SENATE ASKS PRESIDENT TO ADDRESS CONGRESS BEFORE ADJOURNING

President Will Address Congress Before Adjournment, Fearing Extra Session Would Startle Nation; War Only If U. S. Rights Are Violated

(By Associated Press)
 WASHINGTON, Feb. 22.—The general feeling here is that President Wilson will address Congress before adjournment, and that he will do so in a way that will settle the question of whether or not the United States will enter the war.

One of the reasons for the feeling is that the president has been so long in making a decision, and that the country is growing impatient. Another reason is that the president has been so long in making a decision, and that the country is growing impatient.

On the other hand, it is also true that the president has been so long in making a decision, and that the country is growing impatient. Another reason is that the president has been so long in making a decision, and that the country is growing impatient.

There are also those who believe that the president will not address Congress, and that he will wait until after the adjournment to make his decision.

A delayed communication from the German foreign office was delivered to the department today by Mr. Paul Ritter, the German ambassador.

The German ambassador, Mr. Ritter, was accompanied by a German official, and they were both seen by the press.
