

THANKSGIVING DAY WAS QUIET IN THIS CITY

General Spirit of Rest Prevailed. Special Services Well Attended. Offices and Stores Closed

---

Thanksgiving Day was an exceedingly quiet one in this city, there being no excitement except the High School and University football game on the university campus. Most of the citizens spent the day quietly at home.

Throughout the afternoon the downtown districts were almost entirely deserted, the stores being closed and no business of any sort being transacted except by restaurants and saloons. The court house and postoffice were closed, the justices courts held no sessions, and everything was very quiet on court square.

At the services of the Protestant congregations held in the Baptist church there was a large attendance and an enjoyable exercise. The music was excellent, and Rev. Roberts, of the Congregational church, preached an eloquent and devout Thanksgiving sermon. The services at the Christian Science church were also well attended.

In accordance with the Thanksgiving spirit the prisoners in the city and county jail were given a better dinner than usual, although they did not get turkey and cranberries. A number of them were brought dinners by their families.

The general spirit of quietude seemed to affect the disorderly element as well as the more devout, as there were no disturbances which warranted arrests, despite egg nog and Tom and Jerry in numerous saloons. The police and constables were on duty as usual, but had nothing to do.
