BOY'S ATTEMPT TO SLAY FASCIST LEADER FAILS

Youthful Assailant Killed by Infuriated Mob as He Duce Rides On.

BENITO UNPERTURBED Halts Car for Few Moments, Then Continues on Way to Destination.

BOLOGNA, Italy, Oct. 31 (By Associated Press)—An 18-year-old youth who today attempted to shoot Benito Mussolini was himself stabbed and beaten to death by an infuriated mob.

Mussolini escaped injury. The assassin's bullet missed passing through the premier's chest by the fraction of an inch. It actually ripped both sides of his coat and cut the cash of the Order of St. Maurice and St. Lazarus.

The youth had pressed forward as Mussolini was seated in his automobile on leaving the stadium where he had attended the congress for the advancement of science and was ready to fire a second shot.

Carabinieri and fascists threw themselves on him as he was in the act of sending a second bullet at the premier.

Attacked and Killed

Within a minute or two of his attack on the Duce, the body of the youthful assailant was being dragged along, a crumpled and inert mass, by strong armed fascists through a screaming milling sea of humanity to his death.

After the police station, where the body was taken, 14 knife wounds were found and marks of strangling on his throat.

Mussolini remained calm and composed. His automobile halted for a few moments and then proceeded for the railway station. Before entering for Paris, his home town, he reviewed a battalion of sailors and addressed the officers. The premier reached Bologna last night. Early today he opened the Littoriale stadium, an immense structure to be devoted to all branches of sports, and late in the afternoon officiated at the opening of the congress for the advancement of science at the stadium. It was while leaving this place about 5:40 o'clock that the attempt against his life was made.

Praises His Troops

At the morning exercises the Duce was astride a charger. He wore the uniform of commander-in-chief of the national militia and was hailed vociferously. Advancing to the center of the Littoriale and addressing his beloved black shirts, he said:

"Every time I see the armed forces of the country in a battle formation, in perfect union, in a fraternity of spirit, in a common ideal, my first thought turns toward our king, supreme commander of all the forces on land and sea and in the air, and of the men of the militia.

"I desired that the celebration this year of the march on Rome by our army have given them the opportunity to see the Duce should be crowded at Bologna. The full and enthusiastic support to the Fascist government. That means, all of the people are prepared to follow me everywhere.

"Black shirts!" he Duce virtually shouted, his voice rising to a high pitch. "Put on your striae, raise high your rifles, so that the entire world can see that forecast of bayonets and feel the pulsations of your determined, and invincible."

It would be impossible to create a more dramatic setting. It was about 5:40 o'clock in the evening and the 50,000 persons who had assembled at the stadium stood behind lines of carabinieri as Mussolini passed.

The premier's car had entered the town thoroughfare, the Via Indipendenza, when a shot cracked above the roar of the cheering of the masses.

A dead silence, then all eyes were focussed on the youth who was bending forward with the thought was for Mussolini, and when the crowd saw the Duce calm and obviously unhurt, they closed like the jaws of a gigantic animal upon his assailant. Savage hands reached for him and he was bound and beaten and stabbed until life was extinct.

Great crowds blocked the path of the premier's automobile, almost overturning it in an attempt to approach close enough to find whether he was hurt. When a car finally was cleared the automobile proceeded rapidly to the station. There Mussolini showed not the slightest sign of nervousness.

HARRY HOUDINI, MAGICIAN, DIES

Famous Escape Artist Was Enemy of Spiritualists and Mediums.

DETROIT, Oct. 31 (By Associated Press)—Harry Houdini, the famous escape artist, whose adeptness at freeing himself from straightjackets, chains and cells, mystified audiences in all parts of the world, died after a second surgical attempt had been made to save his life from the effects of peritonitis.

Houdini was operated upon last Monday for appendicitis.

Although it was known the magician was ill when he arrived here eight days ago, the seriousness of his condition was not learned until he collapsed at the end of his opening performance.

WAS NOTED FOR HIS MYSTERY ESCAPES

NEW YORK, Oct. 31 (By Associated Press)—Harry Houdini, the world famous escape artist, who died in Detroit today, was born in Appleton, Wis., April 6, 1874, the son of Rabbi Mayer Samuel Weiss.

