Tillamook man charged with murder

Authorities said a man was found dead after an assault was reported in Tillamook. At around 5:35 a.m. on Saturday, Dec. 7, Tillamook Police Department officers responded to a residence in the 2600 block of Sixth Street in Tillamook on a report of an assault. Officers found a dead man inside the home and determined that a suspect had fled on foot. Multiple law enforcement agencies converged on the area, finding the suspect in the vicinity of Eighth Street and Stillwell Avenue. He was arrested without further incident and taken to the Tillamook County Jail, according to a report from the Tillamook County Sheriff's Office. The dead man was identified as 43-year-old Jeffery A. Carr Jr. of Tillamook. The suspect was identified as Michael Joseph Blaser Jr., 35, of Tillamook. Blaser was held at the Tillamook County Jail on the charges of second-degree murder and first-degree assault. Jail records listed his bail at $50,000. Court documents said police responded to a stabbing report to find Carr dead in the residence. Witnesses told police they saw Blaser stab Carr in the chest with a large

Recall against State Rep. Mitchell fails

Hilary Dorsey

A recall effort against an Astoria-based congresswoman has fallen flat. Timber Unity announced Wednesday, Dec. 4, that the effort to recall State Rep. Tiffany Mitchell (D-Astoria) from her elected position representing District 32 in the Oregon House of Representatives failed to gather the required number of signatures to force a recall election. The effort to recall Mitchell was launched on Sept. 6, in response to Mitchell's votes in support of House Bill 2020's cap and trade taxes, among other issues. Supporters of the recall had up to 90 days to collect 4,883 signatures needed to force a recall election. The signatures were due by Dec. 4. "Up here on the North Coast, we were shocked to learn how Rep. Tiffany Mitchell voted against her constituents," the recall campaign's chief petitioner, Darren Mead, said on Timber Unity's social media account. "She hasn't been elected more than a year yet proved she will put Portland's agenda over our working-class families and small businesses," Mead said. "We are not 'well-connected' people, and we responded in one of the only ways we knew how." Mitchell responded by email to a Headlight Herald request for comment on the recall's failure. In her email, she said she was relieved that recall effort had ended, adding that she is pleased to serve the people of her district in the work she was sent to Salem to do. "In preparation for the 2020 short session, I am working on several concepts designed to help working people and to increase access to primary care in rural areas like ours. I look forward to securing those wins for our district and the state," Mitchell said in the email. Mitchell will be hosting a series of constituent listening sessions in January. The Tillamook listening session is set for 10 a.m. to noon Sunday, Jan. 5, at Tillamook Bay Community College in room 214.

Salmon fishing banned on Wilson River due to die-off

Fishing for Chinook is banned for the rest of December on the river from the Blind Slough to Jordan Creek. More than 200 salmon were found dead just this week. A press released from the Oregon Department of Fish & Wildlife (ODFW) said upstream water levels are low, causing the salmon to stay further downstream. That is helping spread a parasite believed to be responsible for the die-off. The river upstream of Jordan Creek is already closed to salmon angling by permanent rule. In response to reports from the public of dead, pre-spawned adult fall Chinook, ODFW surveyed the lower river earlier this week, finding at least 200 dead adult Chinook. ODFW said evidence of scavenging and deeper holes with limited visibility likely means the number of mortalities is higher than observed. Examination of Chinook carcasses by ODFW Fish Health staff confirmed the presence of cryptobia. ODFW said the closure is necessary to protect remaining fall Chinook adults to allow them to reach spawning grounds, according to Robert Bradley, district fish biologist for ODFW's North Coast Watershed District. "The fall Chinook run is below average to begin with this year, so this substantial loss of fish could affect recruitment of fish for future years," Bradley said. In addition, current river conditions are expected to continue for at least a week, which is likely to contribute to further loss of potential Chinook spawners from the parasite. Although cryptobia is present in other basins, no substantial mortalities have been observed in other rivers on the north coast to date. Angling for steelhead is unaffected by this change and remains open under permanent regulations. For more information about North Coast fisheries, including regulation updates, visit ODFW's online fishing reports at www.myodfw.com.

Police request assistance with poached elk case

Police requested assistance to find who is responsible for the unlawful killing and wasting of a bull elk and a cow elk in Tillamook County. The Fish and Wildlife Division of Oregon State Police (OSP) issued a statement on Thursday, Dec. 5, asking for the public's help regarding the unlawful killing and wasting of a 4x5 bull elk and a cow elk in Tillamook County. OSP said troopers were dispatched to a report of a dead bull elk the day prior to releasing the statement. The dead bull elk was located around three miles up Kansas Creek Road in an area known as Hembre Ridge between the Wilson and Trask Rivers. The bull elk was killed using a rifle and left to waste with no meat removed, according to police. Further investigation led to the discovery of a deceased cow elk nearby. Neither elk was reported to be salvageable, and it appeared both elk had been shot within the past few days. OSP is asking anyone who was in the area or anyone who may have information

Trailkeepers of Oregon hosts Oregon Coast Trail Party at Cape Lookout

headlightreporter@countrymedia.net

Trailkeepers of Oregon is hosting an Oregon Coast Trail Party from 9 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. Saturday, Dec. 14, at Cape Lookout State Park.

The Trailkeepers, along with volunteers, will be doing brushing on the North Trail by the suspension bridge. The Trailkeepers of Oregon is a state-wide organization that hosts six to 10 trail parties a week. Coast Stewardship Manager of Trailkeepers of Oregon, Susan Schen, said the group has worked on the north and south trails at Cape Lookout in the past. Schen said volunteers will be clearing vegetation on the North Trail and using saws to cut branches. The Trailkeepers prioritize safety and fun over quantity of work accomplished and encourage people to try different things and work at a comfortable pace. The Trailkeepers and volunteers will hike down and work in the morning, break for lunch by the suspension bridge, and work a bit more in the afternoon before tidying up the work site and hiking back out. They'll end the day with beverages and snacks. They will work in moderate rain but will cancel or leave if weather becomes unsafe or prevents quality work. "It's fun," Schen said of why people should join in on volunteering. Schen said the Trailkeepers focus on safety first, and then fun. "This is a fun way to give back and have some ownership of a trail," Schen said. Bring plenty of water, snacks and a lunch. Wear sturdy boots that will protect your toes from sharp tools, work gloves, long sleeved shirts and pants, possibly rain gear. The Trailkeepers will supply hard hats, safety glasses and spare gloves. No experience is necessary, and coordinators will show volunteers how to use the tools for the day. The Trailkeepers will provide hard hats and spare gloves. The hike is one-mile total with 400 feet of elevation gain. Detailed directions will be provided via email two days before the work party. The Oregon Coast Visitors Association provides funding for Schen's job as the coast stewardship manager. Schen

Rockaway Beach ordinance sets tax to fund fire chief

Rockaway Beach held a public hearing in November to introduce and discuss an ordinance that would create a tax to fund emergency services, particularly fire services. Rockaway Beach City Council voted in December 2018 to hire a full-time, paid fire chief. The new tax would be used for that expense. A revenue line for the tax was included in the budget, but the cost was not determined at the time. During the public hearing that was held Nov. 13 at the regular city council meeting, it was announced the tax would be set at $5 per single-family home within city limits. Those who live outside of city limits but inside the local fire district already pay a fire service tax. There is reportedly more than $400 million in property to protect for the Rockaway Beach area. City officials said there was discussion around whether the tax should be a separate bill or included on utility billing, but the potential benefits of separate billing were outweighed by the reported $6,000 in postage costs to go that way. The tax is more likely to appear on water bills as a "fire service fee." "It may be a reality check for some people here tonight," said Luke Sheperd, the Rockaway Beach public works director who is temporarily serving as city manager. "But it's really no secret that for a long time now - and despite the best efforts of the fantastic volunteers we have - we've been trying to keep up with the times." Sheperd said the requirements and standards imposed on the Rockaway Beach Volunteer Fire Department have dramatically increased over the years and the old model is no longer sustainable. A report that was compiled on Rockaway Beach's fire department was summed up by Sheperd in one conclusive line: "the analysis revealed that fire department is not capable of meeting national or state recognized standards for emergency response." "For a department whose sole function is emergency response that's a big problem, and quick action needs to be taken here to fix that," Sheperd said. "Fortunately, in the same report they laid out a plan on how to get the department where it needs to be within a year ... that's really what this ordinance is about; it's bringing the revenue now we need to hire a fire chief that can quickly get the emergency response from our fire department where it needs to be." The hearing was opened for public comment. Around 10 people spoke to the council, most supporting the need to fund the fire chief position, though some asked about additional study into other revenue sources. There were also calls for limiting the tax against future increases and some expressed concern about setting a precedent for creating more new taxes. David Elkins, emergency manager for Rockaway Beach and a former fire chief, confirmed the cost and hours required to keep up with standards and requirements are significant, worthy of a full-time position. He added that fire department capabilities affect home insurance costs for residents, also noting more costly water bill rates in some communities with regard to the proposed funding mechanism for the fire chief. "The city is operating on a shoestring, that's why we don't have all of the resources that we need," Elkins said. "The town is growing ... we have to have the services to support that." City Councilor Kristine Hayes motioned for the council to dismiss the ordinance's first reading at the meeting, voicing concerns that the public had not been given a chance to read it and form an opinion. She said she only received the document a day before the reading was scheduled. Hayes said she supports hiring a fire chief but wants more discussion and public notices first. Hayes' motion was not seconded and failed. City Councilor Terry Walhood motioned for the council to accept the ordinance for a first reading. She said a fire chief is needed immediately, adding that she has been researching ideas such as a tax levy or bond measure as well as forming a joint fire district, methods of funding that would take time and effort to establish, possibly a year or two. Fire officials have said a fire chief could pursue those ideas better than a volunteer staff because of the effort required. "This is going to help us now, and help protect everyone," Walhood said in reference to the tax. She suggested setting a limit on the tax would be unnecessary if alternative funding streams could be secured. Hayes noted that with staff shortages in city administration and half of the fiscal year done, the cost for hiring a fire chief could be covered at this time without instituting the tax. She also expressed support for a joint fire district with nearby Garibaldi. The two cities

