CONSTITUTIONAL BATTLE MADE BY LINCOLN IN '60

Review of History Has Recalled Action on Supreme Court

OWN INTERPRETATION

Sponsored Amendment to Constitution to Get Answer He Wished

At a time when the U. S. constitution is being widely discussed and may even become a campaign issue, Lincoln's history is being recalled. Lincoln himself faced a question of today. What it was and how it was solved is being reviewed by Charles Beard, an American historian and political scientist. He is the author of "The Rise and Fall of the Slave Power in America."

By CHARLES A. BEARD
As the Illinois declaration of the nineteenth century drew to a close, Abraham Lincoln sprang into fame on a constitutional issue.

In 1856 the Republican party launched a national campaign on the proposition that slavery should be prohibited by congress in all territories of the United States. To this proposition Lincoln gave his approval.

In the next year the supreme court of the United States in the Dred Scott case, declared that congress had no power to prohibit slavery in the territories. This was a straight blow to the Republican party.

An emergency case finally reached the supreme court. It was the case of Dred Scott. The case was decided against the Republicans. Why not amend the constitution and congress the power which the supreme court had taken away?

Lincoln made a challenge. He proposed an amendment to the constitution which would give congress the power which the supreme court had taken away. This was a challenge to the Republican party.

Missionaries Disobey Order To Leave War Zone, Jailed

American and Canadian, Former Shackled, Finally Win Release on Order of Haile Selassie's Son

ADDIS ABABA, Feb. 11.—A shocked American missionary and his Canadian colleague, held prisoners in the northeastern war zone of a local Ethiopian chief, have been ordered released, it was disclosed today.

The men are the Rev. Harold Street of Paxton, Ill., who is imprisoned with a dog chain fastened to his leg, and the Rev. John Trevelyan of Toronto, who was not shackled.

Street and his four children were held under guard at a mission station. Crown Prince Asfa Wossen of Ethiopia, it was learned, ordered release of the North Americans two days ago, but because of a lack of funds, the release was delayed.

The missionaries, attached to the Italian mission, had been ordered to leave the danger zone when ordered to do so by Emperor Haile Selassie's son.

A letter received by the government from Mrs. Street said her husband had been released on Jan. 27 at their station at Shama. She said her husband had been released on Jan. 27 at their station at Shama.

MISSING FLIER SOUGHT AFTER SHIP IS FOUND

Helms Believed Uninjured And Wandering in Mountains

FRENCH PLANE LOST Not Heard From Since Monday on Trip Across Atlantic

MARCH FIELD, Calif., Feb. 11.—Rain and fog thwarted search today for the missing French biplane which was reported to have crashed in the mountains Dec. 30.

"I am afraid there is very little chance we will find anything," said a commanding officer, Lt. Col. John H. Helms, who was in charge of the search party.

The crash took place approximately 9 p. m. directly on the main road between San Francisco and San Jose.

The plane had been seen flying over the mountains on Monday night.