Houdini came before the American public as an exposé of frauds perpetrated by so-called spirit mediums. He held that the phenomena produced by professed mediums of various kinds, hypnotism, mesmerism and fakirs were all spurious. He exposed hundreds of professional mediums and offered $10,000 to any medium who could produce phenomena which he could not reproduce by relying solely upon his muscular strength and agility, his physical endurance and his knowledge of mechanics. He never was called upon to pay the reward.

Against Spiritualists

He kept up an unrelenting attack on spiritualists, and in Sir Oliver Lodge in particular. He wrote a book to expose "Margery," the medium who won the award of the Scientific American, charging that the committee which made the award did not take proper precautions. He aided the police of New York City in putting a number of mediums out of business and gave a course at the police academy here on the discovery of frauds.

His first appearance as a public entertainer was at the age of eight, when he performed on the high trapeze with a circus troupe. Because of his mother's objections he was brought back home and apprenticed to a locksmith. Almost at once he turned his attention to the business of opening locks without keys.

A handcuffed prisoner brought into Appleton by a sheriff who had lost the keys to the handcuffs, was the occasion for the discovery of the trick of opening of handcuffs which Houdini said was known only to him, his wife and the prisoner. After an unsuccessful attempt to appear in vaudeville Houdini scraped together enough money to go to Europe, where he made his reputation. When he returned he was able to command 50 times the price he first asked for his act. Besides performing various so-called magical tricks, Houdini was adept in releasing himself from almost any kind of confinement that could be devised.

Library of Magic

He freed himself after being manacled and shut up in a box. He escaped from straightjackets. He freed himself while hung from a necker in manacles and a straightjacket. He suffered himself to be confined in a coffin under water. Although he challenged any man to perform these feats of escape, no man ever duplicated one of them.

Houdini's library here is said to be the most complete library of magic in the world. He was the author of a number of books on magic and was nine times elected president of the Society of American Magicians.

BANKERS' JURY FAILS TO AGREE IS SENT TO BED

Panel in Land-Brooks Case Apparently Deadlocked Late Last Night.

TO RETURN AT 9 A. M.

Judge Sawtelle Releases the Jurymen for Sleep After Long Sunday Job.

Twenty-nine hours of deliberations failed to bring agreement for the jury in the case of Webster H. Land and Byrd Brooks, former officers of the defunct Tucson National bank, and Judge W. H. Sawtelle of the U. S. district court, permitted the panel to retire for sleep last night at 9 o'clock.

The jury will resume its deliberations this morning shortly after 9 o'clock. It was announced last night, when they left the court to go to the hotel, apparently deadlocked.

The jury commenced its deliberations at 4:10 Saturday afternoon, and after spending the night at the Santa Rita hotel, resumed its sitting at 9 o'clock yesterday morning.

At 11 o'clock it sent word to Judge Sawtelle that it would like to hear again his instructions regarding the question of reasonable doubt regarding the testimony of R. W. Ogil, assistant cashier and general bookkeeper of the Tucson National bank.

So a quiet Sabbath morning session was held in the United States district court, where the two defendants, George R. Darnell, their attorney, and John B. Wright, United States attorney, who represented the government, Judge Sawtelle, who presided, C. R. McFall, clerk of the court, and W. H. Mills, deputy United States marshal, completed the official picture.

H. C. Nixon, the court reporter, read to the jury the passages of Judge Sawtelle's charge that the jury wished again to hear. At the conclusion of the reading, Judge Sawtelle asked the finders of fact whether there was anything else, and when he received a negative reply, declared a recess.

In the instructions given to the jury Saturday afternoon, Judge Sawtelle said in part:

"In the case before you, you have the evidence of the defendants' acts, and their explanation of them. If you find that they made any of the false entries charged, knowingly, you must determine with what intent they did it. From the acts themselves, from their natural and legitimate explanations, from their own explanations, and from all the other evidence before you.

"The intent with which an act is committed being but a mental state of the parties accused, direct proof of it is not required, nor is it necessary that the evidence be generally derived from and established by all the facts and circumstances attending the doing of the act complained of, as disclosed by the evidence. In order for you to determine in this case the question of the intent, you will look at the evidence, oral and documentary in the case, and by documentary I mean the letters, writings, and other documents received and admitted in evidence, . . . and to all the facts and circumstances in connection therewith.

"It matters not how clearly the circumstances point to the guilt of the defendants, still, if they are reasonably explainable on a theory which excludes guilt, then it cannot be said that the facts in the case are sufficient to satisfy the jury beyond a reasonable doubt of the defendants' guilt. In other words, before there can be a conviction, all of the facts proved must be not only consistent with and point to the guilt of the defendants, but the facts must be inconsistent with their innocence."

