrative leave and named Jennifer Guarcello acting superintendent, a position which she will continue to fill.

Ellis arrived in Tillamook in 2023, beginning a three-year contract on July 1, taking over after the previous superintendent, Curt Shelley, abruptly resigned in 2022, while the subject of a board investigation, and received a full year's salary as severance.

Previously, Ellis had worked in Washington State, most recently as superintendent at the Prosser School District following stints at Royal High School and Lind-Ritzville Cooperative Schools.

When he was hired, Ellis's contract included base salaries of $175,000, $180,250 and $187,460 for its three-year term, as well as an additional annual retention bonus of 10%.

The reasons for Ellis's administrative leave and resignation were not made public, and Ellis did not respond to a request for comment from the Headlight Herald.

At their monthly board meeting on July 1, Kris Lachenmeier, the district's board chair, addressed the resignation in her board comments, stressing that the comments were not an official statement from the district or board.

Lachenmeier said that the district had received a short letter late on the night of June 29 from Ellis, informing them that he would be resigning effective July 1, and offering no more explanation.

Lachenmeier said that while she understood the public's desire for more information, it was a key role of board members to respect privacy and labor laws, even if it limited transparency.

"Transparency is important to me as a school board member," Lachenmeier said, "but not if it violates employment law, board ethics or exposes the district to potential litigation. We were elected to exercise sound judgment and act in the best interests of the community. We will continue to do that this year as we move forward with new leadership."

In just under a month, the Tillamook County Fairgrounds will transform into a hive of activity from August 6-9 for the Tillamook County Fair.

Attendees from across the county and region will be treated to a plethora of displays, pari-mutuel horse racing, a standout concert lineup and, of course, Pig n' Ford races as the fair celebrates 100 years of Pig n' Ford as its theme.

The fair will kick off at 10 a.m. on Wednesday, August 6, and have hours of 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. each day through Saturday, August 9.

During the day, fairgoers can wander the fair's exhibit halls, where a host of local businesses and organizations, including the Headlight Herald, will have decorated booths. There will also be displays featuring local agricultural products from area granges, 4H and FFA animal competitions, and live entertainment on the fair's central courtyard stage. For those looking for a thrill, Rainier Amusements will be offering carnival style rides (tickets must be purchased in addition to fair entry) and every day will see pari-mutuel horse racing in the grandstand arena throughout the afternoon.

After the horse races end, the Model T Pig n' Ford Association will take over the arena with their centennial competition. Get there early to find a good seat so you don't miss a second of the action.

Following the Pig n' Ford races, the arena will play host to the fair's annual concert series, with Chase Matthew performing on Wednesday, Fleetwood Mac cover band Taken by the Sky playing on Wednesday and Waylon Wyatt taking the stage on Friday. Closing out the week of fair will be Saturday night's annual demolition derby.

COLPAC hosts Mass Timber 101

WILL CHAPPELL
Headlight Editor

As part of an ongoing effort to increase awareness and use of mass timber products, the Columbia-Pacific Development District hosted a webinar for northwest Oregon leaders on June 18.

In the meeting, Jonathan Heppner, a principal at Lever Architecture, which has been a pioneer in the use of mass timber products over the past decade, described the history, production process and uses for mass timber.

The meeting began with Lydia Ivanovic, Columbia-Pacific Development District (COLPAC) programs manager, welcoming attendees and discussing the purpose of the meeting. Ivanovic explained that COLPAC had received grants from Oregon's Department of Land Conservation and Development to help expand the use of manufactured wood products throughout their coverage area in northwest Oregon. This process began with a group of COLPAC employees learning about the products last winter and will continue with work on amending codes and permitting processes, while the purpose of the June event was to educate local partners.

Heppner then began his presentation, saying that there was a busy mass timber business in Oregon that had been growing over the past decade, with his firm working on more than 15 projects using mass timber in that time frame.

Mass timber can refer to any number of products that are produced by using an adhesive to join small pieces of wood together to create large, structural pieces that can be used in construction, according to Heppner. Heppner said that wood was a good product to build with because it had a strength to weight ratio comparable to steel, can flex significantly and, in the case of mass timber products, is as fire resistant as concrete.

Heppner said that cross laminated timber, the first mass timber product, was originally developed in the 1920s, but with a large supply of old growth timber available, did not have an economic use case until much later.

Beyond its advantageous physical characteristics, mass timber is also easier to construct with, according to Heppner, as it is prefabricated in production facilities allowing easy assembly on construction sites. Mass timber products can also be fabricated from smaller diameter trees or by-products from the milling process that would otherwise go to waste, making it attractive to forest product companies.

Most mass timber products in Oregon are made from Douglas fir, Heppner said, but pine and spruce are also being incorporated at scale and any wood product can be used.

However, the relatively recent shift towards the products means that there is currently a shortage of production facilities, making the products comparatively expensive, Heppner said. Owing to this, mass timber products are cost effective in larger buildings—those over three stories—while traditional wood framing makes more economic sense for smaller projects. Heppner said that as the industry continues to grow, he envisions products that can be used to build smaller buildings like IKEA furniture in very little time and at a lower cost.

Heppner said that mass timber could be used for buildings up to 18 stories tall, though was mostly

Green Coast Market brings specialty, local products to Rockaway

Julie and Jason Maxfield envisioned a store where shoppers could have a farmers’ market experience year-round. Their dream also aligned with a community need. Rockaway Beach is defined as a “food desert.” Food deserts, according to the US Department of Agriculture, are geographic areas where residents’ access to affordable, healthy food options (especially fresh fruits and vegetables) is restricted or nonexistent due to the absence of grocery stores within convenient traveling distance.

“We’ve lived in Rockaway Beach for four years, and have noticed a lack of fresh, local options,” Julie said. “We saw the lines at the farmers’ market and so it seemed like a need.”

As their brainstorming progressed, the opportunity to enter the 2024 Tillamook Economic Development Council’s “LevelUp” mini pitch competition arose. The competition, in its second season, was an opportunity for Tillamook County small business owners and aspiring entrepreneurs to pitch their business plans. Those pitches were evaluated by a panel of judges, who awarded cash prizes to support the businesses.

The Maxfields’ proposal for Green Coast Market was a finalist in the first round of the competition, winning an award of $250 and proceeding to the finals, where it placed third and received a $2,500 grant.

“The timing was perfect as we were still imagining the business idea. It forced us to get our business plan and presentation together,” Julie said. “It was fun, and we met of lot of other entrepreneurs that have stayed connected to our business since then.”

