87 monkeypox cases so far in Minnesota

MONDAY, AUGUST 15 – Minnesota health officials on Thurs- day reported 87 confirmed cases of monkeypox in the state, as they offered an update on a viral infection that has aroused con- cern around the globe.

The state has had fewer cases so far than Michigan (108) but more than Wisconsin’s 43 and low- er than Illinois’s 87. The CDC said Minnesota hasn’t yet reported any cases of monkeypox among children.

Most of Minnesota’s cases have come in the metropolitan area, and most are in men, the Minnesota Health Department said. MINNEAPOLIS — Democrats on Thursday accused a Republic- an-endorsed candidate for the Minnesota Senate of condoning political violence, which he said about the need for “voting with bullets.”

The purpose of the statement I made was the degree to which they weren’t being listened to,” Lowell told the crowd. “So, part of those three, in this particular set of terms, is voting with the ballot. But we have to vote with bullets. Because at the end of the day, when people don’t believe that their elections are stable, they don’t believe that police will protect them, they stop using the democratic, or any kind, method. And so we have to bring back faith, and then we have to do some things."
