 A momentary frozen gasp, the nation, awakened at night to the grim fact of war on the Pacific and America's role in it, awoke and responded accordingly to the reality of repelling attacks on the far-flung islands, ramparts of last homeland.

From Hawaii and villages, and out to sea rapidly from government, consisting of responsible men and various problems in the production of war material, the nation's resources were mobilized.

Major Barbara G. Wheeler, in one of the speeches to the general assembly of the Red Cross, said that the nation's resources were mobilized. She said that the nation's resources were mobilized.

Hawaii is a vital mid-Pacific pivot ground which all U.S. strategy in that sector hinges. From Washington southeast the trans-Pacific steaming lanes radiate, a commanding center of planes and ships, necessary to defend the U. S. west coast. From Hawaii to a base the United States could maintain Japanese communications with strategic Singapore by way of Australia and Burma, and India takes short warpan strike south. Pearl Harbor, now perhaps the world's strongest naval base, is situated for maintenance of hundreds of war vessels. Recently, the active Pacific fleet based there.

 Japanese warplanes made a deadly assault on Honolulu and Pearl Harbor Sunday in the foremost of a series of surprise attacks against American possessions throughout the Pacific.

Three hours later the Japanese government declared war on the United States and Great Britain.

Soon a second wave of Japanese bombers started over Honolulu and Pearl Harbor, and the city was subjected to a second wave of bombing.

The Japanese aggression, which the United States officials had longingly described as treacherous and utterly unprovoked, has been met by the United States with a firm and resolute response.

FRIENDSHIP OF LONG STANDING ENDED BY WAR

Road Traveled by U. S. and Japanese Since 1853 Is Traced

By GLENN BARR
 The friendship of the United States and Japan, which ended yesterday in the flaming battle of Pearl Harbor, had a long history of good will and understanding between the two nations.

The road traveled by the two nations since 1853 is traced in a new book by Glenn Barr, "The Friendship of the United States and Japan, 1853-1941." The book traces the history of the two nations from the first trade mission to the present day.