Food assistance program changes may hit 19,000 in Oregon

At least 19,000 Oregonians could lose government food assistance under a new federal rule finalized Thursday, Dec. 5, according to a report from the Oregon Department of Human Services.

The rule will restrict states' ability to allow certain adults to receive benefits for more than three months in a three-year period if they aren't working or training at least 20 hours a week.

The change in the Supplemental Nutrition Assistance

Program (SNAP) was approved despite more than 140,000 negative public comments. It is expected to affect 700,000 SNAP recipients nationally once it takes effect in April.

Oregon, like most states, has used waivers to extend benefits for longer than three months to a group of SNAP recipients known as "able-bodied adults without dependents" (ABAWD) if they live in areas with high unemployment and limited job opportunities. This group includes individuals ages 18 through 49 who don't have disabilities, don't have children or other dependents and are considered able to work.

In January 2020, Oregon has approved waivers for 31 counties for ABAWD work requirements, which will now expire on March 31, 2020. Federal changes to eligibility requirements for waivers will limit the areas in Oregon that meet the requirements starting April 1, 2020. As a result, this means only six counties may be eligible to receive the waiver.

"SNAP plays a critical role in addressing hunger and food insecurity," said Fariborz Pakseresht, Department of Human Services director. "SNAP benefits assist Oregonians during difficult times to help make ends meet, in particular those working low-wage or who are between jobs."

"For those already facing difficult circumstances, this rule exacerbates those circumstances. It also will result in an increased burden on food banks and other community resources to fill the void," Pakseresht said.

Areas requesting federal waivers must have unemployment rates at least 20 percent higher than the national rate but not less than 6 percent. The Bureau of Labor Statistics indicates unemployment rates for people without a high school diploma or GED are often more than double average unemployment rates. Other groups that face additional obstacles when seeking steady employment include agricultural workers, veterans, former foster youth, formerly incarcerated people and rural residents with limited transportation.

In addition to administering SNAP benefits, the Department of Human Services said it provides workforce development and training opportunities to help Oregonians secure a living-wage job.

The plight of our salmon

Jill Williams
Last year when ODFW [Oregon Department of Fish and Wildlife] closed the Wilson River to fishing above tide-water early, I wrote a lengthy letter to Fish and Wildlife to ask a few questions and offer up some suggestions. I am an avid fisherman, a passion only negligibly shared compared to that of my husband. We live on the Wilson River in the house my husband was born in, which is on the old family homestead property, lived in on by the Williams family since the late 1800s. Family stories and personal experience over many decades have given us first-hand knowledge and a front row seat as to the plight of our salmon over the years. There is not just one issue affecting the returns of this species! Yes, seals and sea lions take a cut. Yes, cormorants Target and thousands of smoke trying to make it out to sea. Yes, there are other countries that have a huge impact in ocean waters. Yes, we have overfished our own resource here in the Pacific Northwest. But, there are other things affecting these fish as well. Huge pens stick out like a giant scab on the waters around Canada, the breeding grounds for farm-raised Atlantic salmon. A species that carries a virus that could easily spread to wild salmon as well as competition for food and spawning beds when escapee-ment from pens becomes inevitable. Add those troubles to the fact that the Native Fish Society, along with other similar groups, loaded with money for lobbyists, have reduced the ability to produce hatchery brood in support of wild returns. Do not fool yourselves, there is no longer a native salmon left in Tillamook County. One has only to look at pictures of the original native fish harvested in the late 19th to early 20th century to see today's Wild Runs are nothing like those that once filled the rivers and streams of our valleys from bank-to-bank. Hatchery salmon have played a part in the sustainability of these fish since the late 1800s and yes it has changed the very fish themselves. However, without this very program these fish would have reached this crisis stage for their existence long ago. Hatcheries and fish boxes manned by local landowners, have been critical in the establishment of fish runs returning to their birthplace year after year. These fish in turn spawned with the natives and over the last century, we

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Permanent value

The 1941 Forest Aquisitions Act says that state forests should be used for the greatest permanent value. Permanent means forever. The State of Oregon owing communities a billion dollars for not allowing unregulated logging is wrong. There is no forest mismanagement as Republican lawmakers claim. In 1941, I am sure many Oregonians believed in the value of clean air, clean water and habitat protections along with logging. The fate of our environment and our forests being determined by a single law suit in Linn County is also wrong. Public education was in the forefront of thought then as it is now. Public education must continue to be considered a right. We must educate our children and grand children through Public Education and not with private for profit schools like Secretary of Education and multibillionaire Betsy DeVos wants to do, by allowing her wealthy friends to exploit American youth. I believe that many of us have realized that sustainable yield is a myth taught to us, to lull us into complacency, while our forests are exploited and depleted. As timber revenue to support public education has waned, we must all seek new sources of revenue to educate our children. What better place to find funding for education than from the National and International profitable corporations who call Oregon home, in name only for the tax breaks they recieve here? We do not owe anyone the right to destroy our forests and environment in the name of public education. Many of the corporations who do not want to fund education in Oregon, have recieved a 14 percent tax cut from Donald Trump and the Republican Party and some pay little if any taxes at all. Republicans in Salem recently all voted "no" to fund education.

Bill Baertlein
Tillamook County Board of Commissioners

After much thought and soul searching, I have decided not to run again for Tillamook County Commissioner. I will be 70 years old in January of 2021 and want to spend some more time traveling, fishing and gardening. My daughter has a baby on the way and I am looking forward to becoming a grandpa. I want to thank my spouse for encouraging me to be a Commissioner and putting up with me being consumed by the position for two terms. It has been a huge burden on her workload in running what has now become her CPA Firm. I also want to thank those who supported me at the ballot box and shared my vision of a healthier and thriving community for all citizens. As one born and raised in a 1950s working-family, I have brought the passion and commitment for our working-class families to my position as a commissioner daily. This passion for helping the working-class is what I will most miss. Being a county commissioner has been and continues to be a joy for me. I look forward to getting to the office every day and I still have the passion for making Tillamook a better place for those that call it home. I know I have a reputation for stirring the pot and throwing rocks in the pond and that will continue up to my last day in office. You can't make positive change without stirring things up and waking the community to the needs of so many of our neighbors. Finally, just because I will be retiring as a commissioner after this term doesn't mean that I will be going quietly into the night. I will still have a few rocks for the pond and a stirring stick, a much smaller stirring stick for sure, but still enough to keep things interesting.

GUEST COLUMNS

A closer look at waste management in Tillamook County

David McCall
Tillamook County Solid Waste

As the county's Solid Waste Program Manager, and thereby the individual tasked with overseeing and coordinating recycling and garbage operations in Tillamook County, I feel obliged to respond to an article in the Dec. 4 issue of the Headlight Herald (Oregon generating more waste, recycling less, p. A9).

The report cited is the "State of Recycling in Oregon," but its 14 pages include only a few paragraphs of Oregon content. The majority of the report — while correct — relays general information relating to the entire nation. Unfortunately for local readers, no local information is provided. We know that living in Tillamook County is quite different than downtown Portland, where recycling, composting, and other services are more easily accessible. It is important to provide our local residents with local information, to better understand the whole story, and how we fit into it.