General Instructions

The judge then gave general instructions to the jury, emphasizing the credibility of witnesses, weight of evidence, contradictions, burden of proof, admissions, circumstantial evidence, adding:

"The law permits a defendant, at his own request, to testify in his own behalf. The defendants have availed themselves of this right. Their testimony is before you, and you must determine how far it is credible.

"The deep personal interest which they have in the result of this case may be considered by you in weighing their evidence, and in determining how far or to what extent, if at all, it is worthy of credit."

Referring to the testimony as to the character of the defendants for honesty and integrity, Judge Sawtelle said:

"You should consider such evidence, together with all other evidence in the case, in arriving at a verdict, not only where a doubt exists as to such a defendant's guilt, but for the purpose of creating a reasonable doubt thereof, but, if from all the evidence in this case, including the evidence of his or their good character, you are satisfied of his or their guilt beyond a reasonable doubt, such evidence of good character will not avail the defendant or defendants as a defense, or entitle him or them to an acquittal."

Negatives Burned by 'Mystery' Fire in Aimee Hearing

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 31.—(By Associated Press)—The sixth batch of documents connected with the Aimee Semple McPherson criminal conspiracy case disappeared here today.

This collection of exhibits, negative films of papers which have figured in the preliminary hearing of the evangelist, went up in smoke when a fire of unknown origin today invaded the photographic room of the Los Angeles Times.

Some of these pictures destroyed today in negative form figured in a hot court battle last week when the defense under took to prove by a chirography expert that originals of written papers credited to Mrs. McPherson by the prosecution had been retouched.

Today's fire followed the close of evidence taken in preliminary last week. Arguments will be heard by Judge Blake next Wednesday. The accused evangelist preached her usual Sunday sermon today to a crowded temple before the fire.

The case was confined principally to caustic and humorous remarks concerning the trunk seized recently in New York.

G. O. P. SENATE MARGIN NARROW

But Underlying Strength of Republican Party Little Changed in Off Year.

(This is the second of a series of three dispatches forecasting the outcome of the congressional elections of next Tuesday. They are written by David Lawrence after a tour of the principal states in which active campaign contests have developed and after an analysis of confidential reports received by telegraph from all states in the last 24 hours.)

By DAVID LAWRENCE

WASHINGTON, Oct. 30.—(By Associated Press)—Although the margin of Republican strength in the senate will be cut down in the election next Tuesday, the underlying strength of the Republican party in those states in which three-cornered races or local factionalism did not develop can hardly be said to be much changed from 1924. The pluralities and majorities will be less because the registration is always lower in an off year.

Detailed reports from the principal states in which contests have occurred lead the writer to the following forecast:

New York.—The improvement of Gov. Al Smith's chances in the last three days of the campaign will have a noticeable effect on the senatorial contest. The Christian vote is large and Senator Wadsworth has a real battle. If the New York City Democrat vote solidly for Robert F. Wagner, the senatorial Republican will lose. His only hope is that the "wet" Democrats will pull him through, and that is not likely. The New York delegation in the house will show relatively little change.

Massachusetts.—The improvement of Mr. Butler's chances in the unexpected term of Henry Cabot Lodge, is having a close feud. The Republican have shown apprehension which has tended to solidify their ranks and will bring out the vote. Republican votes have added David Walsh, but the chances are that he will not have this support and that Butler will win.

Connecticut.—Senator Hiram Bingham has an easy time of it and will win by an overwhelming majority. The state is in a prosperous condition and the Democrats have a relatively small proportion of the total vote.

Pennsylvania.—Representative William S. Vare will be elected by a big majority, but it will be much less than it would have been if the exposure of campaign expenditures in the primary campaign had not influenced many voters. It is predicted that the total vote will be less than a million, and that William B. Wilson, Democrat, will get about 300,000 of this, but his support from the dry sections of the state may furnish a surprise as to his total vote.

Maryland.—Senator Weller, Republican, is righting hip and tuck with Colonel Tydings and indications are that the latter will win.

New Hampshire.—Senator Moses, Republican, will be elected. There will be no change in the Republican delegation in the house of representatives.

Vermont.—Senator Dale, Republican, will win, but the personal popularity of the Democratic nominee, James E. Kennedy, will cut down the normal majority.

