

Good Morning TOP of the NEWS

STILL BUNNY. Generally fair weather with little change in temperature...

Clear skies and warm temperatures prevailed over the state yesterday but storms covered the northeast part of the nation.

Global

IRISH PROTESTS. Demonstrators at rallies in Roskilde, Northern Ireland, and in Dublin call for an end to the jailing of suspected IRA members...

CORRUPTION IN MEXICO. Horacio Pizano de la Pena, Mexico's minister of national patrimony, says government corruption is an obstacle to progress.

STORYBOOK ENDING. The 1970 Winter Olympic Games close in Sapporo, Japan, and for the United States hockey team...

National

POT AND HEROIN. The National Commission on Marijuana and Drug Abuse concludes that ending criminal penalties for possessing marijuana could reduce heroin addiction...

HARMS SURVEY. While the public is optimistic about economic recovery, it is pessimistic about the ability of the Pay Board and Price Commission to hold to the guidelines...

GM RECALLS. General Motors Corp. brands "specially equipped" a report in the St. Louis Post Dispatch that the firm will spend $10 million to recall 1968 Buick Wildcat cars...

LOANS TO MAFIA. For more than 10 years, the Lafayette National Bank in Brooklyn — which became the Kings Lafayette Bank in 1960 — has been lending money to reputed Mafia members...

Local

SEWER SYSTEM. Tucson's sewer system — unlike the water system — does not pay for itself through incoming revenue.

YOUTHFUL POLITIC. Tucson's Frank Mash, selected as an alternate to the July 10 Democratic National Convention in Florida...

POST OFFICE SERVICES. The United States Post Office is expanding its services. Under new policies, the agency will cash some checks and will accept personal checks in payment.

Index

Table with 2 columns: Topic and Page Number. Includes Ask Andy, Bridge, Comics, Crossword, Editorial, Good Health, Women.

Time Publishes Excerpts To Prove Irving 'Hoax'

NEW YORK (AP) — Time magazine printed excerpts of Clifford Irving's "Autobiography of Howard Hughes" Sunday and said they proved the book is a hoax...

The Irving excerpts were published in tandem with matching passages from a manuscript written by James Phelan...

FIFTEEN CENTS

Complex Dope Trail Winds Northward From Sinaloa Hills

In the mountains of Sinaloa, Mexico the sun is hot, the cooling breeze occasional.

The hills are green, but beneath their lushness lie thorns and brambles — all but impossible to penetrate.

The last two crops will eventually enter Arizona on the way to California and the world's most lucrative cottage industry, the drug trade.

The cropstems are the knolls, foothills and mountains of the Sierra Madre Occidental — the Devil's Backbone — that forms a ridge of the Sierra Madre Occidental.

There are many ways of handling the marijuana. In the mountains, the more popular method is crumming it into extra-long gummy sticks and sewing them shut with heavy twine.

The farmers have their own system of mid-division. Sometimes these are their sons who have moved to Mazatlan or Culiacan.

To transport the opium — the blackened raw opium — is no problem. It is carried in cans, in turn easily placed in market bags, since as much as 10 kilos is a big bag.

The heavy marijuana poses problems, especially with the army posted along the main streets of towns and with troops now working year-round on search-and-destroy missions in the sierra.

Because roads here are built to suit the needs of the local people, the most of the marijuana transport. The men leading them work their way down the mountains at the deepest hours of the night.

As they near Highway 15, they scout out their prearranged drop points and leave the sacks. Sometimes they just leave them on the roadside.

At this point, the marijuana is ready to go to town. But how to get it past the truck-inspection stations are they approach the cities — hide it under legitimate produce?

"That or put it in false bottoms of the trucks," says Lopez, taxi driver in Mazatlan and part-time lawyer in Mexcala and Pallas.

"I've most often used a false-bottom truck," he said as he drove his taxi around the bustling streets of Mazatlan.