Green Coast Market, located at 117 S. Miller Street in Rockaway Beach, opened on Valentine’s Day. Their store’s selection is a reflection of the farmers’ market vibe they seek to embody with a tagline of fresh and local, specialty foods.

Local products from Brickyard Farms, Angora Peak Granola, Brittney Bakes (previous LevelUp competitor), Josi’s Farms, Fawcett Creek Farms, Bennett milk, Zweifel eggs, delicious cheeses from three different small creameries, Heritage Family Farms, Captain’s Corner, Oregon Seaweed, Sweet Begonias (previous LevelUp competitor) can be found at the market as well as local craft cider, wine and beer.

“This is our local food,” Maxfield, said. “We have a great, small-town vibe and want to connect people with our food scene. We have produce, meat, dairy and other fresh items. If there’s stuff that people are looking for, we try and find out if we can carry that product.”

Since opening, Green Coast Market has hosted evenings filled with product sampling, knife sharpening and artist showcases.

Wilson River Trail continues to expand

WILL CHAPPELL
Headlight Editor

Already the longest trail in Oregon’s State Forests at 26 miles, the Wilson River Trail continues to expand thanks to volunteer efforts, with a new 6.1-mile section to the Drift Creek Trailhead currently under construction.

Once completed, that will leave four to six more miles of trail to connect to the Storey Burn trailhead and the Oregon Department of Forestry’s complex of trails in Washington County. Joe Offer, ODF’s Recreation, Education and Interpretation Program Manager, said that will only serve to enhance what is already the department’s best trail.

“We obviously have other great trails here, but this one just for kind of the overall length, as far as seeing all the different habitats the forest has, seeing different management scenarios too as far as timber sales, to see some of the new, some of the old, see different forest, all that kind of stuff,” Offer said. “I just think there’s so much that happens on this trail, you can’t beat it.”

The Wilson River Trail started to take shape in the late 1990s as ODF took a more active approach to managing recreation opportunities on state forest lands and began to stitch together segments of existing trail to form the Wilson River Trail. “People have been out here recreating for forever,” Offer said, “but as far as the department was concerned, there was enough recreation, enough public use, it made sense to really get on top of that and start managing it instead of letting it manage itself.”

In the years since, the trail has grown to 26 miles, stretching from Koenig Creek Campground in the west to Idiot Creek Loop Road in the east. Open to all non-motorized traffic, the trail passes the Tillamook Forest Center, as well as all the busiest campgrounds in the Tillamook State Forest except Gales Creek.

Construction and maintenance of the trail is overseen by volunteers from four trail keeping organizations: Trailkeepers of Oregon, Oregon Equestrian Trail, Westside Trail Federation, a mountain biking focused group, and the Northwest Trail alliance.

In addition to these groups, in recent years the trail has also found a new champion in the State Forests Trust of Oregon, formerly the Tillamook Heritage Trust, a nonprofit supporting ODF’s work in all state forests.

Erin Skaar, a member of the trust’s board, said that in the late 1990s, as the department prioritized recreation opportunities on state forest lands, the trust was founded to support those efforts by raising funds for recreation and education projects.

“Our work now as the trust is to really work hand-in-hand with REI (recreation, education and interpretation) to say where are you going next, what do you need,” Skaar said. “And then, it’s our job to basically raise the money to help fund these things.”

Will Chappell/Headlight Herald

A roughhewn section of the new trail is marked by a red flag and awaiting further clearance and construction efforts.

The trust’s first major project was the Tillamook Forest Center, which opened in 2020, before a three-year closure due to the coronavirus pandemic. With that project completed, Skaar said that the trust started seeking out new projects, landing on the Wilson River Trail.

““This was our first foray out of and away from the forest center, really to say, what do we do next,” Skaar said. “And this just made so much sense. It was laid out, it was started, and it had energy. People are excited about this.”

So far, the trust has awarded a grant to help fund the newest section’s construction and Skaar said that the group is also working to boost awareness of the trail and opportunities to volunteer in its construction and maintenance.

“It’s just a super fun opportunity for people and so I hope that as this gets going and publicized that in Tillamook people will actually come out from our own community and have the experience,” Skaar said.

Both Skaar and Offer stressed the variety of hiking opportunities available on the trail, saying that sections near the forest center and at Kings Mountain were generally busier, while those at Idiot Creek and Diamond Mill were less frequented.

For those looking to get involved in volunteering on the trail, Offer said to reach out to Trailkeepers of Oregon, which hosts frequent work parties on the trail, with a calendar of opportunities available online.

Work began on the in-progress section of trail in 2019 and 2020, with work crews from the Northwest Youth Corps roughing in the trail route, before the Covid pandemic paused work for several years. Given the volunteer nature of the trail’s construction, Offer said he couldn’t predict when the new section of trail would be complete.

Offer said that more information about the trail and its specific sections was available at ODF district offices in Tillamook and Forest Grove, as well as online, though he cautioned that the website was in the midst of an upgrade.

used in projects 12 stories or shorter, and could also be used for specific applications, such as flooring or façade decoration, in projects constructed primarily from other materials.

The field is also quickly evolving, with an acoustic research lab set to come online soon at the University of Oregon to test new products, as well as a fire testing lab and new facility from Timberlab, a company that works to develop new manufactured wood products, under development elsewhere in Oregon.

Heppner said that he also expected modular building products to come online soon and that local governments could encourage its use by allowing more exposed material in their codes, but that it was already relatively easy to use mass timber products in projects.

Damascus man sentenced to 28-years for attempted murder of law enforcement officers in Tillamook County