It is true that we landfill about one ton of waste for every full-time resident living in Tillamook County. Statewide (or national) reports note only the increase in quantities of waste generated, or that locally our quantities have increased on a per capita basis. No mention is made of the increase in tourism experienced in Tillamook County, which naturally results in additional waste, and is divided amongst our full-time residents.

When the Department of Environmental Quality releases its 2018 report in a few weeks, we will see that despite the financial collapse of recycling markets throughout the world, the quantity of materials recovered in Tillamook County has increased each year during the past three years. Locally we have actually increased our recovery rate since 2016 from 26.1 percent to approximately 28 percent. Due in part to our rural setting, less than 2 percent of our waste is subjected to energy recovery. What we call recycling is truly recycled or composted — and anyone asserting that we send our recycling to a landfill is just generating fake news.

Tillamook County has a recycling program that is working, and is sometimes seen as an example in the industry. A small, dedicated team of staff members are complimented by committed haulers and operators and two dozen Master Recyclers, all of whom do their part in helping ensure that businesses and the public throughout Tillamook County have a viable, sustainable system in place.

Even though our recycling system may not be as convenient as the curbside programs offered in most urban areas, we have opportunities available to each and every resident of Tillamook County throughout the year. Together we can continue to increase our recycling numbers, and preserve the natural environment we cherish. Never before have I encountered a community that cares so much about preserving its natural environment — and that care translates into caring about recycling.

Thank you for doing your part in ensuring that Tillamook County's program remains a leader, and for realizing that there's more to the story than can be gleaned from a short national report.

David McCall is the Tillamook County Solid Waste Program manager.

Wildfire report: 20-year projection says tens of billions in costs

The Governor's Council on Wildfire Response has released its report predicting the cost of extended wildfire seasons will exceed tens of billions of dollars over the next 20 years.

Studies suggest the comprehensive costs of wildfire are, on average, 11 times greater than the immediate costs of firefighting. With firefighting costs exceeding $500 million during high-fire seasons, comprehensive costs to Oregonians can total several billion dollars in a single year. The indirect costs of wildfires are high, too — according to another report, the health costs caused by wildfire smoke in Oregon in 2012 was over $2 billion.

Gov. Kate Brown (D) thanked the council members for their efforts. She created the Council through executive order in January, tasking them to compile comprehensive recommendations and a cohesive strategy to deal with the increasing difficulties posed by wildfires and smoke, tailored specifically to the challenges faced in Oregon.

"This report is a somber reminder that, left unchecked, warming temperatures across the globe will create a

have had the strongest and best of that culmination.

With so many more obstacles to surpass, why wouldn't we do everything possible to help turn the tide for the wonderful inhabitants of our ecosystem?

I haven't even touched on the issue of dredging the bay and mouth of the rivers to allow for better flow and maybe flushing out the silt that also impedes the productivity of the salmon migration. Lower water, such as this year, is not unheard of, but with the deep holes of the past filled with silt there are less and less places for them to hold up in their migration to spawn and those areas are then targeted by everyone.

My letter, referred to at the start of this op-ed, was replied to. Not every subject had a response and many responses were not what I considered acceptable solutions.

Instead of looking at the dollars to be made from this resource let's first look at how to save it, so that it still exists in our future, by every means possible. Closing one river, too late in the season, only adds to the pressure in other rivers that exhibit similar symptoms. I, for one, would sacrifice a few years to do whatever it takes to save this precious commodity for future generations.

TLT Tourism-related facilities grant round opens Dec. 11

The Tillamook Board of County Commissioners (BOCC) is pleased to announce the opening of a tourism-related facilities grant round, opening Wednesday, Dec. 11. To bring us up to present, the county collects transient lodging tax (TLT) from qualifying overnight rentals throughout Tillamook County. Thirty percent of those funds are dedicated to the roads department. Of the remaining 70 percent, the county manages about 55 percent of the funds for investment in local facilities that serve visitors. The definition of facilities in this case is broad, encompassing brick and mortar facilities, such as the Tillamook County Fairgrounds, an accessible restroom for Tillamook Association for the Performing Arts (TAPA), the Tillamook Forest Center Pavilion, the Tillamook Area Chamber of Commerce Visitor Center facade renovation, the Faye Jensen Hall at the Kiwananda Community Center, an auditorium renovation at the North County Recreation District, a kitchen upgrade at the Rockaway Beach Civic Facility and accessible bathrooms at Kilchis Point Trail. In addition to stick built facilities, funds have been used for the Carnahan River Boat Dock, the Cape Kiwanda Beach Access, engineering for the Oceanside Beach Access, trails (including tsunami evacuation trails) at Nehalem Bay State Park, Salmonberry Trail planning, the Port of Garibaldi Event Center Tent and Visitor Information

Booth and the Tillamook Coast Old Growth Forest Center Preserve in Rockaway Beach.

In all, nearly $2.6 million has been awarded to date on 50 tourism-related facilities projects throughout the county. For the past year the BOCC has been engaged in a strategic plan for future investment of TLT facilities funds. This planning grew out of a desire to be strategic about our investments and to have a plan that reflects how the public wants us to use the funds. Many people participated in the planning process via community listening sessions and surveys both in person and online conducted by Future iQ.

The conclusion of the planning process was emphatically clear: the community wants us to invest TLT facilities funds in trails, to protect and enhance our natural resources and in infrastructure, with an emphasis on parking and restrooms. They want us to manage the impact of tourism through destination management as opposed to attracting more visitors. This message came through loud and clear and was consistent throughout the county, from every demographic group. The upcoming and future grant applications for facilities funds will be weighed using new measures that support sustainable tourism and the priorities of Tillamook County citizens.

This brings us to present. The county has been sitting

No immediate plans to demolish school at Underhill Plaza: City

Manzanita city officials released a statement on Tuesday, Dec. 3, announcing no immediate plans to demolish the old school building at Underhill Plaza. A bond measure to build a new city hall building where the school stands failed in November.

“We want to thank everyone again for voting,” Manzanita Mayor Mike Scott said in the statement. “We were saddened by the results of the election, but the community has spoken clearly on the issue for now.”

“The voters made it clear that they would like to see additional options and would like to see more public meetings,” Scott said. “We will listen, compromise and find common ground to eventually build a great facility for the City of Manzanita.”

The statement cited an engineering report that said the “elementary school is in poor condition and appears to have suffered from many years of deferred maintenance and neglect.” The same report said the Quonset hut is in fair condition for a building of its age, and in far better shape than the elementary school.

In March 2019, after hearing the second engineering assessment, the Manzanita City Council made the decision not to consider options for the new city hall project that included use of the old school, but to further explore the potential uses of the Quonset hut. A second engineering report said it might be more expensive to remodel than to build new, according to city officials.

That statement from city officials said the council has not had further conversations about both buildings since then but will start public discussions next year. The current Underhill Plaza tenants, North Coast Watchman Services and Howell’s Floor Covering, were originally given a year notice to relocate but have since been given extra time.

“City council is now taking a break from this topic through the holiday season and will take up the new City facilities project again at the first of next year,” the statement said. “In the meantime, the City will work on addressing the critical immediate needs of the City offices until a permanent solution is identified.”

“As we look forward in evaluating the new City facilities project, we welcome your thoughts and ideas in developing community solutions,” the statement said.

on TLT facilities funds in anticipation of completion of the strategic plan. We have approximately $3.3 million to allocate. In the facilities grant round that will open Dec. 11, $875,000 will be available for community facilities grants and $1.5 million will be available for county managed facilities projects. The remainder will be held in reserve. The county managed facilities projects will include big ticket items for which the county is a lead, sponsor, or key participant. This is a new approach that considers communities like Oceanside, Neskowin and Pacific City that produce most of the revenue but do not have city employees to write grants or manage projects.

The December 2019 facilities grant round will bring us up to speed in terms of public investment of funds. Thereafter the tourism-related facilities grant program will be annual, opening every year in July. Future grant rounds will likely be for smaller total amounts, commensurate with annual TLT revenue. In other words, the first grant round will be bigger because we have been saving up the revenue for a couple of years.

Please find the tourism-related facilities grant applications and instructions on Dec. 11 on the county website at www.co.tillamook.or.us/gov/Bocc/TLTFacilities.htm. The round will close on Friday, Feb. 7, 2020 at 4 p.m. We look forward to seeing all the facilities and project proposals that our community puts forward. year-round risk of wildfires — with a price tag to match,” Brown said. “Make no mistake: if we do not act to address the climate crisis immediately, we will quickly face the prospect of paying the exorbitant costs of wildfire response during a fire season that never ends.”