Ohio.—Senator Frank B. Willis, Republican, looks like a sure winner and there will be relatively little change in the delegation in the house. Willis will have a small margin and will be aided by the votes from the rural districts, as the cities will support former Senator Pomerehne, Democrat, and "wet," rather heavily. (Copyright, 1926)

BOTH POLITICAL CAMPS EXPECT TO WIN TUESDAY

Democrats Forecast Revolt Against Republicanism in the Senate.

17 SEATS IN BALANCE

G. O. P. Brands Optimism of Opponent as Halloween Hallucination.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 31.—(By Associated Press)—Another nationwide campaign began to pass into history today as party leaders packed their political fishing tackle away in the attic and sought to compute the comparative size of the respective catches that will be weighed out at the polls on Tuesday.

The forecasts issued tonight from the national party headquarters those of the Democrats were the more sweeping. The party leaders claimed that less than a Democratic landslide was simply administering the ordinary off-year rebuke, but constituting an actual revolution against Republican rule.

These statements the Republicans dismissed as nothing but a Democratic hallucination, a sort of a Halloween hoboism that would disappear after election day.

Democratic hopes of winning a majority in the senate hinge on the chances party leaders think they have in a group of widely-scattered states, where Democratic campaign ammunition has been spent most freely during the summer. These states are Arizona, Colorado, Idaho, Illinois, Missouri, Nevada, New York, Ohio, Oklahoma, Oregon, Utah and Washington. Of these 17 states, all held now by Republicans, the Democrats must win nine to have a clear senatorial majority.

Even the most sanguine partisans cannot hope to win more than five of these states, and they are certain to fall in the Democratic column. They figure that an even break elsewhere is all they need.

The Republican answer to this morning is that while a majority of these states may be normally Democratic and might in an off year return Democratic majorities, the others are Republican and taken state by state, can be expected to go that way in 1926.

The house situation is not so easily diagnosed, all of the 435 members, except four in Maine who were chosen in an election in September, must get credentials at the polls Tuesday to gain a majority. The Democrats must combine 215 seats to win, but they are not so easily diagnosed, all of the 435 members, except four in Maine who were chosen in an election in September, must get credentials at the polls Tuesday to gain a majority.

In one respect this campaign may be in political history as one of the most unusual in the history of the campaigns of all time.

In nearly every instance the issues on which the decision will hinge have been handled as local issues, and national party management has been forced to take the Republican line, and outlining the channels along which the fight was made. Thus it transpires that in regard to the two questions which at the outset looked most promising, as national issues, the Republican party headquarters have said a word. For where these questions have figured at all they have been handled as local questions, with the Republican candidates wet in one state and dry in another, with the Democrats fighting the court in one district and supporting it across the line in the next.

But in the main, questions of local origin as well as local application have provided the fighting points of the state campaigns. In New York, it was pure milk; in Maryland the Conowingo power project. In Indiana charges of a corrupt Republican-Ku Klux Klan deal backed up an unexpected fracas while Illinois public utilities campaign contributions started a quarrel which eventually led President Coolidge to issue a proclamation of neutrality.

If Washington is interested in any of the exposure of campaign expenditures, it is that in Massachusetts. Not only is that state the President's own bailiwick, but his personal friend, Senator Butler, whom he elevated to the chairmanship of the Republican national committee, is a candidate against another figure well known in the capital, former Senator Walsh. Besides, the wet and dry question has been a power in the campaign, and a Massachusetts will provide a fancy exhibit in the accumulation of evidence now being scanned by official Washington.

PROBE VIEWED AS BOOMERANG TO CAMERON AS TOWLES BARES INSTRUCTIONS TO POSTMASTERS

Hayden Spends Only $4288 to Date for His Campaign.

VAN DYKE IS MISSING

Senator King Grills Revenue Collector for Three Hours.

(By Staff Correspondent)

PHOENIX, Oct. 31.—(Special to Arizona Daily Star).—Although without after witness has been called and each of the subjects to a severe grilling by C. R. Holt, attorney for Senator Ralph H. Cameron, not one scintilla of evidence has yet been produced to show that any kind of a conspiracy exists among large copper and power interests who, Cameron claims, are endeavoring to defeat him. In fact, the talk about Phoenix is that Cameron never dreamed that Senator Reed would act so quickly in sending Senator King to conduct the investigation, and at no time did the Cameron forces want an investigation unless Cameron was defeated.

