The Five Sullivan Brothers Were Never Forgotten

5 Brothers Went Down With Juneau

On Feb. 15, 1942, the five Sullivan brothers, Frank, 23; Madison (Matt), 20; Robert, 20; John Joseph, 19; and Albert, 18, were killed at sea aboard the 17,440-ton
U.S. S. Juneau, a heavy cruiser, in the Bering Sea, during the Battle of the Bering Sea. The Sullivan brothers, who were all from Waterloo, Iowa, were part of a naval expedition that was sent to the Aleutian Islands to engender the Japanese forces.

3-Part Flood Plan Would Be Practical

Editorials

Strong opposition has been raised in the Waterloo Flood Control plan by the Corps of Engineers, but it is expected that the plan will be approved.

Primary objections to the plan are the proposed dam on the Fourth Street bridge and the high walls which would impound 400,000 tons of water in order to provide protection for the city.

Moreover, the Corps of Engineers' plan would not make an impact on the flood danger. Mayor Ed Jernigan, who led a demonstration effort to evidence public opinion on the project, felt that a good effort will be made to have additional flood control measures at the Corps of Engineers' plan to be executed.

This local effort was used in combination with swamp and drainage programs to give Waterloo substantial protection against floods.

The Corps of Engineers, in their study of the Cedar River basin, found that about 5,000 acres would be flooded and that the dam would give little area relief of flood damage. But they found that if the water was impounded at least 500,000 acres would be kept in check.

Family Tried To Keep Going

Every day "Sullivan," a 13-year-old dog who was a favorite of the Sullivan family, went down to the river each day to visit the spot where the brothers were lost. He would lie on the banks of the river, looking for a sign of life.