“The devastation left in the wake of recent wildfires across the west is yet another alarming reminder of how this generation and the next will bear the costs of climate change—in lost dollars, homes, and lives. If we do not act now, Oregon’s grandchildren will be left to pay an appalling price,” Brown said.

The council report calls on federal, state, and local governments, as well as the private sector, to invest in strategies to reduce wildfire risk and protect communities from the impacts of wildfire. Over a century of land management practices that have allowed fuel for wildfires to accumulate far beyond historic conditions, combined with the climate impacts that have made fire seasons longer, drier, and hotter, create significant challenges for all Oregonians. Direct wildfire suppression costs for the Oregon Department of Forestry over the last seven years have grown six fold. In 2018, combined state and federal costs for direct wildfire suppression alone totaled about $533 million in Oregon.

Left unaddressed, the risks to human life and property, as well as the costs of wildfire suppression in Oregon, will only continue to grow. According to the council’s report, restoring 5.6 million acres of forest to mitigate wildfire risk requires an investment by the public and private sectors of $4 billion in the next 20 years, an average cost of $200 million annually. The council’s report recommends the state begin addressing the issue immediately by allocating $145 million for wildfire response costs in the 2019-21 biennium.

The council’s report also contains a range of recommendations for the governor and Legislature to consider for Oregon’s future wildfire management based on national and global best practices in fire prevention, management, and suppression. The report addresses the broad and complex spectrum of wildfire impacts—offering short-term, mid-range, and long-term solutions to protect human health and communities.

Tracking gray whale behavior, spotting their poop off Oregon Coast

Sean Nealon
Oregon State University

Using drones deployed in the air and GoPros underwater, Oregon State University marine ecologist Leigh Torres recently completed her fourth field season documenting previously unseen behaviors of gray whales — and gathering their poop — off the Oregon coast.

Torres and her team use a 17-foot inflatable boat to track gray whales right off the shoreline, around Newport. Once they see a whale, they drop a GoPro underwater to see what the whale is eating and deploy the drone overhead to watch behaviors and gather data about the size of the whales to understand more about their health.

And, if they are lucky, the researchers spot and gather poop, which further helps them understand whales’ health and biology.

“We are using these relatively new technologies to do health check-ups on the whales,” said Torres, who works at the Marine Mammal Institute, which is based at Oregon State University’s Hatfield Marine Science Center in Newport. “We’re able to see differences in individual whales and how those change over time. It’s opening up new ways to understand the lives of whales.”

This past season Torres and her team captured drone footage of 102 gray whales and recording from 105 GoPro camera drops. Behaviors they filmed included whales breaching, surface feeding, snaking through kelp in search of food and feeding on the seafloor bottom.

They also collected 58

"WE WANT TO BE A PLACE WHERE PEOPLE WANT TO WORK AT."

Not all businesses survive the transition to a second generation. Not all siblings can manage a company side by side. Yet after 40 years, Zwald Transport of Tillamook continues to grow and thrive.

Owned and operated by a second generation sister and brother combination, Heather Taksdal and Nick Zwald, who seem to complement each other's strengths perfectly, Zwald Transport now runs a fleet of 23 trucks in Oregon, Washington, Idaho and Utah.

It was Heather and Nick's dad, Ken Zwald, who founded the company in 1979, hauling hay on a flat bed. In 1982 Zwald Transport acquired its first milk route for the Tillamook County Creamery Association. In 1986, Ken hired his first additional driver, Wayne Schroeder, who still drives for the company.

"I've been involved in the business in some shape or form for most of my life," remembers Nick, who obtained his CDL soon after graduating from Tillamook High School. After obtaining a business degree in college, Heather worked at a truck brokerage in the Portland area. In 2004 their dad asked her to return to Zwald Transport, where she has worked ever since.

Heather and Nick gradually took on additional responsibilities and in 2015 purchased the family business from Ken and his wife, Nonda. Since then, the company has aggressively grown; obtaining additional milk routes, starting new divisions, and upgrading equipment.

Today Zwald is a diverse transport company that includes a refrigerated freight hauling division that transports Tillamook Cheese product to four states, a log hauling division transporting raw wood product to mills along the Oregon coast, a flat bed division hauling lumber from local mills to stores in Oregon and Washington, and of course the company's long standing milk routes for the Tillamook County Creamery Association.

Heather and Nick each focus their energy on providing outstanding service to their clients and making sure that Zwald Transport has an exceptional work environment. "We want to be a place where people want to work at," explains Heather. "Without our employees, there is no business," adds Nick.

Zwald Transport's 45 employees enjoy a generous suite of benefits including medical insurance, dental supplement, life insurance, paid time off and a retirement plan. As large as the company has grown, Heather and Nick still strive to maintain a family atmosphere, and consider that atmosphere "very important for our employees".

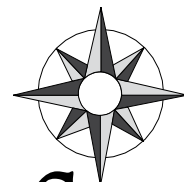

"Maybe the smartest choice we made was choosing our bank," says Heather. Nick recalls that shortly after they had purchased the business from their dad, the company faced a crisis. Because of a plant closure, Zwald's vacuum tanker division lost a key client. Overnight, one third of the company's revenues had evaporated. Heather and Nick called Joe Postlewait at Oregon Coast Bank. Joe visited immediately and offered to finance equipment for a new division hauling logs, a division that soon grew and exceeded the lost revenue. In Nick's words: "We may not be here today had it not been for Oregon Coast Bank believing in us."

Not only has Zwald Transport grown into one of the central coast's major employers, its trucks now distribute locally-made products throughout four states. That's quite an achievement. On a lighter note, it's also salvation for parents. Next time your kids are quarrelling, remind them that some siblings actually get along. Heather and Nick do, and look what they've accomplished.

Sara Charlton, Director of the Tillamook County Library, announces retirement

Sara Charlton, Director of the Tillamook County Library, will be retiring June 1, 2020. Sara has been the Director of the Tillamook County Library since 1991. Prior to moving to Tillamook, Sara was Interim Director, Reference Librarian and Outreach Librarian at the Marion County Library in Fairmont, WV, 1978-1984. She served as Director of the Mifflin County Library in Lewistown, PA, 1984-1991. Sara earned a BA in Music from the University of Charleston; a Masters in Library Science from the University of Pittsburgh. She earned a Master of Public Administration at Penn State and is a graduate of the University of Oregon Pacific Program. Charlton's accomplishments at the Tillamook County Library began with automating the old card catalog and updating library management services, 1992-1993. Charlton participated in the formation of the Coastal Resource Sharing Network, a consortium of libraries working together to provide library services to residents along the Oregon Coast, 1992-2010, and was President of the Network for 18 years. She was instrumental in the installation of Internet to all Tillamook County Library branches. She created the Oceanbooks Network to share library resources between the Tillamook County Library, the Driftwood Library in Lincoln City and the Newport Public Library. She worked with the South Tillamook County Library Club in Pacific City to build the South Tillamook County Library in 1995 and the Rockaway Beach Friends of the Library to build the newest branch in 1999, the Rockaway Beach Library. The new Tillamook County Main Library, a 15-year project, was completed in 2006. Other accomplishments include the formation of a virtual branch, available at www.tillabook.org, that offers e-books, databases, audiobooks, movies, tv shows, graphic novels, music and newspapers to the public, 2008 to present. 2016 RFID was added for security, self checks and library management. Charlton's latest project is working with the Tillamook County Library Foundation to create the new Library Park. The Library Park was made possible because of a generous gift from a former Tillamook County Library Board member. Sara Charlton served as president of the Oregon Library Association, 1998-99 and has been a member of the Tillamook County Library Foundation from 1991-present. She was Chair of the Oregon Library Association Legislative Committee from 2000-2004 and a committee member from 1995 to present. In 2002 she was Chair of Programs for Oregon and Washington Library Association Joint Conference.

She was a member of the Tillamook Kiwanis Club from 1991-2008. Member of the Oregon State Library LSCA 1995-1997 and LSTA 2005-2008 committees. Sara was also a member of the 2009 and 2014 Oregon Reads programs. She participated as a member of the Oregon contingent at National Library Day in Washington, DC, 2007-present and served as a member and Chair on the Committee for Library Day at the State Capital, 2007-2019. Chair of the Oregon Library Association 2010 Conference with the National Public Library Association. Charlton also served as President and member of Tillamook County Arts Network, 2013-2019. Member of the Oregon Library Law Committee 2012. She was an Advisor Committee Member of the Tillamook County Future Council from 2014 to present and a member of the Bay City Planning Commission, 2012-present. Charlton was Chair of the Bay City Pearl Festival, 2014-2016. She has also served at the national level as a member of the American Library Association Public Library Association Legislation and Advocacy Committee, 2015-2019, and as Chair from 2018-2019. From 2017-present she assisted with the ukulele programs for the public at all Tillamook County Library branches. She enjoys playing the 12-string guitar in the band; her dogs, cats and ferrets and working on her historic craftsman house and huge yard. She also enjoys tap dancing whenever possible. Sara would like to thank everyone who has helped to make the Tillamook County Library one of the best in Oregon. She would like to thank the community and let our residents know it has been an honor working with them over the last 29 years.

