As Camera Sees Tucson Firemen Battling Fire on Star Roof

In the above photograph, taken at the time of the threatening blaze on the roof of the Star-Fox building Tuesday afternoon, there is shown in the lower left hand corner watching the Tucson hook and ladder apparatus being set into use in fighting the blaze. The hose, some of it run from Meyer street, may be seen on the pavement and the ladder, which extended through a mass of telephone and electric light wires to the roof of the building. The picture was taken by Al Buchanan from the eighth floor of the Consolidated National bank building.