The Tillamook City Police Department and Tillamook County Sheriff’s Office announce that on June 6, 2025, Joey De La Rosa Rodriguez, 37, of Damascus, Oregon, was sentenced to 28 years in prison after opening fire on law enforcement in a public parking lot. Rodriguez pled guilty to three counts of attempted aggravated murder, one count of unlawful use of a weapon, one count of recklessly endangering another person, and one count of menacing. Chief Nick Troxel said, “I want to express my sincere appreciation for the incredible professionalism and bravery shown by our officers, deputies, and troopers that day.” On June 26, 2024, at approximately 6:37 p.m., Tillamook City Police Officer David Martinez, assisted by Oregon State Trooper Jase Huseby and Tillamook County Deputy Travis Patterson, attempted a traffic stop on a white Toyota Tacoma traveling southbound on Highway 101 near milepost 64. The Tacoma matched the description of a truck that had eluded Oregon State Police the day prior in Lincoln County. Trooper Huseby, demonstrating keen observation and vigilance, recognized it as the suspect vehicle, prompting the coordinated stop. The Tacoma turned into the Tillamook Fred Meyer parking lot and stopped. Officer Martinez exited his patrol vehicle to approach. Rodriguez exited the Tacoma and opened fire on Officer Martinez, striking the front of his patrol vehicle. Officer Martinez and Deputy Patterson returned fire. Rodriguez re-entered his vehicle and fled through the parking lot. During his attempt to escape, he encountered Tillamook County Sheriff’s Deputy Jordan Reyes and Tillamook City Police Sergeant Hollis, who both returned fire to protect themselves and members of the public. Rodriguez led law enforcement on a high-speed pursuit. Tillamook County Undersheriff Matt Kelly and Tillamook County Sergeant Troy Jackson were able to get ahead of the vehicle and successfully deploy spike strips, disabling the vehicle. Rodriguez ultimately stopped his truck in a driveway a short distance away and was taken into custody without further incident. Following his arrest, Rodriguez was transported by Tillamook County Sheriff’s Office Deputies and Oregon State Troopers to the Tillamook Adventist Emergency Room, where he was medically evaluated and cleared. He was then lodged at the Tillamook County Jail. When asked about the incident, Sheriff Josh Brown said, “This incident is a reminder of the risks law enforcement faces daily and the dedication of those who serve to protect our community. I am extremely proud of everyone involved.” Both agencies commend the professionalism, courage, and coordinated efforts of all law enforcement personnel involved in bringing this dangerous incident to a safe resolution. The safety of the community remains our highest priority.

South Fork Forest Camp work crew helps fire dist. on call

Earlier this month, Tillamook Fire District reached out to South Fork Forest Camp (SCCF) to assist with a backcountry rescue on the Kings Mountain Trail in the Tillamook State Forest. SFFC Security staff and a 10-man crew of adults in custody responded to the call. Upon arriving at the trailhead, they learned a hiker had suffered a broken ankle approximately 1.3 miles up the steep terrain. The team hiked in and worked alongside Fire/EMS personnel to safely carry the injured hiker back to the trailhead, showcasing teamwork, strength, and a commitment to helping the community. SFFC is minimum-security work camp that houses approximately 200 adults in custody who are within four years of release. Part of SFFC’s mission is to supply a ready work force to combat forest or wildfires throughout the state. Crews provide critical support for statewide fire operations, recreation, and reforestation; as well as provide support for special projects such as sign making, metal fabrication, and tool or equipment repair. SFFC was established in 1951 and is a satellite facility to CRCI and managed jointly with the Oregon Department of Forestry. It is located approximately 28 miles east of Tillamook, just off of Highway 6 along the Wilson River in the Tillamook Forest.

Protect the CFPB

In the “big beautiful bill” proposed by the Republican administration and passed the Senate today (7/1/25), much has been written here in the Headlight Herald and media outlets nationwide about the cuts to Medicaid which would result in more than more than 15 million Americans, including an estimated 11,000 Tillamook County residents, losing their health care insurance. This bill is all about taking resources from low-income and poor Americans to give tax cuts to rich Americans.

