

Powerful project

Construction could begin later this year on the SunZia Southwest Transmission Project, a 550-mile power line from Central New Mexico to Southern Arizona. The U.S. Bureau of Land Management just released its final environmental review of the project.