"This, to me, is an open checkbook and I won't vote for it," Hayes said. She later added that in the budget meeting it was said that the tax would be public noticed and go to a vote of the citizens.

Hayes said the budget process related to the fire chief had been done backwards, approving the line item without a corresponding revenue source. She also presented a news article in which a city council was recalled over a similar tax, warning of possible backlash from voters.

"I want everyone that benefits from the service to pay for their fair share and not just those with water meters" Hayes said.

Hayes said it would be better to have full public support before approving the tax. She also said she had voted for a study of the fire hall structure, not the departmental analysis that recommended a paid chief and cost $10,000.

Disputing the $6,000 estimate given to mail the tax bills, Hayes said it could be done for around $1,500, but she also pointed to available space in the city newsletter as an option. She also said the ordinance includes three separate line items and asked if the tax is strictly to pay for a fire chief, why not have a single entry or an emergency services fee that be used for all.

The first reading of the ordinance was approved with support from all council members except for Hayes. An additional hearing and vote on the ordinance are expected at a coming meeting. The next meeting of the Rockaway Beach City Council is slated for 6 p.m. on Wednesday, Dec. 11.

Northwest Dance Academy to perform at Five Rivers, Kilchis House retirement homes

headlightreporter@countrymedia.net

The Northwest Dance Academy (NWDA) will be performing at two retirement homes Saturday, Dec. 14. They will begin at 1 p.m. at Five Rivers and perform again at 3 p.m. at Kilchis House.

Kayla Jenck, director of the NWDA, said since opening, she has wanted to be involved in the community and give back. Growing up, she performed dances at retirement homes, and said people there always enjoy it.

NWDA teaches high quality dance training in a positive family-friendly environment. They offer classes in: ballet, tap, jazz, contemporary, hip hop and acro/tumbling from ages three and up. Their program offers dance for the recreational dancer, and an opportunity for those dancers who would like to compete as a pre-professional dancer.

The dancers that will perform signed up during Christmas Camp. Camp dates were in October and November.

“There are 15 people, ages four to eight h grade,” Jenck said.

“It shares a talent with a group of people who may not be able to see it otherwise,” Jenck said of why this performance is important.

The NWDA is preparing for their annual recital in June and a competition in Portland in January. Jenck said this performance at the retirement homes helps share the love of dance with the community.

fecal samples. After spotting whale poop, the team has about 20 to 30 seconds to swoop in with a fine mesh net and scoop up some of the material before it sinks to the ocean floor. These fecal samples are then taken to the lab and analyzed for hormone levels and genetics.

Every year, some 20,000 gray whales, which can be more than 40 feet long and weigh more than 30 tons, migrate between the breeding lagoons of Baja, Mexico, and the feeding grounds off British Columbia and Alaska, often passing close to shore along the Northwest coast.

For some reason, about 200 of these whales annually cut short their northern migration, opting instead to stay along the coastline from northern California to Washington throughout much of the summer. Although they don't live year-round off the Northwest coast, they are known informally as Oregon's summer "resident" gray whales.

Their near-shore migration has spawned a popular whale-watching industry along the Oregon coast that in 2009 was worth an estimated $29 million – a figure likely higher today.

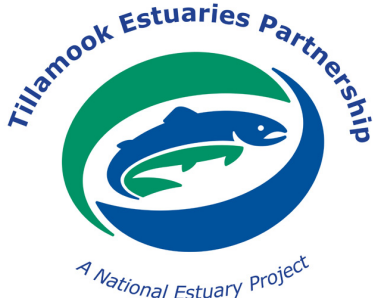

When Torres arrived at Oregon State in 2014, she said she was surprised there was not more research conducted on Oregon's "resident" gray whales. She attributes this to the difficult coastal ocean working conditions (frequent wind, swell and fog) and the fact that gray whales are not currently threatened or endangered.

But because these whales are abundant and stay close to shore, they are a relatively easily accessible research subject, allowing Torres to apply her research findings related to gray whales to help other whale species', such as blue whales and right whales, that are threatened.

The research from Torres this past field season was funded with proceeds from the sale of an Oregon license plate featuring gray whales. The Marine Mammal Institute receives proceeds from the sale of the Oregon gray whale license plates and uses the funds for marine mammal research, education and conservation.

Girls soccer 2019 season highlights: All-league players, honorable mentions

countrymedia.net

With last year earning their first league win ever, the Tillamook girls soccer team are making great strides in the soccer world, said Coach Hannah Snow Roberts, having a record-breaking season this year with a 2-4-2 in league play and 6-6-2 this season. The girls ended up being tied for third in the league with Astoria.

Oregon School Activities Association ranked the team 22, barely missing play ins.

All-League players were Clare Atchison, captain and senior; Breanna Maciel, senior; Maleah Upton, captain and senior; Angelica Valencia, junior; and Coleen Kralik, freshman and keeper of the year award. Snow Roberts said Kralik's award was well deserved with her amazing saves this year.

All-League Honorable Mentions were Adriana Rico, sophomore; and Dulce Salazar Ochoa, captain and senior.

"These ladies have shown great leadership both on and off the field," Snow Roberts said. "We have an amazing group of girls in our program and I am excited to see the many more successes life has in store for them."

Tillamook boys' Soccer team: All-League, Honorable Mentions of 2019

Hilary Dorsey
headlightreporter@

The Tillamook boys' soccer team finished the 2019 season fourth in the league, 27th in the state with a 4-9-1 record.

"The team struggled with consistency over the course of the season by playing some very brilliant games only to be followed up with less than stellar performances," said Coach Brian Reynolds. "Eight of the 11 starters are slated to return, so this was an opportunity for a younger team to grow."

1st team All-League players were Bryan Contreras, senior midfielder (four year varsity letter earner); Everardo Hernandez, senior midfielder (four year varsity letter earner), scored or assisted in 11 of the team's matches, nine goals and nine assists; and Ethan Miller, senior forward (two year varsity letter earner), set a team single season scoring record with 14 goals, and also had four assists.

Carter Affolter, a midfielder, was an All-League Honorable Mention, who set a new Freshman single season record by scoring four goals. He added three assists to that as well. Bruno Monroy, a sophomore and a midfielder, was an Honorable Mention. He had one goal and three assists.

Often derided as pests, deer and elk can help Douglas-fir trees

Steve Lundeberg
Oregon State University

Long considered pests by forest managers, deer and elk can help Douglas-fir seedlings thrive under certain vegetation management conditions, a five-year study by Oregon State University shows.

The research, published today in the Journal of Applied Ecology, is important because global demand for forest products continues to rise and because wildlife conservation is often viewed as a hurdle to meeting that demand. The findings quantified the effects of intensive forest management on wildlife and wildlife habitat.

OSU College of Forestry scientists found that deer and elk can play a key role in controlling the broadleaf vegetation, such as alder and maple, that compete with the "crop trees" – the Douglas-fir seedlings – in the replanted clear-cuts deer and elk heavily rely on for forage.

This sort of benefit is called an "ecosystem service." Deer wand elk generally prefer to eat broadleaf and herbaceous vegetation but will eat Douglas-fir seedlings if they're reachable.

Experimental plots in the Coast Range of northwest Oregon – home to some of the most economically productive forests in the world – showed that deer and elk perform that valuable ecosystem service for the Douglas firs, but not under the management conditions the researchers had predicted.

Postdoctoral researcher Thomas Stokely, the study's corresponding author, and Matt Betts, professor in the Department of Forest Ecosystems and Society, hypothesized that if competing vegetation was left untreated by herbicides, the deer and elk would eat it and thus promote growth among the crop trees.

Each of their study parcels reflected a different level of herbicide spraying – none, light, moderate and intensive. To determine what effects deer and elk were having or not having, the parcels included exclosures – areas with tall fencing around them – to keep the animals out.

"What we expected, since deer and elk are often considered plantation pests, is that if we sprayed the broadleaf vegetation and removed their forage initially, they'd do more browsing on crop trees," Stokely said. "And we thought that if we left the broadleaf vegetation untreated, by eating all of those trees and shrubs they'd perform an ecosystem service and actually promote crop tree growth. What we found was the opposite."