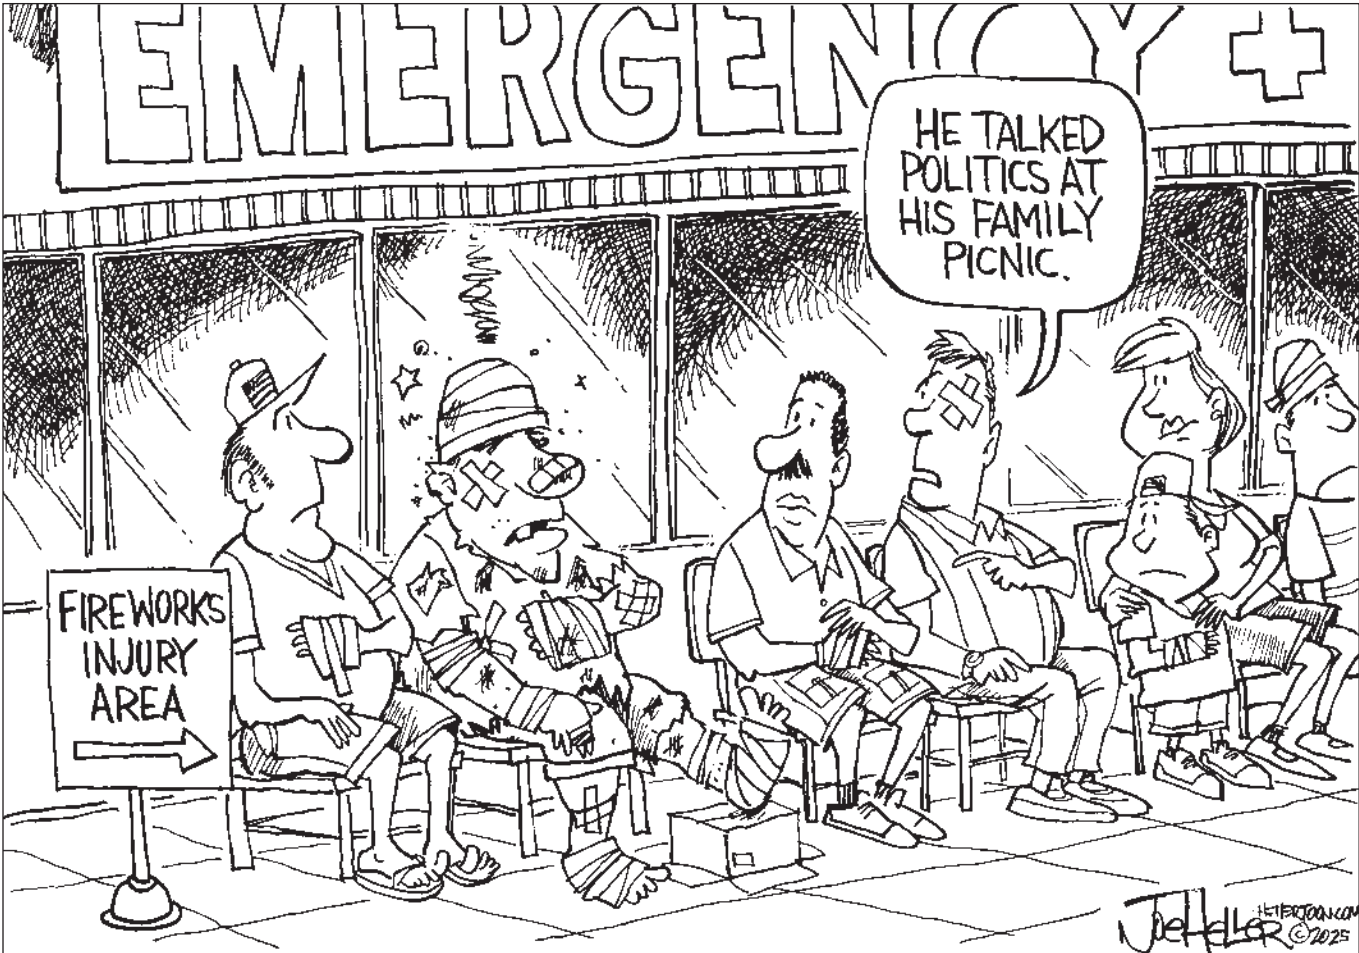

But there’s another thing in the “big beautiful bill” that the passed by the Senate today that’s important for us be paying attention to and advocating for--saving the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau (CFPB). This “big beautiful bill” calls for a 50% cut in funding to this agency. Just after taking office in January 2025, closing down the CFPB was one of the first things that Republican Administration did. Public Citizen filed a lawsuit to keep this from happening. Hundreds of CFPB employees were fired; some of these employees were reinstated after the court ruling.

Why is it so important that the CFPB remain intact? After the 2008 financial crisis where millions of Americans lost their home and savings, the CFPB was formed to protect consumers. It takes on banks, credit card companies, predatory lenders, big tech companies and scammers. Over the past 17 years the CFPB has pulled $21 billion dollars from big business and returned it to consumers who had been taken advantage of or misled.

Banks and big financial companies are not going to regulate themselves. That’s like asking the fox to watch the hen house. We need a financial watchdog like the CFPB to keep an eye on these companies and to protect consumers, you and me.

FENCEPOSTS

The lowest tides of the year are now behind us. I hope you got out and enjoyed them. I was with several family members and friends who joined Claudine Rehn of Tillamook Estuaries Partnership (TEP) at Oceanside for one of those low tides. She was a volunteer leading a group of about a dozen interested beach explorers in a free community event hosted by Friends of Netarts Bay WEBS. We poked around the tide pools as Claudine identified what we were seeing: various kinds of rock crab, iridescent nudibranch, purple sea urchins, lined chitons, starfish of several colors, sea cucumbers, abundant mussels and barnacles—and a red octopus, first hidden in a crevice between rocks and then swimming in a tide pool. A pair of bald eagles, perched high in a spruce tree on the cliff, watched our every move. What a wonderful, educational morning on the beach. If you are interested in this sort of outing, check out the “Explore Nature” series at <https://www.tbnep.org/?s=Explore+Nature>. The series offers guided outdoor adventures that connect people with the unique beauty and ecological importance of an area.

Speaking of sea creatures, recent sampling by the Oregon Department of Agriculture (ODA) indicates mussels in our area are above the safety limit for levels of Paralytic Shellfish Poisoning (PSP), a naturally occurring marine biotoxin. As a result, at the time of this writing, mussel harvesting is closed from Tillamook Head (south of Seaside) to the north jetty of the Siuslaw River (Florence). Razor clams, bay clams and crabs remain open in our area. Always call the Shellfish Hotline at 800-448-2474 before harvesting shellfish or visit ODA online at <https://www.oregon.gov/oda/food-safety/shellfish/pages/shellfish-closures.aspx>. Over Labor Day weekend last year, several individuals became ill after eating toxic mussels harvested at Cape Meares beach.

The Captain and I have had a rough spring Chinook season. We started off with a few forays early in May, but the fish weren’t in. Then we began a home remodeling project that required meeting construction workers at our house, so we missed several fishing days. Just about the time that project was rolling along well without us, I threw out my back—and it took three long weeks for me to recover from that. Toss in the times we were fishing up the Tillamook River by the pilings while the bite was on at Memaloose...and you can see our problem.

Just when we were getting worried about the salmon supply for hosting our big family of five kids with spouses/partners and 12 grandchildren, our ship came in. Friend-on-the-water Tim Buongiorno showed up on our doorstep with a beautiful, bright, eight-pound spring Chinook. He had been having a good season and had enough to share. This is the second time we’ve benefited from “couch catching” with Tim (we sit home on our couch; he brings us an entire fish); he gave us a whole salmon last year, too. Many thanks, Tim, from the entire Steen family.

U.S. Army Corps of Engineers’ Project Manager for Tillamook South Jetty Repairs reports that a jetty crest haul road is being constructed atop the south jetty, enabling trucks to deliver armor stone for repair of the jetty’s seaward (west) end. A new jetty head will be established beyond what is now visible (some of the old jetty is submerged) and repairs will be made to the adjacent trunk. Placement of the armor stone is expected to begin the latter half of this month. We are curious to see how this work affects ocean currents and the flotsam and jetsam that comes ashore on Bayocean Spit and Cape Meares beach. Stay tuned, beachcombers.

FENCEPOSTS

Hats off to three Nes-tucca High School student athletes for their part in providing lifesaving first aid to their Assistant Football Coach on school property during a recent practice. According to a letter from Principal Emily Chadwick recently published online, “Frank Elsasser experienced a sudden medical emergency. Three student athletes stepped in to administer CPR.” Zeth Chapin, Brady Hurliman and Teagan Slavens were credited by paramedics for saving Mr. Elsasser’s life. An update was published on Facebook last week with word that “Coach Elsasser is doing great, and he really wanted to thank the football team, coaches, administrators, E.M.T.s and staff for saving his life....” He’s reportedly eager to get back to coaching once it’s cleared by his doctors. Speaking of word on the local street, I hear that Yellow Dog Espresso is rolling into summer with a new van. As we go to press the shiny new Espresso express is poised to make a debut at Clover’s Day (just passed as you read these words). And congratulations to Rand “Randy” James and Rosalie (Rose) Ann (Hurliman) Wharton on being selected as Grand Marshals for the Clover’s Day Parade, that morning.