The Cameron camp is now beginning to show some signs of panic, as the unexpected counter offensive on the part of the local Democrats will bring John Van Dyke and Hoyal Smith to the stand to tell what they know about Cameron expenses. Although Van Dyke was in Phoenix Saturday night, he could not be found Sunday morning.

"Mr. Marshal," said Senator King, when told that Van Dyke could not be found, addressing the United States marshal, "you will send a deputy to search for Mr. Van Dyke until he is found."

"And Mr. Hoyal Smith is in Bisbee," replied the marshal, "and he said he got up here for a couple of days."

"Tell Mr. Smith he must proceed immediately," Senator King ordered, "it does not take two days to come here from Bisbee."

Hayden Denies Slush

"I want to give Senator Cameron every bit of cooperation I can in getting his witnesses here," the Utah solon added.

Carl Hayden himself was the principal witness of the morning session. He testified that he had made up the $4288.75 in his campaign so far, including the primary election, and of this amount he had contributed $2650 to the Democratic state central committee to be used for the benefit of all candidates on the ticket. He testified that he had received $2500 from the national Democratic campaign committee, $200 from Frank Hereford, of Tucson; $500 from Sam Applewhite, of Douglas, and a number of small contributions that made up the balance, as well as some from his own pocketbook. He denied that he had anything to do with the publication in the Los Angeles Times and Prescott Courier of an article attacking Senator Cameron. He said he had seen the article after it had been written but that he had advised against publishing it.

"Who is this Will Irwin, the author of the article mentioned?" asked Senator King.

"He is the man who exposed Charles Forbes of the Veterans' bureau, who is now in the federal penitentiary," replied Hayden. The audience roared with laughter.

Hayden denied receiving any money from James Douglas, but said that Douglas had contributed $1000 to the state central committee to spend on Governor Hunt, himself. Hayden denied that he knew any Arizona copper companies that were conspiring to defeat Cameron, but said that he had reason to believe that some were helping Cameron and working against himself, because he opposed the copper tariff. Hayden admitted that he had been censured very seriously by California interests for opposing and defeating the Swing-Johnson bill in congress. He said he had no paid workers of any kind, nor did he know of any friends who were employed workers.

J. S. Douglas won the applause of the audience listening to the senatorial investigation here this evening when he gave frank clear answers to the questions asked and freely admitted that he had spent something like $35,000 in his effort to break the Hunt machine in the primaries, and that he had been licked in the fight. When first asked by Senator King how much he had contributed to the Ellinwood campaign he said he "didn't know" and that the amount was "too much" and "more than he expected." The greater part of it he declared had been spent on advertising in newspapers. He said he contributed about $15,000 to the campaign of his son, Lewis Douglas.

On the basis of this testimony the Cameron managers endeavored to link him up with Carl Hayden in the present senatorial fight. He admitted that he had contributed $1000 to the present Democratic campaign for use by the state committee as it saw fit and that he had made some small donations to the campaign. He said he was working for his son and Carl Hayden.

DOUGLAS CALLS CAMERON CROOK

Admits Giving $35,000 to Gubernatorial Fund in Primary.

PHOENIX, Oct. 31.—(By Associated Press)—James Douglas, Arizona capitalist, testified at the Arizona slush fund hearing here tonight that his contribution to the campaign of E. E. Ellinwood, Democratic gubernatorial candidate, for the gubernatorial election in the September primary was "possibly $50,000" and "more than $35,000."

He denied having entered into any specific agreements to support Congressman Carl Hayden for the United States senate. His contributions to the Democratic state central committee in behalf of Hayden amounted to $1,000, he said.

A sharp exchange between Senator Ralph H. Cameron, who ordered charges against the Democratic state central committee, and Douglas occurred when counsel for Cameron asked why he, Douglas, was supporting Hayden and opposing Cameron.

"Became hate Ralph for a crook," returned Douglas.

Cameron was on his feet in an instant.

"Mr. Chairman, I resent that word," he said.

"You can go 'lump it,'" retorted Douglas.

"I'll put this chair over your head," muttered Cameron.

"Like you will," Douglas came back with a threatening gesture with his fist.

PAGEANT FIRST DAY TO BE EDUCATIONAL

PHOENIX, Oct. 31 (By Associated Press).—Friday, the first day of the Arizona historical pageant at the Casa Grande ruins, will be featured as "Educational and Governors' day." It was announced today by the local office of the pageant association. The pageant will be given three performances, next Friday, Saturday and Sunday evenings.