British industry prepared to cut back to a three-day work week starting today — with the threat of a total shutdown by the end of the month — in efforts to conserve rapidly dwindling power supplies.

Electricity cuts, applied on a rotation basis, left thousands of families in darkness after sunset and others with cold Sunday dinners and uneaten foods.

In Burnley, England, a man and a youth were killed by tons of falling earth Sunday as they tunneled into separate coal seams to dig fuel for their fireless homes.

They died at two of the open seam sites which have attracted hundreds of do-it-yourself miners since the strike made coal nearly unobtainable.

The first to die was 15-year-old Michael Phillips, who was buried after makeshift wooden props supporting a tunnel collapsed.

Henry Ellis, a 13-year-old painter, was killed while digging at another of the open seams which are scattered around Burnley's outskirts.

A special court inquiry has begun in an effort to determine why the boys were in the mines.

The Arizona Daily Star FINAL Edition

S. Ignores Rec Truce, Bombs Trails

SAIGON (AP) — A Viet Cong Tet cease-fire went into effect across South Vietnam Monday, but the United States ignored it and ordered a sixth successive day of heavy air attacks.

The Viet Cong had announced a 96-hour truce for the lunar new year celebration beginning at 1 a.m. Saigon time.

The allies declared their own shorter 24-hour cease-fire beginning at 2 a.m. Saigon time Monday, claiming that the Communist leaders had broken the truce.

Twelve hours before the Viet Cong cease-fire was scheduled to begin, a U.S. patrol helicopter was shot down in the capital, killing the pilot and another crew member.

There were no U.S. casualties on the ground, but the enemy troops shot down an observation helicopter trying to pinpoint positions for the gunships to attack.

Although Tet falls on Tuesday, the celebrations last the entire week and most government offices and businesses are closed for the better part of the week.

Cease-fires for holidays in the past have been meaningless, with scores of violations reported. It was during Tet 1969 that the Communist command launched its biggest offensive of the war, while 50 per cent of South Vietnamese troops were on leave.

Informants said U.S. air strikes would continue across South Vietnam until 6 p.m. Monday, when the allied truce is scheduled to begin. They said that during the 24-hour allied cease-fire, American bombers would be directed from targets in South Vietnam to attack enemy supply lines in Laos and Cambodia.

U.S. officials said they do not anticipate a major North Vietnamese and Viet Cong offensive until after Tet, pending the return of President Nixon's visit to China beginning next Monday.

The Central Intelligence Agency reported that air Force and Navy tactical fighter-squadrons flew 100 strikes against enemy supply lines and staging areas during the 24-hour period ending at dawn Sunday.

All but seven of the strikes were in the central highlands, against staging areas and infiltration routes leading from Laos and Cambodia, the command said. Despite the large number of strikes, few tangible results have been reported by the command.

Meanwhile in Vietnam, officials announced that Laotian government troops re-entered the town of Mueang Kaysi Sunday after pushing several Pathet Lao battalions north from Van Veng. The officials declined to say if the town is under full control, but it was reported by the government troops. The town fell to the Pathet Lao a week ago.

In Phnom Penh Sunday, the Cambodian high command reported that fighting broke out on the edge of the insurgent-occupied Angkor Wat and Angkor Thom temples amid rumors that Cambodian troops plan a pincer attack on the great air base.

The command spokesman said a Cambodian soldier was killed and nine were wounded in clashes and harassing attacks Saturday.

Ministers have claimed that miners' picketing of the country's main coal-fired power stations has been so adamant that a crisis has developed more quickly than expected.

Leaders of the National Union of Mineworkers went before the court of inquiry to state their case for a big pay increase.

High Court Judge Lord Wilberforce, who is heading the inquiry, said he hoped its verdict would be completed by the end of the week. And miners leader Lawrence Daly said satisfactory recommendations could be put to miners' union branches in two or three days.

But he warned the union might opt for a national ballot, which would delay a decision on a return to work for up to three weeks.

