

Traffic Police Film Bad Actors Cameras Record Actions of Drunks

TOPEKA (AP)—Movie strips of persons arrested as drunken drivers are becoming effective weapons of the Topeka Police Department.

Still in the experimental stage, the process has not been used as evidence in the trial of a case, but it already has been the clincher that won a plea of guilty in several cases, according to Capt. John Dillon, head of the Topeka traffic division.

In addition Capt. Dillon said, traffic officers have strips on about 25 drivers in reserve in case their cases do reach the jury trial stage.

THE MOVIES are taken as the man is booked, with the person having full knowledge the pictures are being taken, according to Lt. Fred Feaker, public relations officer of the department.

The sequence follows such reactions as the finger-to-the-nose test, walking a line, lighting a cigarette, fumbling for the drivers' license from the billfold or knee bends.

"We've had several pleas after the man calls us next morning, asks what happened and is told, among other things, that we have a movie of him at the station showing he was flying pretty high," Feaker said.

THERE IS NO problem of getting pictures of drunks, Capt. Dillon stated. "Drunks just love to have their pictures taken—they like to show off."

Several test showings of the films have been made to judges and prosecuting officials and all seem in agreement that the strips can be introduced in court, Capt. Dillon said.

There is the possibility, however that admissibility as evidence will be challenged so Topeka police are not building their drunk driving cases solely on the film strips, Feaker said.

"It is just another tool in nailing down the case."