Arrangements have been made to provide accommodations on this day for a large crowd of high school and university students who will attend the pageant from Phoenix, Tucson and other Arizona cities. Invitations to the governors of nine western states have been sent by Governor Hunt asking them to be his guests at the Friday performance of the pageant.

CAR FULL OF WOMEN ROLLS FOUR TIMES

NOGALES, Ariz., Oct. 31 (Special to Arizona Daily Star).—An Oakland sedan, driven by one of the delegates to the convention of the Southern Arizona Federation of Women's Clubs, left the road at a sharp turn just the other side of the Zinsmeister guest ranch between Patagonia and Nogales, turned over three times and landed on its four wheels.

Besides the woman driving the car, there were four young girls who gave a specialty dance at the convention. None of the occupants of the car was injured. The car was in such a condition that the driver was able to drive it back onto the road and to Nogales.

Cameron and Douglas Clash at Hearing as Old Enemies.

SESSION TO CONTINUE

Adjourns Until Today for Want of More Witnesses.

PHOENIX, Oct. 31 (By Associated Press).—The slush fund hearing being conducted here by Senator William H. King of Utah adjourned abruptly at 10:15 o'clock tonight for want of more witnesses. Senator King announced that the hearing would be resumed at 9 o'clock tomorrow morning at which time, he cautioned counsel for both sides, subpoenaed witnesses must be present.

In an endeavor to connect James S. Douglas, Arizona copper magnate and sworn political enemy of Ralph H. Cameron, who professed the slush fund charges against the Democratic State Central committee with the alleged conspiracy against Cameron, counsel for Senator Cameron interrogated Douglas at length upon the subject of his contributions to the senatorial campaign of Representative Carl Hayden, Cameron's opponent in Tuesday's election, and to the campaigns of other candidates on the state ticket. At one point during the interrogation, Thomas Croff, member of Cameron's counsel, asked Douglas why he was opposing the Republican senatorial candidate in the general election.

Calls Cameron a Crook

"Because I hate Ralph Cameron for a crook," shot back Douglas. "Cameron jumped to his feet, Mr. Chairman," he said, addressing Senator King, "I resent that word." "You can take it and stew it," retorted Douglas.

"I'll put this chair over your head," this the Republican senator's reply in a low tone.

"Like you will," Douglas came back.

Sensor King ended the episode by pointing out to counsel, and cautioning Douglas that order must be maintained in the federal district courtroom where the hearing is being conducted.

For the first time since the close of the primary election campaign, Douglas' approximate contribution to the campaign of E. E. Ellinwood was made public. Interrogated by Senator King, Douglas said he did not know how much he had contributed toward the campaign money expended for Ellinwood's defeated Democratic gubernatorial candidate, but that he knew it was "too much." Henderson Stockton, campaign manager for Ellinwood, had charge of all expenditures, Douglas said.

Expenditures Told

"How much did you contribute to the campaign of Lewis W. Douglas," he was asked. Lewis, his son, won out in the primary for the Democratic nomination for congress.

"Not nearly so much as I did for Mr. Ellinwood," he replied, "no more than $10,000."

"Well, how much did you contribute toward Mr. Ellinwood's campaign?" Croff asked. "Ten thousand," perhaps.

"Well over $10,000 all right. I tried to forget the amount."

"Nearer $15,000 than $10,000?" "Yes."

Subsequent interrogation drew the reply from the witness that he had spent "over $35,000" and "possibly $50,000."

Carl Hayden's campaign benefited to the extent of about $1,000 through contributions of Douglas. It was brought out. This was given to the Democratic state central committee. Douglas also testified he gave $500 to Sam Applewhite, his personal secretary, to give to Hayden, and another $300 went to a precinct committee in Phoenix in the interests of the Hayden and Lewis Douglas candidacies. Tom Sparks, who was "rustling" against Cameron, received between $250 and $350.

Douglas said he had sent $3,200 to Phoenix to be used in furthering his son's candidacy in the general election. Part of this, he understood, was to be used to pay bills incurred in the primary campaign. Douglas said he also was to contribute money to get out the vote in Tucson and Cochise county.

Denies Influencing Papers

Cameron counsel failed to elicit from the witness an affirmative answer when asked whether he did not oppose Senator Cameron's candidacy.