Where the vegetation treatment was intensive, deer and elk provided the second part of a 1-2 punch that kept the Douglas-firs' competitors completely under control.

"In the non- and lightly treated areas, we essentially found that the crop trees could not get above browsing height," Stokely said. "There was too much competition – the crop trees were more susceptible to being crowded out and browsed, and the growth of crop trees was less with herbivore access than where they were excluded."

In the moderately treated areas, which reflect common management practice in the Coast Range, it was something of a mixed bag: The deer and elk browsed crop trees "quite a bit" in some instances but did play a positive role in crop tree survival in others. Furthermore, herbaceous forage became more available for deer, indicating plantations can provide both wood for people and food for wildlife.

"Wildlife agencies and managers have gone to great lengths to deter browsing and rarely considered how vegetation management might change herbivore behavior," Stokely said. "Overall, we found the effects of vegetation management for promoting timber production are highly dependent on the presence of large herbivores."

The U.S. Department of Agriculture, the National Council for Air and Stream Improvement, the Oregon Forest Industries Council and the OSU College of Forestry supported this research.

Commercial Dungeness crab season delay continues

The opening of the commercial Dungeness crab season will be delayed until at least Tuesday, Dec. 31, along the entire Oregon coast, as testing shows crabs are still too low in meat yield in half of the areas along the coast.

The ocean commercial Dungeness crab season in Oregon is targeted to open Dec. 1 but can be delayed to ensure a high-quality product to consumers and to avoid wastage of the resource. Crab quality testing in late November and early December showed that many areas within the Tri-State region still did not meet the criteria for an opening. The delayed opening will allow for crabs to fill with more meat.

Testing will continue to determine if the season should open Dec. 31, be further delayed, or be split into separate areas with different opening dates. In conjunction with the delayed ocean commercial season, commercial harvest of Dungeness crab in Oregon bays is now closed for the remainder of the year.

Recreational crab harvesting is currently open coastwide in the ocean, bays and estuaries, and on beaches, docks, piers, and jetties. Recreational crabbers should always call the Shellfish Hotline (800-448-2474) or check ODA's Recreational Shellfish webpage for closures before crabbing.

Commercial Dungeness crab is Oregon's most valuable fishery. Last year's delayed season opening still brought in the second highest ex-vessel value ever ($66.7 million) with 18.7 million pounds landed, just above the 10-year average.

Tillamook hosts 17th annual Christmas Tree Lighting

Hilary Dorsey

The 17th annual Christmas Tree Lighting Ceremony and Festivities took place Saturday, Dec. 7, at the Second Street Plaza. The fun started at 3:30 p.m. with snacks and treats, cookie decorating, a coloring contest, Christmas entertainment and photos with Santa. The tree lighting took place at 5:30 p.m., followed by the Holiday Light Parade.

There was free food in the form of hot dogs, cheeseburgers and fries. Hot chocolate and ice cream were also available. Kids in a variety of age groups won the coloring contest and were able to pick out a stuffed animal as a prize.

A short Light Parade followed after the tree lighting and included holiday characters Santa Claus and The Grinch.

Coast Community Radio wins Oregon Cultural Trust Grant

Coast Community Radio (CCR), the nonprofit radio station in the Columbia-Pacific region, has received a $19,401 grant from Oregon Cultural Coast. Station Manager Graham Nystrom wrote the grant for money toward the Radio For Good (RFG) campaign. The trust awarded CCR $19,401 toward phase two of RFG project, a three-year plan to repair, replace and update all of their broadcast equipment from microphone to transmitter.

"We are incredibly grateful that the Oregon Cultural Trust sees the importance of our services, and that they acknowledged the need for our equipment to be updated and reinforced," Nystrom said in a press release. "I hope the NW Coast never sees another storm like we did in 2007, but with the help of community members and grant-making foundations like the Oregon Cultural Trust, Coast Community Radio is doing its part to be prepared. Plus, in the meantime, we'll keep bringing you great community radio."

WELLNESS

Holiday self-care: You are worth the time.

10 or 20 years ago, I would have never imagined myself sitting cross legged in front of a makeshift altar of sorts. On it are pictures of my dog I recently lost, a candle, some sort of crystal, a cup of coffee, and a deck of cards with inspirational messages printed on them. My obese, other-abled cat pushes open the door and flops down beside me as I draw a card, read the day's message, and light the candle. Then I sit. And do nothing but breathe for five to ten minutes, sometimes stretching a little. Then I blow out the candle, try to take one word from the message to revisit during the day, and leave the space in the search for more coffee. My day can start now.

During the holidays, it's easy to let the small rituals of self-care slip. Our schedules are usually more hectic, and we often are pulled in many directions while still having to work, take care of our families, and navigate the chaos of the holiday season. But having a daily ritual can provide us with a cornerstone to get through our day.

The ritual doesn't have to be elaborate. It can be writing before the household wakes up, doing yoga, walking the dog, or anything that fits your lifestyle. It can be anything that nourishes you in some way, a small gesture or action that becomes a healthy habit of self-care and self-recognition.

And rituals do not necessarily mean being alone. Maybe you go to an exercise class on a regular basis or go to church on Sunday. The main take away is not to stop, especially when it's easy to when we are rushing through the holiday months.

If you don't have a ritual or daily habit that nourishes you, set an intention to start one. Take a "forest bath" every morning, write, meditate, do artwork, knit, color, or anything that is not interrupted by distraction, and something that is just for you.

You don't need an altar or crystals. All you need is ten minutes dedicated to quieting your mind. The physical benefits are a bonus as well.

It might be difficult to make the commitment and get started, but once you have it as part of your daily routine, you won't want to let it go. If you have a daily ritual, keep doing it, especially during this time of year. If you don't, give it a try. You are worth the time.

If you are looking for a place or community where you can start or continue your self-care practices, consider attending FREE weekly yoga classes taught by Sydney Elliott, Monday and Wednesday 12:00 – 1:00 pm. Class will start the first Monday of Winter Term 01/06/2020 at Tillamook Bay Community College, and is for all skill levels! You may also visit Sydney's website at SydneyJelliott.com to learn more about her background in writing, editing, and various yoga practices.

OCDC presents 'The Nutcracker'

Capture the magic of the holiday season with Oregon Coast Dance Center's 13th annual, "The Nutcracker". Performances will be held Friday, Dec. 13 at 7 p.m. and Saturday, Dec. 14 at 2 p.m., in the Tillamook High School Don Whitney Auditorium.

Lisa Greiner, owner of Oregon Coast Dance Center said "13 years is a lot of Nutcracker performances, and every year, after the show I think 'how are we going to do this again and make it unique?'. Magically things always come together and shows from year to year change and improve. This year in particular is exciting as we have several older students who are dancing en pointe (aka toe shoes) for the first time. Rehearsals have been so exciting for all of us!"

Local dancers from ages 3 to 65 will perform in this wonderful, family-

friendly Christmas tradition. "The Nutcracker's" magical story follows a young girl who falls asleep after a Christmas Eve party at her house. As she sleeps, she dreams herself into a fantastical world where her beloved Nutcracker comes to life and defends her from the Mouse King. The Nutcracker Prince takes her to the Kingdom of Sweets where she is greeted by the Sugar Plum Fairy and characters from different countries, who all perform for her. At the end of the night, she wakes up, back at her house, and wonders if it was real...or just a dream?

These performances serve as a fundraiser for Oregon Coast Dance Center's not-for-profit Performance Group. Admission is $5/ person at the door, doors open at 6:30 pm on Friday Dec. 13 and 1:30 p.m. on Saturday Dec. 14.

Oregon Coast Dance Center has been offering dance and performing arts in Tillamook County since 1975, with locations in Tillamook and Nehalem. For more information visit www.oregoncoast-dancecenter.com or call 503-842-7447.

The Wisdom of WIT

WIT by Margaret Edson, which won the Pulitzer Prize for Drama in 1999, tells the story of a brilliant professor who suddenly finds the tools of academia useless in her journey to come to terms with her diagnosis of ovarian cancer. Liz Cole created the leading role in the first production of the play in 1995 at the South Coast Repertory in Costa Mesa, CA, where she won the L.A. Drama Critics' Circle Award for Outstanding Performance.

"The Wisdom of WIT" is Cole's solo version of the play, a piece she has performed numerous times across the country. Like the play, this version is both heart-wrenching and humorous, and explores the beauty of simplicity and the puzzle of our irrevocable fate.

Liz Cole now brings this solo version to the Hoffman Center for the Arts in Manzanita.