With acceptance of the final version of the Sourcewater Protection Plan, the associated Development Advisory Committee (SPPDAC) was dissolved by Resolution 2025-19, which approved the plan. Our thanks go to all members of the committee for their careful review of GSI Water Solution’s detailed plan. The follow-up to the SPPDAC is the newly declared Forest Stewardship Plan Advisory Committee, as announced in the June 11 city council meeting. The stewardship plan was one specific outcome of the original SPPDAC’s efforts. Intended to outline activities needed to improve drinking water quality and quantity, the Forest Stewardship Plan calls for projects meant to restore the Jetty Creek watershed. My column of April 23, 2024, described a walk through the watershed led by Councilor Mary McGinnis, as well as with Nancy Webster of the North Coast Communities for Watershed Protection plus a group of Rockaway citizens. We saw first-hand what the Stewardship Plan is meant to address: the urgent need for watershed restoration projects “that enhance water quality, such as planting riparian buffers and adding large woody debris to streams.” Riparian planting has benefits including stabilizing stream banks to reduce erosion, and to filter out contamination that occurs as a result of soil moving downhill and downstream. Consider the mudslides that follow wildfires in hilly areas: the roots of plants act as anchors to hold soil on a slope. When the plants are removed, either by fire or through herbicide spraying, soil washes downhill in the rain. In our watershed, the concern is that this kind of lowering the need for chemical clarification. During that walk, the group discussed a form of watershed restoration called rewilding. This is meant to restore the watershed to something more closely approximating its natural state, particularly by returning a wide variety of indigenous species to the area. Many of the regular presentations by the North Coast Communities for Watershed Protection (NCCWP) have described the benefits of rewilding as a method for increasing both water quantity and quality. With this as background, Resolution 2025-33 established the Forest Stewardship Plan Advisory Committee at the June 11 city council meeting. The plan is required by the Oregon Watershed Enhancement Board Drinking Water Source Protection Grant, which in turn provides $1.4 million to develop the completed plan.

soil displacement leads to increased turbidity in the drinking water. This in turn requires more filtration, including chemical steps to clarify the water. This has the unfortunate effect of adding trihalomethanes (THMs) to the water, which have a number of documented adverse health effects. Riparian planting will replace the smaller, more diverse vegetation removed by herbicide spray and clearcutting, and in turn reduce the amount of soil washed down into the watershed, thereby lowering the need for chemical clarification. During that walk, the group discussed a form of watershed restoration called rewilding. This is meant to restore the watershed to something more closely approximating its natural state, particularly by returning a wide variety of indigenous species to the area. Many of the regular presentations by the North Coast Communities for Watershed Protection (NCCWP) have described the benefits of rewilding as a method for increasing both water quantity and quality. With this as background, Resolution 2025-33 established the Forest Stewardship Plan Advisory Committee at the June 11 city council meeting. The plan is required by the Oregon Watershed Enhancement Board Drinking Water Source Protection Grant, which in turn provides $1.4 million to develop the completed plan.

Resolution 2025-33 establishes the advisory committee “for the purpose of receiving and reviewing project information and providing community input to the Forest Stewardship Plan facilitator” during the plan’s development. To this end, that resolution calls for an advisory committee consisting of five members, “who are served by the Rockaway Beach Water District.” At least four members must be residents of the city; in addition, three members must have served on the Sourcewater Protection Plan Development Advisory Committee, which will provide continuity and let the SPPDAC’s experience continue to contribute to the program. The committee will meet at least four times during the development of the stewardship plan. Those four meetings are meant to coincide with milestones of the plan development. At least three of the five committee members will need to be present at each of these meetings. City Manager Luke Shepard will appoint a staff member for distributing meeting notices and taking minutes. The city has been actively recruiting volunteers, with the deadline for application this week. When the City selects its applicants, I will post the results and will continue to report on these meetings and on the Forest Stewardship Plan as it develops. Information about the Forest Stewardship Plan and its predecessor, the Sourcewater Protection Plan, is available on the city’s website, https://corb.us/advisory-committees. You can read the final version of the Sourcewater Protection Plan there, as well as view recordings of the SPPDAC meetings from April 2024 through the final meeting on April 22, 2025.

I hope you all had a safe and celebratory fourth of July. Now that the June Dairy parade is complete for another year, and we’re past Independence Day, the next big event to look forward to on my calendar is the Tillamook County Fair. It will be here before we know it, beginning August 6 through the 9th. Each year I try to enter a couple of categories, usually plants and it’s fun to take part, to look at all the entries and be amazed at how talented people are. As someone who struggles to sew on a button the handwork, quilts, lace, knitting and art entries are always very impressive. So, enter your work, a plant or vegetables and be part of this wonderful event. A reminder that the Artist of the month opening event will take place July 11 from 5-7 p.m. at the Bay City Arts Center. This month the featured artists are the mother daughter duo of Nicola Meeks and Amber Mohr. Nicola is our very own Bay City artist, and she is also a very involved community member. Their show will highlight some interesting mediums and is bound to be a wonderful display of their talents. Clyde Zeller will provide acoustic guitar music and there will be light refreshments served. The main branch of the library, in Tillamook, will be presenting Wednesday movies in July for children. Movies will be shown at 12:30. July 9 will be Minions, July 16th Ratatouille, July 23 Princess and the Frog and the final show for July on July 30 is LEGO Batman. I attended the recent reading and book signing by Jane Kirkpatrick and am thoroughly enjoying reading her new novel, The Crying Sands. The book focuses on Mary Gerritse, who delivered the mail from 1897 to 1902 from Nehalem to Seaside, on horseback, over Neahkahnne Mountain, before there were any roads. This book is a great summer read, and it’s the first of three to feature women from the Cannon Beach area. Another book recommended to me by a friend, is Becoming Earth by Robin Wall Kimmerer. I have read her previous book, Braiding Sweetgrass, which was excellent, so am looking forward to discovering her new work. Watching nature is one of my favorite pastimes, and lately, just as dusk comes, there have been lots of bats flying around at my house. It’s incredible how they swoop and dip so fast, using their eyes and their echolocation skills. There must be many delicious bugs flying around as they appear to be having a feast. Spectacular to witness. Hummingbirds are back, they seemed to be gone for a long time from my garden but think they were nesting and fledging their babies, and now they are voracious. Having a garden full of flowers at this time of year, I don’t put up feeders, just let them feed on the nectar rich plants. It’s interesting to see which flowers are their favorites.

Burn Ban begins July 15

The Tillamook County Fire Defense Board in conjunction with the Oregon Department of Forestry will enter into a county-wide burn ban on outdoor burning on July 15, 2025, at 12:01 am. This means no outdoor open debris pile burning or burn barrels. The ban does not include permitted campfires and campfires in designated sites. It is also a good reminder that fire can be a hazard at any time of year if steps are not taken to use fire safely. Whenever you use fire, whether for debris burning or enjoying a campfire, use these steps to prevent your fire from turning into the next wildfire.

- Never leave your fire unattended.
- When burning debris, always have a hose and shovel at the fire to prevent the fire from spreading.
- Check with your local fire protection agency prior to burning. (Most Rural Fire Protection Districts require a burn permit year-round.)
- If camping, ensure your campfire is in a designated area.

- Always make sure your campfire is out cold before leaving.
- On the beach, keep your campfire far from beach grass and driftwood piles.

