TUESDAY IS SET FOR SIGNING OF LONDON TREATY

English Premier to Preside at Meeting; U. S. Group Will Leave at Once

ROBINSON IS PLEASED
Democratic Leader Declares Results of Conference of Great Value

LONDON, April 20.—(AP)—The heads of the delegations to the first great naval conference have approved the wording of the preamble to the London naval treaty, and are expected today to sign the treaty, there being no more to be done.

Approval by the Tokyo government was considered being to give the treaty its last minute touch in the arrangements for the final signing session at 10 a. m. on Tuesday, April 22.

It is expected that the treaty will be formally signed at 10 a. m. on Tuesday, thus permitting the American delegation to leave for home at the end of the conference.

Premier to Preside
Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald, who has been invited to preside at the signing of the treaty, is expected to arrive in London on Tuesday.

Col. Henry L. Robinson, American secretary of state, tonight labeled signing an important achievement of the conference, which will be broadcast from London tomorrow for the American delegation.

Meanwhile Senator Joseph T. Robinson of Arkansas had the telephone tonight. His address, coming at 8 o'clock from the Japanese leader in the United States, attracted more than usual interest in the American delegation.

Senator Robinson, beginning by outlining the primary objective of the American delegation, received many congratulations for the graphic and straightforward manner in which he outlined the position and results of the conference.

On Tuesday night, Senator David A. Reed of Pennsylvania, who is the American secretary of state, tonight labeled signing an important achievement of the conference, which will be broadcast from London tomorrow for the American delegation.
