

Civil Defense Meeting Held At Iowa Falls

(COURIER NEWS SERVICE) IOWA FALLS — A preliminary meeting in a stepped-up civil defense planning program was held at the city hall Monday evening. Representatives of 15 organizations attended. Joe Brady, a local postal employe, was in charge of the meeting.

The first phase of the program includes getting together and talking over the problems involved in providing fallout shelters; also, volunteers making a preliminary survey of buildings in the community which might be suitable for community fall-out shelters.

After that is completed, Army engineers will come in and decide which of the buildings are suitable. After that is done, signs would be posted throughout town directing people to the shelters.

Iowa Falls is the only place in Iowa where such a plan is to be initiated now. If it proves to be satisfactory it will be tried out in other communities.

In form, veining and aspect the ginkgo tree resembles the maiden-hair fern. However, the ginkgo has no close relatives. Distant kin are the cycads, a genus of widely distributed tropical trees.