Forest users may obtain information about state forest lands and industrial fire restrictions in our area and public fire restrictions by calling the Tillamook District 503-842-2545. Campfires on the beach must be at least 50 feet away from vegetation, and any driftwood concentrations.

Linda Mae Hulburt Hargraves

Sept. 28, 1958 - June 28, 2025

Linda Mae Hulburt Hargraves of Woodstock, Georgia, passed away on Saturday, June 28, 2025 at the age of 66 after a three-year battle with cancer. She is preceded in death by her husband of 44 years, James V. “Vince” Hargraves Jr. who passed just eight days before on June 20, 2025. Linda is survived by her daughter Christie (Josh) Mae Waltier, her son James V. “Jimmy” Hargraves III, her grandchildren Zoe, Henry, Brooks, Briley, her siblings Tam (Clyde) Z. Hulburt, John (Tammy) Hulburt, Jim (Leanne) Hulburt, Joe (Dana) Hulburt, her nephews, and many other extended family members.

Linda was born on September 28, 1958, in Tillamook, Oregon to Jack and Virginia Mae “Ginger” Hulburt. She grew up in Tillamook, then later moved to Cloverdale where she, somewhat reluctantly, helped with the family dairy farm. Linda graduated from Nestucca High School in 1976. She left the Oregon Coast and moved to Brunswick, GA where she met and married her husband in 1980. Countless moves and two children later, they settled in Woodstock, GA in 1995. A firm believer in the value of hard work, Linda worked through the beginning of her illness and finally retired in 2023.

Linda was an introvert – she enjoyed quiet time on her back porch to read and drink coffee, reflect, or crochet. She loved flowers and gardening which inspired her crochet style – an explosion of bright colors and textures. Linda also enjoyed music and was quoting Tom Petty lyrics right up to her final days. She loved spending time with family near water, preferably a river or the Pacific Ocean, but a lake would do. Linda’s greatest joy though, was her grandchildren, each of whom she loved most dearly.

Above all, Linda loved God. Her faith in Christ was solid as a rock, and she leaned on His grace and mercy through many hard seasons.

There will be a combined memorial service for Vince & Linda on August 6th which would have been their 45th wedding anniversary, please contact the family for details.

He had an unquenchable thirst for knowledge which was evident to those closest to him. Jim’s vast collection of autographed images and autographs from his favorite music artists was one of his greatest passions. Prior to some health changes James enjoyed regularly attending the Seventh Day Adventist Church, walking to Fred Meyers and attending the State Fair. His most recent adventure was to travel to Phoenix and watch the Baseball Spring Training in 2024. Jim’s care coordinator enjoyed listening to him sing “Take Me Out to the Ballgame” and recite the “national anthem”. Prior to retiring from Marie Mills Jim worked as a custodian and more recently a paper shredder.

Jimmy was affectionately known; he was a shining light in the lives of all who had the privilege of knowing him. His journey on this earth was one marked by love, compassion, and unwavering faith in God. The Celebration of Life service to honor the life of James will be held at the Seventh Day Adventist church in Tillamook on Thursday, July 10th @ 2:00 p.m.

ODOT layoffs will hit key democratic constituency

BY NIGEL JAQUISS
Oregon Journalism Project

To better understand the high stakes of the final days of the 2025 legislative session, it’s useful to consider one fact that was largely absent from the debate over House Bill 2025, the multibillion-dollar transportation funding measure that failed in numerous incarnations: The biggest immediate loser will be the members of Service Employees International Union who are set to be laid off later this week.

Fully half of ODOT’s nearly 5,000 employees are SEIU members: 1,700 in maintenance, operations and headquarters jobs and about 800 at the DMV, Oregon Driver & Motor Vehicle Services.

Immediately after the session ended, ODOT director Kris Strickler sent an email to all employees, warning of 600 layoffs. That message was consistent with agency messaging over the past year, but still came as a jolt.

“ODOT is finalizing the list, and we expect hundreds of workers to receive layoff notices on July 7,” SEIU spokeswoman Pati Urias tells OJP.

The ODOT budget bill, which was separate from HB 2025, showed that layoffs would fall most heavily on ODOT’s maintenance workers, who perform the basic, essential duties of keeping the state’s 8,000 miles of highway and 2,700 bridges in good working order.

The agency is a vast presence across Oregon. It owns or leases 1,200 buildings, including 88 maintenance stations and 59 DMV field offices.

In the legislative session’s final week, Democratic leaders worked themselves into a frenzy, trying unsuccessfully to pass some version—any version—of a multibillion-dollar transportation funding package that was supposed to be the centerpiece of the 2025 session and stave off cuts to ODOT’s current service level.

Lawmakers focused enormous amounts of energy on the department’s budget, even though polling conducted on the funding package showed Oregonians ranked transportation far down their lists of concerns.

All those efforts failed, despite a last-minute push by Gov. Tina Kotek. Formerly the longest-serving House speaker in Oregon history, Kotek worked the building furiously in the session’s final hours, to no avail.

In a post-session press conference, the governor bashed legislators for leaving two days before the statutory end of session, calling their failure to fill ODOT’s funding gap “disappointing.”

“The Legislature adjourned two days before constitutional sine die without meeting even the basic needs of our transportation system,” Kotek added in a June 28 statement, using the Latin term for session’s end.

Melissa Unger, executive director of SEIU Local 503, used the same word repeatedly in an interview with OJP about the looming ODOT layoffs.

“Our members are disappointed generally that we didn’t figure out how to pass this package,” Unger says.

“As a union we often try to do hard things. Oregonians expect our elected officials to do hard things. Did elected officials do what they needed to do to keep our roads, highways and bridges safe and our traffic moving? The answer is no.”

SEIU, the state’s largest public employee union, with more than 72,000 members, wields enormous clout in Salem. The union’s main political action committee spent $2.2 million supporting Democratic candidates in 2022 and $1.8 million last year. Its ability to mobilize members for door-knocking, phone-banking, and other activities adds additional value.

The union’s support helped elect Kotek and gain Democrats the supermajorities in both chambers required to pass new taxes—like the transportation bill, which in its largest incarnation would have yielded about $15 billion over the next decade.

That amount and skinnier versions ultimately proved too much for lawmakers to swallow, but Unger says she’s hopeful Kotek and legislative leaders will find a way to create a more palatable package, either in a special legislative session or in next year’s short session. In the meantime, SEIU is scrambling, hoping ODOT will cut only vacant positions and find every penny of savings it can.

“We are trying to do everything we can to save these jobs right now,” Unger says. “Workers are very stressed out.”

Commission expands rules where you can ride your e-bike

JEREMY C. RUARK
Country Media, inc.

