Unmanned NASA rocket is destroyed after liftoff

At a glance

Yesterday's Delta rocket failure was NASA's third unsuccessful launch in a row, including the Jan. 28 space shuttle explosion that killed seven astronauts.

The reliable rocket, was destroyed when a main-engine shutdown about a minute after liftoff sent it out of control.

The rocket had been carrying a $5.7 million weather satellite.

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — An unmanned rocket carrying a weather satellite went out of control and was blown up by ground computers shortly after launch yesterday, the third failure of a space shuttle since the explosion of the space shuttle Challenger.

Just over a minute after liftoff, the Delta rocket's main engine shut down for unknown reasons, leaving it without power and sending it out of control at 1,400 mph, said Bill Russell, NASA's launch manager.

Safety officers then sent a destruct command and finished the job," Russell said at a news conference about an hour after the launch.

Yesterday's launching followed the Jan. 28 space shuttle explosion that killed seven astronauts and the April 18 explosion in California of an Air Force T-34D rocket thought to have been carrying a spy satellite.

The Delta, the space agency's most used and most dependable rocket, had been launched successfully 43 times stretching back to September 1977 before yesterday.

The next scheduled launch from Cape Canaveral is an Atlas-Centaur rocket, scheduled to power a Navy communications satellite into orbit May 22. Charles Gay, a spokesman for NASA's expendable rocket program, said he didn't know whether the Delta issue would affect plans for that mission.

"We have had a loss of the vehicle. There is a tremendous loss of vehicle," launch commander Lisa Malone said on the 1½-hour conference.

The flight appeared normal through the first minute, with the first set of solid rockets jettisoned at 64 and 85 seconds, Russell said.

"We were flying along, and at about 71 seconds, the main engine . . . shut down," he said. "It's a very sharp shutdown, almost as though it were a commanded shutdown, although we were not commanded to do that."

MOSCOW — Two Kremlin leaders were reported yesterday to have visited the area of the Chernobyl nuclear power plant disaster in the first public gesture of official concern about the accident.

Another Communist Party official, however, said that the Chernobyl plant was not dangerously radioactive, and it was not clear how close Premier Nikolai L. Ryzhov and the Kremlin's No. 2 man, Yevgeny Ligachev, were to the destroyed reactor, 70 miles north of Kiev in the Ukraine.

The other official, Moscow party chief Nikolai Tikhonov, said human error likely caused the accident, in which the government's two previous attempts and 187 were徒劳无功. He said steps were being taken to prevent a recurrence.

Four U.S. experts arrived in Moscow yesterday to measure radioactivity with American equipment set up at several spots around the city. The first results were not expected until tomorrow.