Liz Cole has had a long acting career on the professional stage, and has also made TV guest-star appearances on Seinfeld, ER, Star Trek, The Practice, Judging Amy, Las Vegas, and many others.

Cole has performed locally for various benefit events (Lower Nehalem Land Trust, Food Roots, Rinehart Clinic, Nehalem Valley Historical Society). She appeared in the original solo play Lost Pioneer, which she developed with Mark Beach and Portland playwright Ellen West. The play, presented seven times in Tillamook County, is based on the lives of three women who homesteaded in the county in the 1890s, and blends biographical data with historical imagination.

A demo reel of selected TV appearances by Cole is available online at www.megan-cole.net.

The Art of Aging/of Dying Series is a program of the Hoffman Center for the Arts, located at 594 Laneda Avenue, across the street from the Manzanita Library. Further information is available at <https://hoffmanarts.org/art-of-aging-and-dying/>

'Elvis Has Left the Building' cast announcement

The Tillamook Association for the Performing Arts (TAPA) would like to present the cast for its upcoming production of Elvis Has Left the Building, which was written by V. Cate & Duke Ernsberger, and is directed by Ann Harper. In the front row of the photo are Sandra Kooops as Trudy and Whitney Wilks who plays Jill Tanner. Both women have previously entertained Barn Community Playhouse audiences. The back row introduces to the TAPA stage James Meritt as Elvis' manager The Colonel, Jason Hovey as Roscoe, and Edward Egging as Candy.

Elvis Has Left the Building is set on Dec. 20, 1970 in the Colonel's office with Elvis nowhere in sight. No one can find him, and hilarious things happen as they desperately try to locate the king of rock and roll.

Performances will be Jan. 24 through Feb. 9, 2020. Friday and Saturday shows are at 7 p.m. while Sunday matinees begin at 2 p.m. The opening night gala offers theater-goers complimentary appetizers and a beverage.

Tickets to this comedy may be purchased at tillamooktheater.com or reserved at 503-812-0275.

Hoffman Center for the Arts Gallery call for art

Artists wanted for "Green Piece" show in January 2020! This is the Hoffman Center's fourth year of celebrating creativity and community with a "Color" art show during the month of January. This is a fun event demonstrating the wide range of imagination and skills of the many people who live here.

We invite Tillamook and Clatsop county artists of all mediums to participate. The theme this year is the color green, featuring a wide variety of art forms inspired by the color green and created by our community of North Coast Artists from Astoria to Tillamook. Art includes ceramics, collage, fiber, drawing, painting, photography, and sculpture.

One (1) piece of Art is due by Thursday, Jan. 2, 2020 between 2-4 p.m. and must include the color green. Artists must prepare artwork for easy and secure hanging or display using professional art hanging hardware. We aim to display at least one piece of art per person as determined by space.

To kick off the show and celebrate the grand re-opening of the Hoffman Center, there will be an artist's reception on Saturday, Jan. 4, 2020 between 2-4 p.m. with refreshments and good cheer. This event is free and the public is invited to attend, enjoy the gallery, and view the repairs and renovations completed during December: two loos, improvements to the Gallery, repainting of clay studio floor, and deep cleaning of surfaces and recesses within the building.

The show, "Green Piece," will continue every weekend through Feb. 2, 2020. Items will be offered for sale with 70 percent commission to the artist and the remainder to the Hoffman Center for the Arts.

The Hoffman Gallery is a program of Hoffman Center for the Arts and is located at 594

Laneda Avenue in Manzanita.

Silver Bells and Diamonds

Monday Musical Club of Tillamook presents "Silver Bells and Diamonds," starring The Diamonds from 2-4 p.m. Sunday, Dec. 22, at Tillamook High School. This holiday entertainment is suitable for all ages. In 1957, The Diamonds released their instant million selling song, "Little Darlin'," one of the most memorable rock and roll hits of all time. The song continues to sell worldwide and has been dubbed the National Anthem of Rock and Roll. To date, it has sold approximately 20 million copies.

Through the years, The Diamonds have helped to keep classic rock and roll music alive and they continue to expand their audience, performing in a variety of venues and settings worldwide.

"We've been pleased to find a growing audience among all age groups," The Diamonds said in a press release. "They love songs they can understand, remember and actually sing the words to - today, tomorrow or even 20 years from now."

The Diamonds' many accomplishments over the years include: three Gold Records, 16 Billboard hit records, 33 appearances on American Bandstand, American Graffiti soundtrack, Happy Days soundtrack, Vocal Group Hall of Fame, and Doo-Wop Hall of Fame.

A major reason for The Diamonds' longevity as performers and entertainers lies in the diverse backgrounds of individual members of the group. Members of the band are Gary Owens, Michael Lawrence, Adam Marino and Jeff Dolan.

FENCEPOSTS

What a surprise to see a burned-out car sitting in the parking lot at the Mema-loose boat launch when we were headed into Tillamook one recent morning. The teal Ford Escort sedan had flat tires, broken-out windows, no front grill or license plates, and was blackened by fire. All we could find out, in asking around, was that it appeared to be burned and abandoned there on purpose; two gas cans were later found nearby. The car has been towed away now; a mystery.

We traveled to Aumsville to have Thanksgiving dinner with our daughter Nicole “Coco” Miller and her family; it was delicious. We didn’t drive far enough south to run into the “bomb cyclone” the weather folks were talking about—high winds, low barometer pressure, blizzard-like snow conditions—but Rod and Mary Jane Pelson were headed that way. They went down to Grants Pass to have Thanksgiving with their son, Jeff Pelson, and his family at Jeff’s in-laws’ house. Fortunately, Rod and MJ waited until mid-morning Wednesday to leave Cape Meares and missed the worst of the weather. Close call, however.

Temperatures have been in the 20s overnight; we saw ice along the shores of tide-water sloughs on our way into town for Tillamook’s Small Business Saturday. We kicked off the tour at the Chamber of Commerce, enjoying cocoa and cookies, and then headed to Madeline’s vintage store where we found a “treasure.” Next it was north to Second Street and the Salty Raven, where Cape Meares owners Seasons and James were doing a brisk business. We bought T-shirts adorned with images of characters from Seasons’s “Flock of Gerrys” book; so cute. We crossed the street to the liquor store; one of the grandkids is now 23 and had an expensive bottle of scotch on his Christmas list—Santa’s elves handed that one off to us. A quick stop to enter our receipts in the Chamber’s weekly drawing (this week’s special grand prize is $1,000) and then it was up the road to the Blue Heron for lunch. Have you seen their new metal sculpture? It’s a beauty. I bought a T-shirt there and we took lunch home to watch the Civil War; way to go, Ducks.

Mark your new calendar for Small Business Saturday on Nov. 28, 2020. It’s a great way to support local businesses while crossing some items off your family’s Christmas lists.

The next community holiday event is the caroling party on Dec. 17. Come to the old schoolhouse at 6 p.m. with some Christmas cookies, if you have been baking, and a strong voice. We’ll sing carols and sip hot cocoa, perhaps augmented with a dollop of peppermint schnapps. All Cape Meares residents are welcome.

Just a reminder that starting January 7, 2020, Robert “Butch” Freedman will be offering a six-session workshop on memoir writing on Tuesdays from 6-8 p.m. at Art Accelerated in downtown Tillamook. Class size will be limited to eight participants; go to www.artaccelerated.org to sign up.

Shout-out to granddaughter Noelle: Happy 11th birthday, sweetheart!

I enjoyed a bottomless brunch last Sunday at Pacific Restaurant in Tillamook. The annual fundraiser was a benefit for Tillamook County Habitat for Humanity, where I serve as Board Treasurer. I was too late to sit with Board fellow Barb Taylor, of Pacific City, but I made it in time to hear an impromptu speech by our President, Debbie Carr. Arriving late probably gave me the leg up to win two of the half dozen silent auction items that I bid on. Folks on my holiday gift list will be blessed by the generosity of the donors as Habitat’s homeowners will be by the proceeds.

Thanks to Wally Nelson, of Hebo, for news from Tillamook Association for the Performing Arts (TAPA).

They have announced the cast for the upcoming production of “Elvis Has Left the Building” which was written by V. Cate and Duke Ernsberger. The comedy will be directed by Ann Harper. Sandra Koops will play Trudy and Whitney Wilks will take the part of Jill Tanner. Both women have previously entertained Barn

Community Playhouse audiences. James Meritt has been cast as Elvis’ manager, “The Colonel.” Jason Hovey will play the part of Roscoe, with the role of “Candy” going to Edward Egging.

Performances are slated for weekends starting Jan. 24 through Feb. 9, 2020. Friday and Saturday shows are at 7 p.m. while Sunday matinees begin at 2 p.m. The opening night gala offers theatergoers complimentary appetizers and a beverage. Tickets to this comedy may be purchased at tillamooktheater.com or reserved by calling 503-812-0275.

