The trolley line from Shinglehouse to Bolivar and Olean had been opened in 1902. An attempt was made in 1904 to build a trolley line from Olean to Coudersport. The boro council of Coudersport granted a franchise, but difficulties in Port Allegany and elsewhere defeated this enterprise. Subsequent events have proved that, even if this project had been carried out, it would long ago have followed the Shinglehouse and Bolivar trolley lines to the realm of the past. The Shinglehouse trolley line is the only electric railroad that ever actually entered Potter County. ( according to "History of Potter County, Pennsylvania," by Victor L. Beebe, 1934, page 227)