"The miners are determined to continue their strike action until the government and the coal industry have agreed to reasonable terms," he said.

The court's unusual Sunday meeting underscored the gravity of a situation that has put the nation's factories on half time and led to forecasts of an even more power cut.

S. Ignores Rec Truce, Bombs Trails

SAIGON (AP) — A Viet Cong Tet cease-fire went into effect across South Vietnam Monday, but the United States ignored it and ordered a sixth successive day of heavy air attacks.

The Viet Cong had announced a 96-hour truce for the lunar new year celebration beginning at 1 a.m. Saigon time.

The allies declared their own shorter 24-hour cease-fire beginning at 2 a.m. Saigon time Monday, claiming that the Communist leaders had broken the truce.

Twelve hours before the Viet Cong cease-fire was scheduled to begin, a U.S. patrol helicopter was shot down in the capital, killing the pilot and another crew member.

There were no U.S. casualties on the ground, but the enemy troops shot down an observation helicopter trying to pinpoint positions for the gunships to attack.

Although Tet falls on Tuesday, the celebrations last the entire week and most government offices and businesses are closed for the better part of the week.

Cease-fires for holidays in the past have been meaningless, with scores of violations reported. It was during Tet 1969 that the Communist command launched its biggest offensive of the war, while 50 per cent of South Vietnamese troops were on leave.

Informants said U.S. air strikes would continue across South Vietnam until 6 p.m. Monday, when the allied truce is scheduled to begin. They said that during the 24-hour allied cease-fire, American bombers would be directed from targets in South Vietnam to attack enemy supply lines in Laos and Cambodia.

U.S. officials said they do not anticipate a major North Vietnamese and Viet Cong offensive until after Tet, pending the return of President Nixon's visit to China beginning next Monday.

The Central Intelligence Agency reported that air Force and Navy tactical fighter-squadrons flew 100 strikes against enemy supply lines and staging areas during the 24-hour period ending at dawn Sunday.

All but seven of the strikes were in the central highlands, against staging areas and infiltration routes leading from Laos and Cambodia, the command said. Despite the large number of strikes, few tangible results have been reported by the command.

Meanwhile in Vietnam, officials announced that Laotian government troops re-entered the town of Mueang Kaysi Sunday after pushing several Pathet Lao battalions north from Van Veng. The officials declined to say if the town is under full control, but it was reported by the government troops. The town fell to the Pathet Lao a week ago.

In Phnom Penh Sunday, the Cambodian high command reported that fighting broke out on the edge of the insurgent-occupied Angkor Wat and Angkor Thom temples amid rumors that Cambodian troops plan a pincer attack on the great air base.

The command spokesman said a Cambodian soldier was killed and nine were wounded in clashes and harassing attacks Saturday.

Ministers have claimed that miners' picketing of the country's main coal-fired power stations has been so adamant that a crisis has developed more quickly than expected.

Leaders of the National Union of Mineworkers went before the court of inquiry to state their case for a big pay increase.

High Court Judge Lord Wilberforce, who is heading the inquiry, said he hoped its verdict would be completed by the end of the week. And miners leader Lawrence Daly said satisfactory recommendations could be put to miners' union branches in two or three days.

But he warned the union might opt for a national ballot, which would delay a decision on a return to work for up to three weeks.

"The miners are determined to continue their strike action until the government and the coal industry have agreed to reasonable terms," he said.

The court's unusual Sunday meeting underscored the gravity of a situation that has put the nation's factories on half time and led to forecasts of an even more power cut.

Preparing For Tet

Crewmen aboard the U.S. carrier Constellation load bombs onto aircraft for missions over South Vietnam, Cambodia and Laos. The ship was recently summoned back to the Gulf of Tonkin to combat a North Vietnamese offensive expected for the Lunar New Year (Tet) or possibly to combat with President Nixon's visit to Peking. (AP Wirephoto)