Free programs at South Tillamook County Library include Celebration Stories at After School Club at 4 p.m. on December 4. A showing of “The Nutcracker and the Four Realms” is planned when the group meets on December 18. Woven Wednesday, a chance to make progress on sewing or needlecrafts (bring your project), happens those same evenings at 6. Mother Goose on the Loose, story time for babies and toddlers through age three, is slated for 9 a.m. on Saturdays. South Tillamook County Library is located off of Brooten Road on Camp Street in Pacific City.

Remember the free holiday concert planned for Saturday. Tillamook Community Chorus will perform “Sing We Now of Christmas,” starting at 3 p.m. on Dec. 14, at Tillamook United Methodist Church. Andrew Bergh, Tillamook High School and Junior High School Choir Director will direct the chorus. Barbara Richmond, pianist, will accompany them. Admission is free, but a $5 donation per person is encouraged. Refreshments will be served at intermission and there will be a raffle of gift baskets. Guests who make a $5 admission donation will receive one complimentary raffle ticket; tickets will also be offered for sale. For more information about the Tillamook Community Chorus or the concert, contact Mary at 503-812-1830.

Next week’s column will mark thirteen years that I’ve written a weekly column in the Headlight Herald. Thanks to my readers for reading- and for a steady stream of input that is the foundation of the Fencepost. I welcome your calls and e-mails; my contact information is published near my photo in this space. Thanks as well, to my first readers and editors at the paper; they have spared me many an embarrassment whether spotting a typographical error, or fact checking a hear-say detail.

Happy birthday this week to: Quinton Brooks, Tia Craven, Kayla Cross, Brett Elder, Caitlin Fagan, Julie Hagerty, Olivia Hagerty, Darren Hansen, Liz Hurliman, Lucas Jones, Liz Kellow, Ruth Kiser, Maicee Malcom, Corrine Paratore, Amy Schmid, Chase Thomas, Tanya Traxler and Steve Williams.

Thanks to all the people who came out to support the Garibaldi Museum for their Open House after Thanksgiving! Teresa Freeman was very helpful by posting it on Facebook several times, and even came and brought Teresa Munholland. We had several families with their children who came to tell Santa of their Christmas wishes. There were seven dogs that came for a photo with Santa. We even had a beautiful 18 pound cat who wanted a photo! Kids made themselves at home with the hot chocolate bar and cookies right out of the oven, and were entertained with coloring and ornament projects while mom shopped off the ornament trees and gift shop. The Museum Board of Directors had a potluck lunch during the festivities. It was nice that so many people came by to support the Museum. It will be closed down until March, when we will be cleaning and rearranging.

Teachers are still encouraged to call the museum to plan a field trip at 503-322-8411. Please leave a message and the staff will be sure to get back to you.

The Crab Pot Tree Lighting was a huge success! Our thanks to Public Works staff (Martin, Nick, and Jo), and City Staff (Blake, Geoff, and Kylie) who helped work on this project. Jo brought a propane heater which was a huge asset. Thanks to Jeff and Whitney Burns, owners of Pacific Edge Espresso, who braved the elements to serve hot chocolate. City Council members Tim Hall, Melissa Elmore, and Paul Daniels were also there representing the City. It was a mere 28 degrees, so I appreciate all the people who participated in this annual event.

Some of the crowd boarded the 6 p.m. Candy Cane Express Train to Rockaway for the tree lighting ceremony. The Candy Cane Express will be running on the weekends; go on the OCSR website for tickets (before they’re sold out!). Check oregoncoast-scenic.org for schedules and information.

Happy 90th birthday to my Garibaldi “mom” Jean Callilou! Jean worked for the library for many years before her retirement.

The applications are out in the Garibaldi and Bay City Post Offices for the 2019 Garibaldi Lions Christmas Baskets. Our area of service is from Garibaldi to Idaville. Please mail them back to PO Box 597, Garibaldi, OR 97118 before Monday, Dec. 16 so we can arrange for the food. The Giving Tree will be in the Lobby at City Hall, and if you are interested in helping make Christmas brighter for someone this year, please stop by and take a tag. Gifts can be returned to me by Thursday, Dec. 19 for distribution on Saturday, the 21st of December. The Old Mill has graciously allowed us to use their facility for the distribution point. I will be calling after Dec. 16 to schedule a time for pick-up. If you have any questions, please call me at 503-317-1533.

Please remember to take care of yourself and have a stress-free season. Get plenty of rest, drink water, and eat sensibly. Schedule some down time. Try not to overbook or overload your schedule. Remember the reason for the season.

As mom would say: “Thirteen days until Christmas Eve!”

Wow! The Rockaway Annual Christmas Tree Lighting was the coolest event ever! The town was a wonderful display of brightly colored Christmas lights, decorated flowerpots and Christmas themed window. Our town was gloriously dazzling! Be sure to check out inside our city hall too. The Beautification Committee did a fabulous job. Our town’s Christmas tree is perfect! Thanks to all involved in decorating our community. The caboose at the wayside was the only place not decorated, but the rest of the town made up for it. Perhaps next year we could get a committee to help decorate it. Even the Candy Cane Express rolled up, decorated to the max, escorting Santa Claus and his elf and carloads of happy families ready to celebrate the Christmas season.

So, if you didn’t attend the Christmas Tree Lighting, I would guess maybe 300+ folks attended. Santa was a hit and even better, the Salty Strings Ukulele Group of Rockaway Beach performed 16 Christmas songs for entertainment, in spite of the 32-degree temperature. Oh, what fun....

The Holiday Gift Fair was well attended. We went there on Saturday. Amber and I played a special song for our friend, Terri Michael at the fair. There were gorgeous items displayed, to enjoy or buy.

The same day the Brosius family attended the Garibaldi Maritime Museum’s Holiday Open House. Mr. and Mrs. Santa Claus were able to stop by that event too. Our Golden Retriever, Koa, got to meet Santa. He was a little unsure of him, but once Santa gave him a doggy cookie, he won him over. We had so much fun at this event; Amber and I grabbed our ukulele’s and played Sugar/Amber style. Believe me, we do have our own style.

The “Simply Charming” ‘Charlie Brown Children’s Christmas Celebration’ is on Saturday, Dec. 14 from 11 a.m.-5 p.m.! This great Christmas event is located at The Little White Church Antiques building at 344 S. Hwy 101 in Rockaway Beach. At this delightful event there will be a free gift for the first 100 kids to attend, age 10 and under. There will be a Children’s General Store set up for your children to buy presents for their loved ones, priced 10 cents to $1. The proceeds from the Children’s General Store will be donated to a local children’s charity. And, as if that isn’t enough fun, kids of all ages can have free photos with Santa; enjoy holiday snacks, coffee, cider and cocoa. There will be free gift wrapping (holiday bag and tissue), and last but not least, there will be entertainment by the Salty Strings Ukulele Group in the afternoon. How can you say no? This is definitely the event of the year.

While Dale, Amber and I were shopping at the Holiday Fair at the Convention Center in Seaside, we met a delightful couple from Manzanita. Ken and Cindy Erickson introduced themselves to my family. Cindy has an amazing business called the One Big Tree Designs, and her jewelry, designs and art is nothing short of amazing. Check Cindy out on Facebook. Anyway, they read my column. Yay! Hi guys, we loved chatting with you.

The Rockaway Beach Library invites you to stop by and visit their Holiday Table. My friend, Anne McBride has reminded me to thank all the generous folks that have donated wonderful gifts for the gift tables and to Linda and Pat Olson and Marilyn Romine for gathering the gifts and organizing the event. So, if you don’t already know, you pick out gifts from these tables and pay for the items by donation. This is a wonderful fundraiser for the library and will help pay the utilities and keep the doors open. Bring your kids to the library too! They can pick out affordable gifts and surprise family members with a present on Christmas Day. It doesn’t get much better than that.

Once more I want to remind you that the Lions Club would love donations for their Christmas Basket program. They are looking for food, gifts or donations. If you want to help, stop by the club, or find the nearest Lion and tell them you would like to help.

A quick reminder for all the ukulele players in the county, the Salty Strings jam meet at the Rockaway Beach City hall on Wednesday evening at 6 p.m. and the Mookulele group meet at the Tillamook Library on Saturday, Dec. 14 at 1 p.m.. Come early if you are a beginner at the library jam. Ukuleles are available at both jams. It is easy and fun!

“Remembrance, like a candle, burns brightest at Christmas time.” That’s Rockaway Beach, “Sugar Coated!”
