PHOENIX, Jan. 23—Legislative hopes for harmony suffered a rude shock today on the introduction of a bill to expand the Arizona State Teachers Colleges at Tempe and Flagstaff to liberal arts status, a standing now held only by the University of Arizona in this state.

The proposal was defeated in the house, 36 to 23, after a debate in which the state university and its alumni were charged with attempting to "freeze out" the teachers colleges.

Another measure, which would have granted legislative approval to the Arizona State Colleges at Tempe and Flagstaff to liberal arts status, a standing now held only by the University of Arizona in this state.