Electric-assist bicycles (e-bikes) are now allowed on trails where other bicycles are allowed unless specifically prohibited at Oregon State Parks. E-bikes are also allowed on the ocean shore on wet sand except where specifically restricted.

Previously, e-bikes were only allowed on trails that were at least 8 feet wide. Signs will be posted on trails and areas where e-bikes are not allowed, and the trails and areas will be listed on the Oregon State Parks website.

Where e-bikes are not allowed:

- On the dry sand along the ocean shore, including soft sand, dunes and everything above the natural high-tide line
- On the wet sand below the natural high-tide line in snowy plover habitat on the ocean shore during nesting season (March 15 to Sept. 15).
- Elijah Bristow State Park (all trails)
- Willamette Mission State Park (all equestrian trails and the Vision Trail)
- Clyde Holliday State Recreation Site (Riverside Trail)
- Emigrant Springs State Natural Area (Lewis and Clark Trail)

When considering e-bike use on the ocean shore, the Oregon Parks and Recreation Department (OPRD) Commission reviewed input from the agency’s rule advisory committee, public comments, and OPRD staff.

“Based on that input, the Commission determined that allowing e-bikes on the wet sand presents minimal environmental impact while supporting broader access to recreation,” OPRD Policy Coordinator Robert Ellison said. “At the same time, the Commission maintained important protections. Riding e-bikes on dry sand remains prohibited to safeguard sensitive species and habitats, such as nesting snowy plovers and fragile dune vegetation. The Commission also adopted rules that prohibit e-bike use in designated marine protected areas, ensuring continued protection of Oregon’s coastal resources.”

Prior to the Commission’s decision, OPRD conducted a public involvement process about the e-bikes, which generated 165 comments, with 123 expressing concerns primarily about speed differences and safety hazards on narrow trails.

“Many advocated for segregated access based on recreation type, while 38 comments supported the proposed language, emphasizing increased accessibility and minimal trail impact compared to traditional bicycles, according to Ellison.

“Overall, public feedback highlights key concerns

E-bikes have been allowed in Oregon State Parks on paths 8-feet or wider. Updated rules from the Oregon Parks and Recreation Commission has expanded where they’re allowed as of July 1 this year.

around safety, maintaining quiet natural recreation spaces, and preventing potential environmental harm, while support centers on improved accessibility, consistent regulations, and the belief that e-assisted bikes, when operated responsibly, function similarly to traditional bicycles,” he said.

Ellison added that the OPRD will monitor the use of the e-bikes along the beaches and in the state parks to make sure they are safe and fit environmentally.

“We are concentrating enforcement efforts on rider behavior, particularly when that behavior poses a public safety concern, threatens Oregon’s natural or cultural resources, or negatively affects wildlife within our parks and along the ocean shore,” he said. “To support responsible use, OPRD will also focus on public education. This includes outreach through social media, informational flyers at select trailheads, and appropriate signage in areas where e-bike access is prohibited as well as contact with visitors when necessary. Our goal is to promote safe, respectful recreation while protecting the natural integrity of Oregon’s parks and beaches.”

The updated rules also include stronger and clearer language on safety, particularly operation around other visitors, pets, children and equestrians, according to Ellison.

“We ask that all riders ride responsibly, stay on designated trails and yield to others at Oregon State Parks and the ocean shore,” Stub Stewart State Park Ranger Aaron Raines said. “Please keep operating speeds low as people might not be aware that riders are approaching. These are multi-use pathways where they will share the trail with many other users.”

The rules apply to Class 1, 2 and 3 e-bikes as defined by the Oregon State Legislature. Anything not included in those e-bike classifications is considered a motor vehicle and is not allowed on trails.

E-bike classification:

Class 1: Provides assistance only when the rider is pedaling and ceases to provide assistance when the bicycle reaches the speed of 20 mph.

Class 2: May be propelled by its motor without a rider pedaling and ceases to provide assistance once the bicycle reaches a speed of 20 mph.

Class 3: Provides assistance only when the rider is pedaling, ceases to provide assistance when the bicycle reaches the speed of 28 mph, and is equipped with a speedometer.

While education remains the primary focus for rule enforcement at Oregon State Parks, enforcement rangers do have the authority to issue citations, which carry fines starting at $100 for significant or repeated violations of park rules.

Safety tips for sharing the path:

- Yield to pedestrians, horses and slower users
- Announce yourself when passing (“On your left”)
- Ride at a safe, controlled speed, especially on corners or in high-use areas
- Slow down near pets, children and equestrians
- Stay on designated trails: do not ride off-trail
- Be prepared to stop: e-bikes are heavier and often faster than regular bikes so increase your following distance to allow for more time to stop and slow down.

The OPRD Commission approved the proposed OAR changes allowing E-Assisted Bikes (Class 1, 2, 3) April 23.

For more information and a list of trails where e-bikes are prohibited, visit Oregon State Parks website at <https://stateparks.oregon.gov/index.cfm?do=v.page&id=131> or, contact the Oregon Parks and Recreation Department at 800-551-6949.

Dairy Princess gifts June Baby Basket to Kotties

Tillamook County Dairy Princess Ambassador Simone Ferguson gifting the June baby basket to the first baby born in June at the Tillamook Regional medical center of June dairy month. It's a girl, Quincy Kottie, born on June 2nd at 6:02 p.m. to parents of Maicee and Nick Kottie. Weighing 8 pounds and 6 ounces and 20 1/2 inches long. Family: Sandy and Mike Kottie, and Ashley and Jason Lane. The Tillamook County Dairy women would like to thank everyone who donated to the 2025 June baby basket.

New benches installed at Rockaway Nature Preserve

A younger guest expressed it perfectly by saying, "It's like we're in Jurassic Park." The second most frequented destination in Rockaway Beach is the Nature Preserve, known locally as The Big Cedar. To reach this stunning Western Red Cedar, visitors can walk along a boardwalk that stretches more than half a mile in either direction. As people venture deep into the ancient forest, the atmosphere grows serene, prompting hushed conversations.

However, for older guests, there wasn't a resting spot until they reached the halfway mark or found themselves at the Big Cedar. All of this changed with the installation of two specially crafted benches by the Rockaway Public Works. Along the boardwalk, there are multiple turnouts designed to facilitate wheelchair navigation. Nevertheless, placing a bench in those areas would hinder wheelchair users from passing through. Collaborating with the bench maker Pilot Rock, a distinctive design was developed that allowed the bench to extend beyond the edge. This initiative aimed to provide a place for people to relax and appreciate the wetland surroundings while maintaining sufficient space for passage. Rockaway Public Works successfully set up the benches, enhancing the walkway with an additional accessibility feature.

