All's well with Moore's Water Well Service

By TODD GLASSCOCK

James Lindley knows water is life, and he knows how to find it.

As owner of Moore's Water Well Service in Mineral Wells, Lindley has put in 15 years of digging wells throughout Palo Pinto and Parker counties.

"Water's very precious," he said. "We've got to have it."

Bill Moore started the business 35 years ago, Lindley said, and the Moore name has a reputation for quality service, which Lindley has upheld since he bought the company when Moore retired.

They dig 100-120 wells annually throughout the area, he said.

Around-the-clock operations are managed by Lindley, his son James Lindley Jr., Troy McCord, Erica Shay and, of course, shop dogs Jake and Gus.

"We've got two service trucks to provide service continuously," Lindley Sr. said.

They hope by providing 24-hour service, people won't be without water for too long, Lindley said.

The demand for wells is pretty high in the area, he said. "We've got a steady backlog. We're very blessed. We've been blessed with lots of work."

While many customers are in rural areas, ranches and farms, in particular, the company services both commercial and residential properties anywhere within the area. Moore saw quite a bit of business inside the city limits of Mineral Wells a few years back when surface water was growing scarce because of a long drought.

One well customer then was home improvement retailer Sutherlands, which needed the well primarily water plants in its outdoor nursery.

It takes about half a day to dig a well, Lindley said.

Too make sure the water source is plentiful, Lindley witches, or dowses, the area where the well is to be dug.

Along with digging wells, Moore's Water Well Service provides testing, water filtration, submersible pumps and pressure tanks, as wells as maintenance and repair. They also service windmills.

The key to quality service, as much as anything, is keeping a family-like atmosphere, said Erica Shay.

"We watch out for each other," she said.