OHA urges parents, caregivers to avoid recalled baby food

Following reports of lead poisoning cases in two counties, Oregon Health Authority is urging parents and caregivers to avoid using a baby food that has been recalled by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration. Two cases of elevated blood lead levels in babies were detected in Oregon. During interviews with the families, investigators determined the children consumed the flavor affected by the recall. The cases followed a recall alert in March of more than 25,000 packages of a baby food called Good & Gather Baby Pea, Zucchini, Kale, Thyme Vegetable Pu-ree. The product was sold in 4-ounce containers. No other flavor of the product has been subject to recall. Good & Gather is a Target store brand, and the product was sold nationwide at the company's stores. The FDA has since labeled the recall a Class II event, which means that use of or exposure to this product "may cause temporary or medically reversible adverse health consequences," but the probability of serious health impacts is low. While the FDA recall is considered "terminated," the product has a best use date of December 2025, so there may be families with the product still in their homes. Lead is of special concern for babies, toddlers and children because even small amounts of lead may affect behavior, cognitive development and academic achievement, according to American Academy of Pediatrics. "While lead is toxic for all people regardless of age, small children are especially at risk because they're still growing and developing," OHA Childhood Lead Poisoning Prevention Program Coordinator Ryan Barker said. "Continued exposure over time can permanently damage their central nervous system, which may result in long-term health problems, such as learning disorders, impaired speech and brain damage." Signs of lead poisoning are not always easy to see and can be mistaken for other illnesses. Without a blood test, lead poisoning may go undiagnosed, especially since affected children often don't look or act sick. Possible signs of lead exposure and symptoms in children include: • Tiredness or loss of energy. • Hyperactivity. • Reduced attention span. • Irritability or crankiness. • Poor appetite. • Weight loss. • Trouble sleeping.

• Constipation. • Aches or pains in stomach. Last year Oregon had 361 lead poisoning cases in children, with 237 affecting children younger than 6. The most common cases are due to ingesting paint and paint dust containing lead, but exposures from traditional cosmetics, glazed pottery, and informally imported spices have been identified. More information about blood testing and lead can be found on the following online pages: • CDC's Testing Children for Lead Poisoning • Pediatric Environmental Health Specialty Units'

Recommendations on Management of Childhood Lead Exposure • Oregon Health Authority's Childhood Lead Poisoning Prevention Program Oregon health care providers and laboratories are required by law to report certain diseases and conditions, including elevated and non-elevated lead test results, to local health departments or OHA. For more information, visit OHA's lead poisoning in Oregon page, and visit the CDC's Childhood Lead Poisoning Prevention Program page.

Drazan blasts ODOT messaging after legislative failure

By Nigel Jaquiss
Oregon Journalism Project

House Minority Leader Christine Drazan (R-Canby) reacted strongly to an email Oregon Department of Transportation director Kris Strickler sent to agency employees last week in the wake of the Legislature’s failure to pass a transportation funding bill.

In her response July 2, Drazan was combative: “Stop the gaslighting and do your job, director Strickler,” she wrote.

Strickler originally communicated with the agency’s nearly 5,000 employees right after the session ended, warning that layoffs loomed for about 600 of them.

“This is the hardest message I’ve ever had to send in my career,” Strickler wrote June 28 at 9:03 pm.

“Moments ago, the legislative session ended without the Legislature passing a transportation funding package providing ODOT with either new funding, funding flexibility, or even an interim step so we would not have to take immediate reductions,” he continued. “The leadership team and governor pushed to the very end, including the governor testifying on a bill this evening. Because of this inaction, we are forced to make significant cuts starting this month.”

Although Democrats hold the three-fifths supermajorities in both legislative chambers that Oregon requires to pass new taxes, none of the various versions of the transportation funding bill generated enough support to result in a successful floor vote.

Lawmakers have cited a variety of explanations for the failure. Among them: Republican intransigence; the late arrival of the bill, which didn’t appear until the second week of June; and overreach on the part of Democrats, who initially proposed a $15 billion tax hike over the next decade, an increase that was difficult for members in swing districts to support. A slimmed-down version, which would have raised about $12 billion, was no more digestible, and a last-gasp, 3-cents-per-gallon gas tax increase failed to earmark any funding for local governments.

Underlying the failure: a general lack of confidence in ODOT among many lawmakers. Perhaps nothing captured the agency’s reputational issues in the Capitol more clearly than when a senior department official admitted to lawmakers early in the session that ODOT had made a billion-dollar error in its budget.

In his end-of-session email, however, Strickler repeated the agency talking points that had not convinced lawmakers of ODOT’s case:

“For many years, this agency has informed the Oregon Legislature that a structural revenue issue driven by flattening and declining gas tax revenue, inflation, and statutory restrictions on available funding would eventually force the agency to dramatically reduce its staffing and service levels if no intervention came forward,” he wrote.

Drazan didn’t appreciate that framing. Her caucus and Senate Republicans had urged ODOT to make significant cuts rather than seek so much new money.

“I have read your lengthy email to ODOT employees,” Drazan wrote. “Make no mistake, this is an offensive abrogation of duty. Throughout this legislative process you have on behalf of your agency failed to take full responsibility for a culture of careless fiscal management, political doublespeak, and blame shifting.”

Drazan blamed Strickler’s boss, Gov. Tina Kotek, for failing to engage with Republican leaders on ODOT’s budget and chastised the agency for declining to work with GOP lawmakers.

“ODOT refused to respond to questions and instead obfuscated and dodged hard conversations,” Drazan wrote. “It appears you have since spread the false narrative that your agency leadership was working tirelessly to build awareness and support for their work.”

Drazan said ODOT and Democratic leaders deserved the result they got.

“You advanced backroom deals that failed to pan out,” she wrote. “Public employees should understand that by choosing to exclusively engage in political gamesmanship you and the governor gambled and lost.”

She added: “I would respectfully say you have no business playing the hero in staff emails, while stoking fears among ODOT’s workforce and conjuring up false narratives with imaginary villains.”

Of course, 2026 is an election year, and Drazan, who ran against Kotek in 2022, losing by 3.5 points, is keenly aware of that. But her tone suggests two things: First, the business community, which depends on a well-functioning transportation system to move its products and whose members are Republicans’ financial supporters, is not in a conciliatory mood.

Second, Kotek’s intimations that she plans to call the Legislature into special session to pass stopgap funding for ODOT face a significant obstacle as Republicans are clearly not feeling much pressure to fall in line.

ODOT and Kotek did not immediately respond to requests for comment on Drazan’s email.
